

Multiverse 641

Chapter 641: Introduction (2)

It took an hour for all the people that were scattered all around the globe to arrive at the Avengers Tower. Most of them were not so fast, as many were far away in various other countries. But the presence of Hal, Natasha, Barry, Pietro, Hyperion and other fast moving members made it faster for all the members of different teams to arrive at the Tower fast.

But each one that had arrived were just surprised out of their wits by seeing the new people that John had arrived with. Especially Deadpool. He was having a time of his life by making fun of each one of them.

Especially Kurotsuchi Mayuri. Seeing the blabbermouth he almost cut Deadpool in two, not that it would have mattered to Deadpool, as he was almost immortal when it came to injuries and cuts that could lead to death.

Only way that Deadpool could die was old age and his rate of ageing didn't seem like he would die any time soon. One of his bane. Being barred by Death, has its aftereffects. Urahara had to hold down Mayuri so as not to make a commotion here on foreign lands.

At the end there were so many people that, 616-Tony had to bring all the people to the garage of the Tower so that all had enough space and talk. The Green lanterns set up a temporary stage and even seats for everyone to sit. The Guardians, John and other leaders took the stage. This looked funny but there was no other way to accommodate everyone.

Appa came forward as he was leading this mission. The Guardian would be the leader as they were better fit in this kind of mission. The enemies might be manipulative so they needed someone who was devoid of personal emotions and would be able to think for the greater of the multiverse.

"Greetings. I am Appa, a Guardian of Oa. I know that many of you are confused and many were taken aback about what had happened a few hours prior. You all have been thrown into a situation that none of us has any solution. The best we can do is duct tape the problem and move on. This seems pessimistic, but that is the optimistic solution that we can offer you. I don't want to give false hopes but from what Mr. Jameson has told us, it might not be a good one. With all being said, we will have to try our best to remedy the problem."

Such words by Appa didn't raise any kind of hopes to anyone present. They were given a glimpse before by the words of OAA but they had held hopes. Hope that they might be able to overcome it. But it seemed like the journey would be a tough one and it might not lead to a desired result. They thought that everyone would be properly introduced but all they received was a dose of fear.

There was a small murmur among the people but soon stopped it as they could see that Appa was not done with the speech. It was just the starter.

"The Source Wall, or you can call it the Wall here is what is called a boundary between multiverses. We belong to a race called Maltusians. An ancient race that had seen how technological advancement could lead to. We had faced wars and destruction before. From our own kind and thus long ago we had decided to advocate only peace and never interfere among the fellow beings. Since we belonged to an ancient race, we have knowledge far greater than the other alien species. This knowledge gave us a glimpse of what the Source Wall is."

"Along the course of time, we have gathered all knowledge that we could gather about the Wall. The Wall could be said as a prison for people who wanted to achieve more than their limitations. Or you can say these people who were prisoned there wanted powers that could destroy the multiverse. There are beings trapped there which we have no answers to. Anyone of them leaving the multiverse will create havoc and there would be a fall in natural order."

"Let me show you some of the beings and their descriptions so that you have an idea of what these people could do if they go out." Appa said.

Hal used his ring to project a huge screen. And on that screen was a humanoid man who looked like a Roman gladiator. He had a helmet which two massive horns. the horns seemed like they were taken from a huge goat but such huge sized goats had never been seen ever before. The person was at least 9 feet tall and his body seemed like it was made of broken rock, but the streamlined between the broken rock pieces established the fact that it was only a rock like skin. He had a sword in his hand and looked intimidating to everyone.

Even though it was just a still picture of the person.

Chapter 642: Introduction (3)

This time it was Batman who stood up and came forward to introduce the being that had just appeared on the screen.

"Most of you know me. I am Bruce Wayne and I hail from a multiverse that is beyond the wall. I am not sure how I and others had landed here but we are not ill towards this multiverse. I know that many might be suspicious of us that we are the reason for the break of the Wall. We might be. Or we might not be. But we can promise you this that we didn't arrive in this multiverse by breaking the Wall or by our own wish."

Bruce spoke those words at first. Although nobody had pointed it out to them, he wanted to make it clear to everyone. This was important. As he needed all of them to work together he needed to say these words out in the open from the beginning itself.

"Don't worry Bruce. Everybody here trusts you and your team. You have fought with us side by side for a long time. If the Wall was really broken by the emergence of your team, it still wouldn't matter because you are not the only beings who had arrived from a different multiverse." Banner said as he looked at the Shinigamis who had come with John.

"I believe so, but I still wanted to make it clear to everyone. Now for the person who is presented here. He is called Yuga Khan. Father of Darkseid. Most of you don't know who Darkseid is. Think of him as Thanos of our multiverse. Only difference is that he is more cruel and more dangerous. And Yuga Khan is more cruel than Darkseid and more powerful. So powerful that he willingly invaded the Source Wall to get more power as there is a rumor that if a person ever comes back from Source Wall, he would be more powerful and have an eternal body. And this Yuga Khan is nothing in front of the real bosses who are struck at the Wall." Wayne said as he pointed at the image.

Then the image changed and showed four massive beings. Beings so huge that could easily rival the size of Galactus. And there were four of them!!!

"Shit."

"Is this for real?"

"We are truly fucked by daddy!!" Deadpool commented as everybody could imagine what would happen if any of these beings were set loose. One Galactus was already a headache and now if the Wall was broken they might have to fight these 4 beings together.

"These are the primordial Gods or as we call them 'Omega Titans'. And like Galactus they devour worlds but they are not as hungry as Galactus. Only a seed of a world would be enough to satiate their hunger. But the thing is the world should be a living one. Believe it or not, they can be termed as warden of the Source Wall. If they break away and don't return them to the Wall we will be truly and honestly 'fucked'."

This whole single speech sent shudders to everyone present. If a prison had Galactus-like beings as wardens, then they could imagine the prisoners. This was the worst situation they could imagine.

"Some of the beings that we have knowledge about who are trapped in the multiverse are Ares, God of War and other such Gods who wreaked havoc once. Then we have Perpetua who can be termed as one of the ultimate bosses. She was trapped there a long ago because of her transgressions. Her title is 'Mother of the multiverse' so you can already imagine what kind of being she is and what might happen if she is let loose." Wayne said.

"And these are beings that we know of. On top of that there are 7 dark forces that are trapped in the Wall. Many of you have come across the Speed Force that is wielded by Barry and Pietro. There is the opposite of it. The Still Force which can make things slower and is the evil counterpart of the Speed Force. Anyone who can wield can easily be termed as our enemy and should be hunted down."

"And that is just one of the forces that is trapped there." Barry mentioned that from the stage.

"At first we can understand that there are beings trapped there. But now you speak of invisible power that is trapped there? What the fuck!! Give us a break already!! And you say that it is just one of the forces that is trapped?"

Wayne and others nodded their heads. A small introduction that they had heard was already enough to cause an Avenger level event in any universe. And now they have multiple of these trapped, itching to come out. And once they do, it would be game over for everyone.

Chapter 643: Secret Wars

"There are more people who might be trapped of which we have no idea about and things we have no knowledge of. There are some that we do have an idea of. The related details will be shared to all of you." Wayne stopped his speech as he went to his seat at the stage. He had a gloomy face since the moment he came to know about the presence of Wall.

Batman had much knowledge of the Wall because of one reason. The Mobius Chair. This gave him immense knowledge and omnipotence. He had all the knowledge the multiverse had to offer at that point of time. John had given him the boost by giving him the properties when Batman once sat on it.

Although he hadn't seen the future, he did know of what might happen if any of the prisoners were set loose. He didn't show it in his face, but the people close to him could see that Batman looked more broody and gloomy than usual. Batman never showed his emotions on the surface but now he was showing a bit of it and it didn't seem good.

Finally it was John who had stood up and walked to the main podium to give his speech. Bruce had talked about the dangers but the people here were still not awake to the real dangers that their world might face soon and so he was going to be the bad cop and give them a rude awakening.

Many people here were thinking that the prisoners might escape from the other side instead of their side as OAA and Presence said that the crack in the wall was more on the other side and their side was lesser.

But John was here to change that mindset.

"When I first came to this world, I already had a notion of the superheroes living here and their lives. Long ago I had said that I have seen the future. I have seen what goes down when the chips line up like a domino. Many here didn't believe me and I also know that many here don't trust me. At least not completely yet which is fine. The situation in Wanda was just one of the things that triggered me to take drastic decisions to change the people here and their way of thinking."

"It was brutal for sure. People died but at least the X-men got recognition due to it. They weren't able to save everyone but at least they tried their best. For that they do deserve a pat on the back."

Such words made the X-men almost blush. There were only a few X-men left but they did their best to save people when John depowered the Avengers. The people of Earth 616 finally got to know how they had been saved every time they were in danger. They were grateful. That was all John wanted to see.

"But this is not the only reason for my aversion to the Avengers of this Earth. I still do but it has gone down a lot. And no it is not for Wanda or the arrogance which many of you possess. Let me show you a glimpse of one of the possible futures and why I hated the Illuminati of yours."

John said as he waved his hands. The whole parking space was covered in a white light which made almost all of them blind for a second. The scene changed where they saw Black panther teaching some of the kids about warfare and how to hunt. The whole scene looked wholesome as T'Challa was a very good teacher.

The others who saw this were dumbfounded. They have never seen magic be used in this way. Only John's Avengers were not surprised, instead they were excited. The last time this happened was during the Thanos invasion. Now again they would be seeing the same thing.

"What is this?" 616-Steve asked.

"A possible future or rather show you a glimpse of what might happen if we don't band together. Here you will understand why I hated the Illuminati." The members of the Illuminati just held their heads in shame.

They had taken some decision that they weren't proud of but they took it to save people. They had no idea what John was going to show but they could feel that their image would drop after what John was going to show.

They wanted to stop it but like others they were curious of the alternate future and the enemies they were going to face so they didn't speak out even though they wanted to. There were many people present here. Many who had come a long way and even their doppelgangers. So they couldn't say no.

Then the image changed and showed Black Panther turning his head and looking high above. What he saw and what the people present in the meeting saw made their jaws drop.

Chapter 644: Secret Wars (2)

This was a planet which could be seen slowly approaching their Earth from space. This was something that had never seen or happened before. A planet approaching another planet? What the hell is this?

T'Challa got the scare of his life as he saw this and everybody could already imagine what would happen if their planet and the approaching one collided. But then saw another thing that made his jaw drop even more. The approaching planet burst into an explosion. The planet was blown into pieces before it could even touch their Earth.

The video rolled as T'Challa came across a group of aliens who had just arrived. One thing led to another and T'Challa had to fight the group of aliens. Finally after much fighting, T'Challa was able to capture the leader of the alien.

Black Swan was the name of the leader. And later she was taken to the Illuminati to make head and tail of what the hell was going on. And when the revelations came, it blew the minds of the people.

The Earth before that was supposed to collide with their Earth was another Earth from another universe. This was an Incursion. This process had started from some time now and this factor of collision between two Earths had started because one Earth in one universe had collapsed. This process destabilised the multiverse and thus every other Earth was now facing Incursion. The only way to stop this Incursion was blasting the other Earth into pieces.

It was either you survive or I survive!!

There was no way out.

There were no options for them. The people in the Illuminati had a very ugly face and they didn't know how to handle the situation. The only way to survive was to kill everyone from other Earth. This in itself was a crime.

A massive war crime!! Not only would they be responsible for the death of the other Earth but also the other universe.

And then the Illuminati took the decision of following the ways of Black Swan. Blowing away the other Earth for their own survival. There was a general consensus about it among the members of the Illuminati. Everyone voted for it.

Except Steve Rogers. He was dead set against killing an entire planet. And thus Doctor Strange had to forcefully make his memories vanish.

The video stopped there as John brought everyone back from the illusory world. This was the starting story of Secret Wars (2) where the Beyonders came to have fun. This whole storyline was downright cruel.

All the people present were stupefied and didn't know how to react. According to John this was one of the possible futures. The word 'possible' was enough to run chills down their spine. But among all of them there was one person who was particularly very angry.

That was 616-Steve Rogers.

He looked at all the members of the Illuminati with rage and anger. Out of habit, he even had his iconic shield in his hand, ready to beat the shit out of all the members of the Illuminati, starting with Namor.

He was the one who was on board with this whole plan of decimating other universes and Earth.

"Calm down Captain. This is only one possible future. This has not happened yet." Namor said with a very meek tone. He could see all of them were not looking at him in very good eyes and any words he might misspoke would just send him to hell.

"Calm down? All of you. The whole bunch of you are rotten. No wonder John depowered us last time. You all have been sitting too high at your levels to even think of the general public and people living their lives. You traded one universe for another and you asked me to calm down?" Steve was seething as he said that.

"But this hasn't happened and we will make sure that every universe is under control. Mr. Jameson here has already seen this so I will speculate that he has seen the end story too. Isn't it right Mr. Jameson?" Namor asked.

"I do know the end story. I have seen how it would end. But now I am not so sure if the ending is what I have seen before. Future is always changing. Like Knull was killed by another person. It was supposed to be the work of venom and now we have an imbalance. This has already tilted the balance of the multiverse. But now you know why I had prejudice against the Illuminati. I hope you will reconsider decisions that would bring ruin to all. I will tell you this, the decision of destroying Earth was not the solution of this Incursion and soon everything collapsed. So think twice before you make decisions."

Chapter 645: Introduction (4)

"I will never trust any of you again." 616-Steve declared. The others hearing this held their head in shame, because they knew that in their hearts that if such situations ever arose they would repeat the same decision. Of course now they had a trump card called John Jameson and now they know of the future.

Since it was the future of the multiverse, John would definitely help. As OAA said he was an anomaly and thus now they have a chance to make the future right, but there was a big if. Nonetheless they had hopes now.

"It's fine Captain. We can't charge someone guilty based on someone committing a crime in an alternate future. I am sure they will do better this time." John said as he glared at all the Illuminati members. Everyone got the cue and all shouted words of affirmation.

"Yes.. yes. we will not go down the path."

"I will not wipe out any memory of anyone. Others are present here too now so I wouldn't be able to even if I try to."

"I will never advocate such a war crime."

616-Steve looked at everyone of the Illuminati, he had eyes that screamed distrust but he didn't speak any more words. John was finally able to calm him down with the notion that such situations would never arrive in the future. He wouldn't let it happen.

"I know many of you are thinking why this happened and what caused the Incursion. It was caused by Beyonders. Beings which never belonged to this multiverse. Before I had never known the reason behind their emergence but now I highly speculate that they belonged to the Wall. So assuming that the crack had appeared at the Wall, they might emerge here soon." John finally spoke about the main enemy which he was expecting.

"If they do belong to the Wall, then we need to stop them before they arrive." Steve said.

"That's the thing, Captain. They don't need to take actions personally. Yesterday I spoke of Owen Reece, he is the weapon that Beyonders have built to blow up Earth. He is a walking time bomb. GAIA did we find any such person that I asked you to find?" John asked.

"I have kept tabs on each Owen but none of them showed any such behaviour, I have put them under intense surveillance."

"Good. So Owen is the bomb the Beyonders have prepared or they might prepare on each and every universe. And detonating a single one would just start a cascade of events. of course, the Beyonders might not give us a chance and just blow each Owen Reece with a single blast destroying all of the multiverse that we know without giving us a chance to retaliate."

"And I will say this again. Don't go after Owen. Never. I know many of you are thinking of killing each and every Owen Reece. Don't do it. We are not sure if beyonders have started working. I don't want innocents to be in the crossfire."

This made each and everyone shudder. Destroying the multiverse with just a human bomb. This seemed like fantasy, but the words of John meant that everything was read and they might have to face such an enemy.

"Then we need to kill the Beyonders before they even get to place the bomb and stop them in the Wall itself."

"Sure. But you have to understand each beyonder is as powerful as The Living Tribunal and there are a bunch of them." John said

"What? Are you serious?"

"The fuck."

"Mommy I think there is pee coming out from my pants. I want to go home."

Such words by Deadpool might have made everyone smile but this time, it didn't even spark a reaction from the audience.

"So this is the enemy we are facing. We have no idea who would emerge from the Wall. It might be Perpetua or it might be the Beyonders. But all we can do is be ready to stop their invasion. For this reason I have brought friends over who have knowledge about the Wall and people who are great at sealing and stopping."

"Let me introduce my friends. This is Urahara, ex-Captain...." John spent the next half an hour introducing his friends and even the Guardians came forward and introduced themselves properly. This whole thing took more than half an hour. The others were confused about this Soul Society, but at the end they finally got the gist of it.

They were surprised that John had connections and friends with such weird beings and death itself.

"So everyone is briefed and some of you will accompany me to the Wall and set up a base there. The others are advised to sharpen their weapons and be ready because the call for help might arrive at any given moment."

"I don't know how big the crack is so I can only imagine the worst and work on it. Oblivion, you have been listening to us for sometime so I think now it's time for you to show yourself." John said as he looked at one corner of the parking space.

Chapter 646: Spaceship

The moment he said that from the corner of the parking space a man emerged from the shadow. The man seemed like he was an assassin out of the fantasy books from the medieval ages.

It was Oblivion. The Guardian of the Void. He was someone who looked after the multiverse from afar. From the Void. That was the lie that had been told to everyone. He was the Guardian for sure but in addition he watched over the Wall too.

He was the security that the multiverse had provided to see over the Wall. And this time he was tasked of taking John and his team to the Wall.

The last time he met, he warned his compatriots of not to antagonize John, but one person didn't heed his words. Oblivion was the only one who was wary of John. It was because he could smell the same breath from John as he normally got from the Wall.

Maybe because the system that John had was powered by the Wall and Oblivion got the hint of it, but at the end Oblivion was very cautious when it came to John. And rightfully so. John had shown his prowess more than one time and even the famous Unmaker was dead, never to be revived again.

It was done with the help of a trick for sure but at the end he defeated someone whom the Living Tribunal himself found it hard. And now Darkness too was gone. All done with him leading. For Oblivion, John was evil for sure because he tilted the balance, but he knew that John was the necessary evil as even OAA himself had pinned his hopes on him.

"Guys this is Oblivion. He will be our guide in the journey. He is one of the great abstract entities on par with Eternity," John said introducing him to everyone. All of the people present were now numbed by one thing after another. Few hours ago they met OAA, then about beings who are more powerful than they could imagine in their wildest dreams and now an abstract being who has the same power as Eternity and from the looks of it he would be the guide.

"Nice to meet you."

"Hello."

Such greetings could be heard from everyone and they all tried to be as polite as possible. Of course John's Avengers had already met them before so there was no need for new introduction, though Oblivion knew everyone present and even the ones who came from another universe, he didn't know about the Shinigami.

This was new, so eyes them for a few seconds before turning back to John.

"Is everything ready?"

"Yes."

"Let's go."

"We will need a spaceship to be at the void. Your current technology and suit isn't enough for your allies to be at the Void so you will need a spaceship that can withstand the void and have a shield or whatever you call it to be safe. Do you have such spaceship?"

John went into contemplation. According to Oblivion they needed a spaceship which can withstand void and also have a shielding facility. The biggest spaceships right now in his pocket was the scout ships.

But those ships weren't big enough to take everyone with and establish a base near the Wall. They needed something like the Star Destroyer from Star Wars.

Big enough to have a shield and have power enough to blow everything to pieces as every major base should have one.

They needed a moving base and large one at that.

After much thought and many movies that he had made he came across one ship that was big enough to hold each and every kind of facility. It would be suffice to say that ship was too big for the number people they have but it could be over looked with the new summons that he could bring with the spaceship.

The Wall would be under surveillance 24/7 and it was not possible for him to be at the 'base' all the time. So he needed a weapon that could look after it. This operation would take a lot of time so he needed something sturdy and big.

"I am going to pull one spaceship from the multiverse but it is too large of its size to land on Earth it would be better if we go to outer space and I pull it out." John said. Since here everyone knows that John has been given powers from the Wall and he had talked about this before none of them were surprised by the words of John.

They were just curious about the kind of Spaceship that John was going to 'pull'.

"Let us go to space then." Oblivion said.

John nodded his head and waved his hands at the people who were ready to go to the Wall. They said goodbye to their team mates one last time before vanishing with John.

Chapter 647: Spaceship (2)

All the parties who would go with John and Oblivion were given time beforehand to say goodbye to their teammates and even their family beforehand. They had no idea how much time would pass by as they worked on the Wall and researched it.

There were many who had joined this team. Even Beast from the X-men of John's universe decided to join and contribute as his doppelganger too had joined. They were excited to say the least though they were scared too.

But saving the multiverse took precedence.

So the team which was supposed to be a small one turned out to be a big one. With 40 members from 4 different universes. For the first time people from different universes had come together for such a massive project.

John's vanishing move took the team and threw them to the open space near Earth. The whole team were wearing suits made by 616-Tony and Tony. The new suit was more durable and better and Wakanda had pitched in their Vibranium for the suits.

"Where is the spaceship?" 616-Tony asked.

"It's on its way. I had to use a lot of power to bring it." John replied.

"Which universe are you bringing it from?" Tony asked.

"You will see." John replied with a mysterious smile. So they all started waiting. After almost 5 minute of waiting, everyone saw a small dot in the distance. The dot that was very tiny from afar slowly started getting bigger. And in a minute or so everyone finally got to see what kind of spaceship John had brought from another multiverse beyond the Wall.

The men of John's Avengers didn't even recognize the spaceship until Banner's eyes glowed.

"Is that the Harvester? The main ship of that alien race?"

"Yes. The spaceship of the alien race from Independence Day -Resurgence. Didn't like their story at all but damn these people had a huge one." John said. Everyone from John's universe agreed. They didn't like the story but they didn't think much about it. Most of the movies of John signified other multiverses so the story was not a concern for them.

The spaceship was proof that there were all other multiverses out there that they had no idea about.

"Wait!! You mean THAT ship? The Ship that was almost the size of the moon?" Tony asked.

"More or less yes."

"Man, you have some weird fetish for big ass things. First there was the Ring and now the Harvester."

John just looked at Tony with glaring eyes. Tony did catch him red handed. He did love toys. For a moment he even thought of bringing the Meridian or the Installation 00 for this adventure but he stopped himself. Those will be too big for their own taste and it is better to go for smaller things.

Smaller being the sarcasm here.

"Are the aliens still on the spaceship?" Batman asked as that was their main concern here.

"Yes, but they would listen to my orders. They are not so powerful to begin with and all of them live under the shell so it's easy to control them using magic." John replied. All nodded their heads as he had done the same thing with Lex Luthor and Trigon before so they were not so concerned about it.

The others however were stupefied to say the least. The spaceship looked so massive that it could cover countries easily and if this spaceship ever crash landed on Earth it would be like the dinosaur age all over again. But there wouldn't be any new species later as the Earth itself would break apart just by the sheer impact of the spaceship.

The spaceship in shape looked like the ones that they had seen in old sci-fi movies. A circular disc shape with claws poking out from all sides.

"How the hell are we going to control such a ship?" Beast asked.

"The ship has its own ecosystem which you could change as you see fit. It contains an army of strong aliens who will heed your command and work under you so you don't have to worry. The aliens will serve you and you just need to do your research." John calmed the others down. The other people from the Avengers explained to their teammates about the spaceship. Soon the spaceship had arrived. Though they were very confused about all of this at the beginning, they soon got the hang of it.

As this discussion among the team members was rampant about the approaching spaceship, 616-Earth was going through a 'heart attack'. GAIA and the Avengers had to step in and calm the people. It was fortunate that only the higher ranked people got to see the spaceship from their observatories and all the satellites had been destroyed in the invasion of Knull.

Chapter 648: Reaching the Wall

The huge hangar that could easily fit 100 trucks side by side slowly opened after the spaceship stopped at the edge where the heroes were just levitating with the help of suits. The sheer size of the hangar was enough to make their hearts chill, let alone the spaceship.

As the hangar opened in absolute silence, the other got a view inside. There were aliens standing inside the hangar. The aliens that looked like it came out of a sci-fi movie. A long standing alien with tentacles wriggling around.

Except for the Avengers, the others felt weird seeing such aliens. They were warned about the aliens before but they didn't expect that the aliens would look like these. Most of the people here have seen aliens before, but all of them were in humanoid form, never in 'octopus' form.

This was new to them.

Seeing everyone was still looking at the aliens, John broke them from the stupor and said

"Get in. Mr. Oblivion here would take us all to the Void."

The others broke from their stiffened gazes and slowly followed John as they all entered the hangar. The aliens which were standing bowed their head as John and the aliens entered. 616-Banner felt a little weird seeing all of this, including many others seeing how the aliens were greeting them as if they were kings.

The aliens didn't even introduce themselves.

"Can they not treat us as kings?" 616-Banner asked.

"These guys harvest living planets to fuel their conquests and treat lives as cheap as ants. They don't need our acceptance. Their slavery will be their salvation for the multiverse." Tony chimed in the middle to cut all forms of sympathy that his teammates were having at this point for the aliens.

Tony then proceeded to tell about how these aliens work and what the ship was made for. They were dumbfounded to say the least.

"Must have cost you a loss to bring this ship here?" Wayne asked.

"Little bit but it doesn't matter. Now that we have a spaceship we will leave." John said as he looked at Oblivion as he was looking around the ship curiously. Like the Avengers and the X-men, everyone was curious about the spaceship.

This spaceship had everything. From its own weather system to playgrounds and houses. John had spent some extra fan values to decorate the whole spaceship so that it would fit for human living and necessities.

Oblivion after looking around for a few seconds vanished with the spaceship. The authorities who were keeping an eye on the spaceship from the telescopes had sighed in relief as they saw the spaceship just disappearing. They were in pins and needles even though SHIELD had said that the spaceship was not hostile.

Knoll had scarred the people for life!!

"We will reach the Wall in 6 Earth hours. The journey will be far and I will direct this spaceship. You can start settling down and get ready for saving the Wall." Those were the last words of Oblivion as he disappeared. He didn't leave the spaceship but he didn't want to show himself to the people around.

He had always been a loner. That was his destiny and the reason he was made. Interacting with people wasn't very high in his priorities.

"Talking to an abstract being really is tough." 616- Beast said.

"Sure is. I don't even understand what these beings are even after people around me explained to me ." the other Beast said.

All roamed around to see what the spaceship had in store and were led by the aliens that had inhabited before. John had mentioned that this spaceship was changed so they wanted to see what changes had been done.

The Guardians flew to the forest beside the lake. This ecosystem was made in accordance with the humans so it was perfect for the Guardians too. They were more interested in nature rather than living with humans. The Green Lanterns too followed them to help the Guardians make homes for the Guardians.

The other humans and mutants didn't mind as they also felt a little uncomfortable with the presence of Guardians beside them as they could easily feel that the Guardians had no emotional quotient.

Everybody took their stuff and moved to their new homes and base. The three Tony decided to stay together and share a laboratory as they could invent more and make suits suitable for the void after getting a taste of how it looked and operated. This was important as they needed to work on the Wall and everyone needed a suit.

Everyone except for John and the Green Lantern. So they would be their testing subject and the lantern ring will be their basis of suit-making.

The others too decided to make separate labs and work together.

In this way 6 hours had passed by as all were settling in. Soon the aliens who were serving them came to knock as Wayne had called all of them. The Wall was within sight from the command center.

Chapter 649: The sights

All had reached the command center which was at least the size of two football fields and it was directly at the center of the spaceship. One might say if it was the center how would they get a view of the outside. Well, it was simple. It was because the command center had perfect image projection from outside the space.

The command center was built in such a way that except for the pedals and the rudders required to direct the ship the other images would just be projected at the command center just like a VR panel all over the roof and the sides of the command center.

John specially asked for this modification as he got this idea from a famous Chinese novel he had read in his previous life. And from the looks of it, this modification was worth the price. With this they didn't have to look outside just by the holographic images.

This was more like a reality VR for the people.

Now getting back to the story, all had arrived at the command center as Wayne called everyone. Even the Guardians had shown up. They were all curious about the Wall that had been spoken for quite a few times. And their sole mission was to save the Wall from breaking apart and thus flinging them to an unknown future which nobody would like to see.

When the first images of the Wall came projected at the walls of the center, they were mesmerised. Most of them expected the Wall to look like black. Because that was what the Void.

The Void had no color, no planets. Nothing. Imagine Black Hole but on a universal scale. That was what Void was. But the Wall was different. Even from afar they could see the color. And it was not just a single color. Even from afar the people could identify that the Wall was made of different colored lights emitting from it.

It felt like a ray of hope in this damned darkness. If the people didn't know better about the Wall and were ignorant many would have run to this place to seek refuge. Of course being in the Void itself was a miracle. forget about reaching the Wall.

This multiverse wasn't like DC where the edge of each universe had a Wall. The Wall here was outside the multiverse so none could get access to it. Even if a person does reach the Void, it would be nigh impossible to reach the Wall.

As the spaceship was approaching the Wall, the people got to see the Wall in more vivid colors and more clarity. Since it was a projection, none could use their powers and see further away. They could only do it from a window and the window of the spaceship was too far away. All of them were too lazy to move.

They finally were able to see the Wall after a few minutes of flying towards it. Except for Wayne, John and the Guardians many were expecting just a Wall, just a simple combination of different colors. But when they got near to it they were dumbfounded.

The Wall was transparent!!

And from the transparent Wall, everyone could see different species and different kinds of aliens struck in the Wall. It seemed like there were alien species being frozen in clear ice for thousands and thousands of years. All of the aliens that were struck in the Wall were in a single position. In a T-pose. It was little funny as this pose was basically how the police take pictures after a person were arrested on Earth. But none of them smiled here. Some aliens were small and had height lesser than a human being. But others were the size of Galactus!!

The Wall was huge enough to even capture these people and imprison them here.

"What the!!! These are living beings that are imprisoned in the Wall?"

"These are the alien species that are threatening us?"

John had seen the Wall in the comics and from the looks of it, this wasn't far away from the art work. When OAA said that his system came from the Wall, he had a feeling that not only the system came from the Wall.

His soul too might belong in the Wall!! Maybe his Earth was struck at the Wall too and for one reason or another, the system and his soul were transferred to John's body. Maybe someone from the Wall had powers of divination and thus had written the comics over the course of time. And for that reason he had such immense knowledge of the future.

In this multiverse, over the course of time he had accepted himself as John and had long forgotten his previous life. The comics were the thing that kept his connection with the previous world.

Chapter 650: The crack

Now he might be looking at his birth place. Of course it didn't mean that his planet was exactly in this location. It might be somewhere which borders other multiverses, but nonetheless he was almost sure that somewhere in the Wall there was his planet which was full with people of imaginations.

Producing vivid stories, not knowing that it was just the reality outside the Wall and some people diving the stories and making hell of a money out of it!!

Though it was just a theory of John, he had a feeling that this theory was probably the truth. If the Wall breaks apart, maybe he would see the truth and might even go back to his previous world.

As all those thoughts were going through his mind, the Harvester had reached the Wall and the different species that were struck at the Wall was more clear and everyone got to see. Among the prisoners, John even saw one of the Omega Titan.

"There might be more than 4 Omega Titans." Wayne commented as everyone got to see a huge being the size of Galactus. John who was just eyeing the huge being looked over at the Tonys and asked

"Tony, are the suits ready?"

"We went through the suits of the aliens over whom we are ruling now and after looking at their structure I got a few ideas and we made a bigger suit with 4 tentacles that could be controlled via mind waves. So basically we are half octopus and after analysing the Void we were able to integrate a Vibranium suit that could withstand the pressure of the Void. So in a sense we have the prototype but there is only one we could make in such a short time."

"Hmm.. Make multiple ones. Me and Oblivion will go and see what the crack looks like." John said.

All nodded their heads. Reed heard that all the three had come up with a prototype to be at the Void. All pitched in their expertise to lessen the time required for the people to be at the Void. Even the Green Lanterns were stopped from going to the Void without a suit.

John called Oblivion who was one of the shadows. And both vanished from their place and reached the crack at the Wall as Oblivion took him there.

The crack was over the surface of the chest area of one of the Omega Titans. The crack was very small and nothing was emitting from it. No sound, no light, nothing!

But the crack was apparent just like a small crack that appears over the surface of a mobile device after it gets some kind of damage for various reasons. Only this time it was on a huge transparent Wall. And the crack was at least 100 times the size of cracks that appear on the glass of a mobile.

The size of the crack as compared to the size of the Wall was probably negligible, but this small crack, if not repaired, would just get bigger and bigger, and ultimately lead to a calamity.

"So this is the crack!! Is it enlarging?"

"It was 0.0045% smaller when I last came here to check. I have been monitoring the crack closely."

"Hmm. Do you have any idea of filling the crack? Any kind of energy that would work?"

"No. The other beings tried their best. We even used the remnant power of Darkness to make the crack heal. But nothing heals it. For this reason we had to go to the supreme being to ask for help. He in turn asked for your help. I am not sure if you could help but your power comes from beyond the crack so you might have a shot at it."

Oblivion said this in one breath. He had a bland tone to speak of but he was quite serious. But then he changed his tone and said in a more grim voice.

"I hope you don't betray us or stab us. We have been monitoring you for quite a long time and we believe we are better judges of characters. Although your power comes from the Wall, we hope you don't have any allegiance to the Wall. The supreme being trusts you. We will hunt you down if you break our trust, no matter the consequences."

John was taken aback by such words. He had never thought of it in this way. If he really came from the Wall where was his allegiance. Does he need to fight his own world at one point of time? If the Wall breaks will his world too break apart? His power level was too high and he could just obliterate his previous world. But one thing he knew for sure, he might be lenient to his previous world if he ever came across them but to others he wouldn't be.

He has his own family here. His own team. On no condition he would give this up.