

Chapter 1204 Fake Rich

Trevor put down the teaspoon, sat upright, and said to Wade, "I didn't know you have huge assets at such a young age."

Wade took it as a compliment, making him more confident and arrogant.

"Well, not really. My status may seem too high for an average person like you. But among the rich people, my assets are just numbers and don't matter much to them."

Trevor flashed a meaningful smile.

"Even so. You are still way out of most people's league. Your outfit today must have cost a fortune. How expensive is it? Is it okay to tell us the price?"

Wade's smile froze. He had only rented the suit he was wearing, so he didn't know how much its market price was.

Composing himself, he cleared his throat and said dryly, "I don't usually divulge the prices of my things, but you look really interested, so I'll tell you. This Canali suit cost about a hundred thousand."

Hiding his smirk, Trevor took a sip of his coffee and said nothing.

A hint of amusement was evident in his eyes.

The double-breasted woolen Canali suit cost about a hundred thousand?

Trevor wanted to laugh.

He had seen the suit before, and its price was only between fifteen and seventeen thousand.

Unless customized, men's suits were usually not that expensive compared to women's dresses.

The expensive ones in a man's wardrobe were usually the accessories like collar needles, pens, cufflinks, and wristwatches.

If Wade got the price wrong, it could mean he was faking rich.

Trevor looked at Doris' uncle and aunt, who rolled their eyes at him smugly.

He couldn't help but feel sorry for them.

They looked utterly convinced that Wade was rich.

Trevor returned his gaze to Wade and asked, "About a hundred thousand? That's pretty costly. Do you remember the exact price?"

Caught off guard, Wade shifted on his seat and looked away slightly.

Doris' uncle glared at Trevor and snarled, "Wade has loads of money to spend. A rich person like him doesn't usually ask for the price when he buys things. He wouldn't remember the exact price! You bumpkin, why do you keep asking questions? You seem so interested about the price when you don't even have money. His suit costs about a hundred thousand. Can you afford one?"

Trevor only flashed an amused smile.

Sky Film and Television Company was doing pretty well recently. Even without the support of the Sanderson family, he had more than enough money and assets under his name.

Spending a hundred thousand on a suit was nothing to him.

Maintaining his smile, Trevor opened the topic.

"Well, I just saw in the news recently that someone is pretending to be rich to swindle money. It's said to be a new scamming method."

Doris's heart skipped a beat in alarm.

Others might view Trevor as an insignificant person, but Doris knew he was sent by Klein's headquarters.

What he said seemed irrelevant, but she knew it was a piece of valuable inside information.

Doris' gaze darted at Wade, and her eyes narrowed.

She had a feeling he was a swindler. Wanting to save her relatives, she butted in and commented, "I've heard about that too. I'm worried you'll fall victim to this scheme. You have to be more discerning and protect yourselves from scammers."

Wade didn't expect the turn-out and contested, "What are you implying by that?"

Doris' uncle and aunt looked displeased and reacted more strongly.

They stood up in a huff and darted a stern look at Doris.

Her aunt was the first to reprimand her. "Doris! Do you know what you're talking about? Are you teaming up with this man to offend Wade like this? Wade is a good man. He is no swindler! You better apologize to him now! That was so disrespectful of you!"

Face red with anger, her uncle argued loudly, "Our investment in Wade's fund brought us substantial returns. We had good profits! Have you seen my gold watch? I bought it from the profits we earned from the investment! It's not right to accuse someone without solid evidence, Doris, especially a good person like Wade! This fake boyfriend of yours knows nothing! How dare he imply that Wade is a swindler when he looks more like one?*
