

Chapter 1871 Beth

Trevor was shocked to hear that the mysterious cargo was from Glareder.

Was this matter really related to Mobius? What was Mobius up to this time?

Head lowered, Trevor paced back and forth, deep in thought. He thought about several possibilities but discarded each one by one.

He was unable to determine Mobius' motive at the moment. To make matters worse, there were no additional clues for now.

Because of that, Trevor couldn't figure out what the mysterious cargo was, and what Mobius' true motives were.

When Trevor was lost in thought, a nurse approached Trevor with a beaming face and said excitedly, "Divine Doctor, the patient you brought here, Luisa, has regained consciousness!"

Upon hearing this, Trevor immediately stopped thinking about the matter at hand and said goodbye to Lennon. Then, he hurried to Luisa's ward.

Luisa was finally awake.

Trevor's heart was beating fast. With a look of concern on his face, he quickly approached Luisa and asked, "Are you alright? Do you feel any discomfort?"

Luisa let out a light cough and replied weakly, "I'm fine. I just have a slight headache and I'm a little dizzy. Maybe... Maybe I still need some rest."

Trevor's heart ached and he held Luisa's hand tightly. He was completely preoccupied with her condition, and couldn't think of the mysterious cargo right now.

Trevor stayed with Luisa for a while.

Then suddenly, the hospital director walked into the ward and said with a friendly smile, "Divine Doctor, although Miss Wright's condition has been successfully stabilized, she still needs further treatment. We would like you to perform a second surgery on her while allowing other doctors to observe and learn from you. Can you do that?"

Of course, Trevor was willing to share his medical expertise. Just when he was about to agree to the request, someone barged into the ward.

It was an extravagantly dressed middle-aged woman. She entered the ward with an arrogant air and pointed at Trevor.

"Are you the so-called Divine Doctor they're talking about? You don't even look the part. Hurry up and treat my daughter. Don't dawdle. If anything happens to my daughter, you will pay heavily for it. This hospital really baffles me. The doctors are all useless, and we have to rely on a little brat like you!"

The hospital director was furious at the woman's words, but he dared not voice his anger. After all, he couldn't afford to offend the Wright family. He turned to Trevor and said in a low voice, "This is Beth. She is Mr. Wright's wife and Miss Wright's mother."

Trevor was infuriated by Beth's arrogance and he replied disdainfully, "You really think too highly of yourself! You seem to lack even basic manners. You better leave here."

However, Beth found absolutely nothing wrong with her behavior. She therefore did not change her superior airs and continued with arrogance, "Trying to act up, huh? Listen, brat, the only reason we asked you to treat Nola is because we value your skills. If it weren't for the hospital director praising your medical skills, I wouldn't even glance at you!"

Lying on the bed, Luisa couldn't bear to see Trevor being insulted and she snapped angrily, "Who do you think you're giving orders to? He's not a hospital doctor and as such, he has no obligation to save your daughter's life. With an attitude as bad as yours, you can just expect to get your daughter's corpse soon."

Beth didn't get angry at Luisa's words. Instead, she smirked and looked at Trevor coldly.

"You two are singing the same tune. I guess you're just after the money, right? Hurry up and treat my daughter. Don't worry, if you cure her, you'll earn a lot of money, nothing to compare with your current meager earnings!"

Luisa was stunned. This woman was simply unreasonable. Furious, Luisa angrily retorted, "Who cares about your meager money? Do you think you're the only wealthy person in this world? I am the CEO of two cosmetics companies. I definitely have far more money than you can
