Chapter 166: Someone Wants to Hack Lu Jingye's Personal Computer

Her villa's underground basement had been undergoing construction for several days. As a result, the courtyard had accumulated some soil and tools that were yet to be cleaned up.

The housekeeper immediately passed down orders to the servants.

"Clean up the kitchen and fill up whatever is lacking. The few of you..."

...

Zi Yi finally asked the housekeeper after he was done. "How many days will we be staying here?"

The housekeeper was momentarily stunned and hastily smiled. "Miss Zi, we should be staying here for two to three days."

Zi Yi nodded and asked, "When workers come during the daytime, will we also be staying here?"

"We can return to the villa during the day."

Zi Yi stared at the housekeeper's face for two seconds before she nodded and headed for the backyard.

The housekeeper immediately tagged behind. "Miss Zi, the servants, and I will be staying in the guest rooms in the front yard. If you require anything, you can directly call my number."

"Ok."

When she entered the living room, it was clearly cleaned in advance. Even refreshments were also prepared.

Zi Yi glanced at the housekeeper.

His expression was as per usual and she could not discern anything.

Zi Yi said, "I'm going back to rest."

After which, she headed upstairs.

The housekeeper only breathed out a sigh of relief after Zi Yi went upstairs. He was worried that Zi Yi would pry.

Zi Yi directly headed for the computer room.

She consecutively turned on several computers, and one of them brought up all the surveillance cameras in Lu Jingye's villa. She then discovered that all of them were turned off.

"What are you trying to do?"

Zi Yi softly whispered. She pondered for a moment, then quickly went to the sundries room and took out some high-tech equipment she had purchased in the past. She quickly assembled a drone, inserted a chip the size of a small fingernail, and released the drone out from a back window.

Following that, she returned to the computer room and started to write the list of items required to simulate the scene in the gallery.

It was almost eleven in the evening when she was done.

At that moment, Zi Yi's phone rang.

With a glance, she realized it was a call from the housekeeper.

He reminded her over the phone. "Miss Zi, it's time to rest."

Zi Yi clicked her tongue. This was a task Lu Jingye left for the housekeeper before he left. Every night, the housekeeper would remind her at 10.55 p.m sharp.

Zi Yi casually responded and continued to surf the net after the call was disconnected.

She entered the underground trading market to take a look and unexpectedly discovered someone offering 500 million to hack into a personal computer.

"500 million? Seems good."

She then swiftly keyed in a string of codes on her computer and very soon, she hacked into the personal computer of the person offering her the 500 million.

When Rick, who was in a meeting, watched helplessly as all the data in his laptop was overwritten while a dancing fairy appeared, he knew that the legendary mysterious hacker had appeared.

With a stern expression, he immediately gave orders to his subordinates. "The meeting is on hold for 30 minutes. Everyone, get out."

The UP Group's senior executives were surprised. They hastily packed away their laptops and documents and left the room.

As soon as the conference room was closed, the dancing fairy disappeared while a sentence appeared on the screen.

[Whose personal computer?]

Rick had a stern expression as he said, "I want you to hack into the personal computer of Lu Group's Lu Jingye."

Zi Yi's lips curled up.

Seems like this person is ambitious.

She continued to type on the keyboard. [500 million for Lu Jingye's personal computer's information? No deal.]

Just as she intended to leave, she heard Rick asking through the hacked laptop microphone, "How much do you want?"
