

Multiverse 671

Chapter 671: Gathering everyone

"I don't know why but I can't read it. It has never happened before. It can only happen when a being doesn't belong to the multiverse and comes from outside. In other words, if we share the common origin."

Such words surprised John . He already accepted that his system came from the Wall and Chronicler could be said as someone who was from the Wall. This Wall here could be taken as a broader sense here. It could signify that the Wall served as a place between different multiverse. Like his previous world belonged to a place which was outside the jurisdiction of normal multiverses.

It was good that his secret was still safe. Phoenix was beside him and he didn't want his secret to be out in front of her.

"I don't know. Maybe because a part of my power comes from the Wall." Listening to these words the Chronicler went through his memories and he got to understand that his powers did come from the Wall and the Wall was his home.

He was one of those few beings who could cross Wall as he wished and he was given the authority to survey every dying multiverse. And on this case two neighboring multiverse would die and the Wall between them would vanish

He had seen that people living there had already known of it and they were trying to close it but he knew that it was of now help. The beings that were struck in the Wall would soon emerge and would just bring chaos.

He could stop it but he didn't have the authority. He had seen many multiverse but he didn't see such beautiful ones like these two. Both of the multiverse had heroes.

Heroes who rose up and saved their people multiple times. Such couldn't be said for most of the multiverse out there. (this actually happened as the Chronicler said that he didn't see such beautiful multiverse in a very long time).

John sighed as bit as he watched Chronicler going through his book while taking in all the history of the multiverse. John's current memory of the present multiverse was enough to tell him a lot, though the Chronicler would still have to visit several multiverse to gather more history.

John's presence attracted him as he huge knowledge of the multiverse.

"Our multiverse is really dying?" John asked.

"From the looks of it yes. The beings trapped in the Wall would soon come out and some of them are omega level entities. This multiverse doesn't have so many omega level entities. There is a chance but is very minuscule."

"We will fight for any chances that we get." John said.

"I hope you do. I will be on my way for completing the book. This multiverse survives or not is up in the air. I need to finish the survey." the Chronicler left after saying goodbye to John.

"He really feels like a robot made to observe and write down. It's very unique that he too has feelings."

John was back at home after having the conversation with the Chronicler. He wished that he could give John some hint about the upcoming omega level beings that was going to wage war, but he wasn't programmed that way.

From his words it already meant that it was a waste of time in helping to stop the Crack. It was better they get ready for the war and bide their time to strike. And for this a convention needed to be set up with all the major players being in the meeting.

It was time everyone met everyone.

John after returning home called GAIA.

"Tell the Avengers that I have called for a meeting among all the superheroes that we have ever come up with and all the other beings that had arrived from other multiverse, we have a decision to make."

"Acknowledged. I will Fury too. He is going to retire soon."

John after entering home sat on his couch. He had already used the system to call upon the kages, the mages from Asgard, Lex and the Captains including the 0th division. After using his system he was back at the Harvester.

Specifically at the lab of TRN891 -Tony.

"Hey John. Whats up? Why the long face?"

"Something happened. Call everyone."

"Everyone? Is it serious? Did some slip by from the crack?"

"No. Not exactly. I will explain when everyone is here."

"Alright."

Soon there was a notification to all the members that were in the Harvester. Even the Queen Mother was given the notification to attend the meeting. And this notification was not only to the crew members of the Harvester, the messages were also sent to all the members of the Avengers, X-men (from 3 realities), Inhumans (from 2 realities) and even Nova Corps of 616.

Chapter 672: Gathering everyone (2)

In the past few months, John had done some major changes. He had established two new branches of Disney on two different Earths.

Earth 616 and Earth TRN 891.

It was all done under the cooperation of Stark Industries. Though Tony or the Avengers didn't understand why John was adamant on doing so, they let him do it. Many people had weird obsessions all over the multiverse and since John just wanted to spread awareness about superheroes they were all okay with it.

After all, since the movies of Captain America there was nothing of that sort. Now there was a new genre that John had introduced and John had specifically asked for the release of the movies and series over the course of time.

Basically, Disney was releasing one or two movies in a span of 1 month. They would have gone for more but John feared that the people would get the 'superhero' fatigue so he only allowed 2 at best.

But the reception he received for these movies were tremendous. Their worlds already have superhero culture but there was never a form of movies. This was the first time.

And people loved it.

The portrayal of Batman, Superman, Wonder Woman....

There were many superheroes. Though it wasn't like their superheroes, it did show the struggle of theirs and that they had their own lives. The reception of the movies were immense and John's fan values were boosted again.

He was happy to see that.

The other thing that John did was communicate with other superheroes. He had tasked the Avengers of 616 and TRN 891 to make the other superheroes know of their predicament. Everyone accepted this small mission as it was just spreading new information and stories. So in this way John got acquainted with other superheroes spanning over two universes.

TRN 891 didn't show up with X-men last time but after John asked their help they readily agreed and this happened the same with Inhumans of both the universe.

John avoided the Inhumans of their universe for one absurd reason. All this time, one invasion after another they never seemed to care. Since they didn't care, it was better to leave it that way.

Another person John didn't bother to call was Captain Marvel. Only after the death of Nick did she show up. Even after the invasion of Loki she never even gave a glance. And the same thing happened in the movies too.

Since she had so little care about Earth it was better to leave it that way. Now their universe had Green Lanterns and she still didn't show up, so they were better without her. (I don't like her character so sorry about that. Never liked her character in the comics too. Too bossy and thinks she runs the Avengers.)

And for the first time John has called everyone for this meeting in the Harvester. Everyone knew about the crack in the Wall but none had seen it. So this was a perfect chance to bring everyone and show the difficulties they had been facing and also the traveller that John's universe had just been visited by.

It was time for blowing the war horn and getting everyone on their feet. This war couldn't be evaded even if anyone tried. So it was better to get everyone on the same page. It was decided that everyone would be brought to 616 and after that Oblivion would be bringing everyone here.

John had extracted another Harvester for this operation. He couldn't just teleport so many people from the multiverse to the void. Even Oblivion, the ruler of Void couldn't do that so what say him who was powered by the multiverse. he might be able to do it using his full power but it could only be done forcefully and not everyone could be brought in a single trip.

So it was better to take the old route. A single Harvester wouldn't even cost him that much.

In a day everyone had gathered at the Avengers Tower. In the main Hall many portals were opened and many people were coming across the portals. There were many of them.

At first many superheroes didn't believe the words of John as they thought it was far-fetched from TRN 891. But it was different now. Reed Richards of their own universe attested to the words of John.

So many were new here and many of them didn't even know the concept of multiverse before. But now it was different. This was a new adventure for many people and they were excited.

In an hour or so everyone had appeared at the Hall and all the portals closed. John slowly stepped after opening door from the side and said

"Welcome everyone. To the Avengers Tower of Earth 616."

Chapter 673: Gathering everyone (3)

"I know many of you are confused as many of you haven't been briefed properly. And this is a new type of thing or even knowledge for many of you. Some of you know me, some of you may not and it may be possible that you are paranoid and think I am trying to kill everyone here, because let's be honest, I brought you all away from your home on pretext of a multiversal war which may or may not be true...."

"... And with that I might even attack your home as the villains never need a reason to cause havoc."

When John said these words many of the people who were new to this shuddered. They never tonight saw this from another angle and whatever this new person said was right. They really were too foolish to leave behind everything on their Earth without any question just because their leaders had asked them to.

Some even thought of revolting by those words but they could say that many were giggling silently by the subtle threats of John. That proved that whatever John was speaking was just a hoax and a way to make fun of their foolishness.

This made many of them shy and embarrassed, thinking that John didn't even need to do anything and let the people go through a range of emotions in a matter of a few seconds. Clark who was behind John couldn't take it anymore seeing these new 'recruits' get scared by veterans like them.

"It's enough there is no need to scare the new people. I am Clark Kent from Earth 1999999. We have all brought you here with no lie and we really do face a war. Soon we will be leaving for the place that we have informed all of you about as everyone of you has been given a brief overview of what is happening right now."

Everyone calmed down with the stoic but easy going voice of Clark. He was one of the leaders of the Justice League and thus he had quite a pull and charisma to make people have good will towards him. John had a charm of his own because of him being the King of Babylon but he was never a good orator. At best his oratory skills were on par with Wayne who was a man of very few words.

"Our spaceship will soon be here where you will meet the rest of the crew as there were many others from our own universe who would join."

There was a murmur among the crowd but nobody said anything as their leaders seemed like they had known all of this from sometime and they calmed down per se. But all had excitement written on their faces.

For most of them this would be their first space travel and they were dying to go to this 'spaceship' that was supposed to take them. As the discussions were going on among the crowd, the new Harvester was already extracted by John and like last time the spaceship appeared near the moon, or could be said it was extracted behind the dark side of the moon to hide its size from the general public.

Last time it created a commotion among the people of 616 so John didn't want another complaint from 616-Tony. John waved his hands and in the next moment, all of them who had arrived from different universes had arrived at an open field.

The field had grasses. On one side of the field it had forest and on another side far there were a row of mountains. But this wasn't the catch. The main point was that the sky had a purple color and it was very apparent that the sky was fake. The harvester was so big that it had a detailed ecosystem of its own. Only difference here being the purple sky.

Many were amazed by this sudden change of scenery and many people had already guessed that it was teleportation on a massive scale. They had seen teleportation before but not of this magnitude. This was new for them.

"Is this a new place?"

"No you idiot, it's a spaceship. Can't you see some small windows on this side from where the space is apparent?"

"But how big is this spaceship to have such a huge place."

"We have just been brought to a different universe. This already is a new thing. Now get used to it or else you will embarrass yourselves as superheroes of Earth."

As this discussion was happening among the crowd. 4 new portals opened from another side of the field. The new portals were like the ones that they had crossed across while arriving on Earth. The portals meant that there would be new allies that they hadn't seen before.

Chapter 674: The horn has been blown

As the portals opened, the 3 portals had humans who came out of it. One portal had people coming out with quadrilateral shaped hats on their top and clothing which was not conventional. The clothing could be said to be part of ancient Japanese Culture.

Another portal had people coming out which had weirder clothing from the first one. One wore bare minimum clothes, one didn't have a shirt, one wore tight-fighting dress and various others.

The other portal was more of a normal one as the humans who came out of it had a uniform who wore the same kind of dress. A white haori with traditional Japanese clothing inside.

They were all unique in their own ways and many could feel that the new people who had arrived were powerful.

As expected they were the 5 kages with their advisors, the captains of all the divisions and the fairy Tail guild from Asgard. Till now Fairy Tail had been away from the normal fight and they only looked after the 10 realms safety and security but this time John had decided for their involvement.

And the last portal was rather big. There was a reason for this was that there weren't humans who had arrived from the portal. These were animals of huge size that had arrived.

Yep, you guessed it right, John had called some of the powerful Pokemons over. Arceus, Ho-Oh, Darkrai and some other ones who could fit inside the Harvester without causing any damage to the surroundings.

John wanted to include everyone in this and thus didn't hesitate to bring in everyone, so that in the war he could easily say that everyone volunteered. The crowd was taken aback by the inclusion of weird looking animals and from the looks of it these animals weren't like normal ones and some might be really powerful as Professor X could easily tell that some of the animals were psychic.

This was a new revelation for them and from the power that was oozing out of them, few of them are of his level. (yes, I know many will say Mew and Mewtwo are more powerful than Professor X, but in comics he once brought down Phoenix Force to its knees (Scott was the host) So he is powerful even if the movies hasn't shown much)

Seeing the new people, 616-Professor X, 616-Captain America and others approached the new visitors in order to get acquainted. John hoped that everyone could get accustomed to each other and have an open mind.

Professor X of both the worlds approached the Pokemons with the help of John's universe professor X. Since the X-men of their own universe had become accustomed with Pokemons by now they were easily able to communicate. Though the Pokemons normally didn't find it hard to communicate, it was only possible when it came to basic things.

Some Pokemons would always find it difficult to communicate in a detailed way and the Professors were able to close down the gap for everyone present. Some of the Pokemon who had arrived were cute like Mew, who loved pranking people and its smile was very contagious so the women loved it.

Mewtwo was a Guardian of Oa so it had its own pride.

This was a new kind of world for everyone and John just smiled looking at it. He never expected that there would come a day when the multiverse would have to be introduced to his summons. This was a new thing even for John.

As people got into talks, the Harvester had slowly started travelling in the universe and was on its way to the crack. It would take some time to reach so everyone was allowed to roam the spaceship and was offered various entertainment in their journey.

Food, drinks, gyms and even entertainment sections were available in the spaceship and all were happy to see such kinds of facilities in this big spaceship. The aliens were working for all of their enjoyment and everyone was in a fun mood as they looked at the passing stars outside.

None of them talked about the mission or the crack. They could feel that it might be their last form of enjoyment in a long time and thus everyone was having a time of their life.

After a few hours of travel, they were finally reaching the edges of the Void and they could already see another spaceship that was of the same model as their spaceship. They could also see the huge barrier from their window.

The barrier was so huge that they couldn't see the ends of it from any direction. And even from far they could see the crack that had appeared on the Wall. The crack had grown larger over the course of time and they didn't have any idea of how long the Wall could hold.

The Harvester finally stopped after being docked through a huge tunnel between the two Harvesters. It was done so that people from both the spaceships could travel between each other.

As the previous Harvester already had a place of theirs and it had a huge place just like the other Harvester, the others came forward to explore the same old spaceship. Though it was of almost the same model, being an alien tech they were all curious and looked around.

John had given them time to settle and move around and even allowed them to go and see the crack and feel the energy and even try to seal the crack.

For example, Byakuya was the first to go out and look at the crack. He felt it was embarrassing that the 0th squad had to come down to seal the crack and they were blot in the name of Soul Society.

But after seeing that even the 0th Squad shaking their head, did he calm down a bit. Though his version of anger was more of a passive one and him being highborn also played its role.

Such examples were all over the place as even Gray and from Fairy Tail Master Makarov came to look upon the Wall. The Wall was made of magic and various other elements so they tried their best magic to seal the crack. But like always it failed and the expansion of it never stopped.

John gave all of them a full day to look and explore around, even allowing them to go to a distant void with proper equipment and look into the other places of the Wall.

The next day, everyone was called in Harvester 1.

Everyone freshened up and came to a huge gathering. The aliens of the ship had provided a chair for everyone in the open field of grass. There was a huge stage upfront and everyone could get to see the people on the stage easily.

This was a big event but all could understand the gravity of the situation. Many have heard the murmurs going around and they soon realized that this shit was serious and from here on out there was no turning back.

"Welcome everyone. Welcome to the Wall and the spaceship called the Harvester..."

"Many of you are a little confused and don't understand why your bosses have asked for all of you to undertake such a long and far journey. We are sorry for that as we have called you out in such a short notice but this is important enough to all of you to know what we are facing or should I say what we will be facing."

"Few months ago the two universes heroes came together to fight an evil being called Knull. In all sense it was not a hard fight and we won the war easily. It was not much of a hassle for us but it did cause panic. But we made a mistake. We killed Darkness."

There was a murmur in the crowd. They could understand that an evil being called Knull but what they didn't understand was what Darkness was.

"Darkness is a symbiote being or an entity that exists in the multiverse. Think Darkness as evil and light as good. Our multiverse always needs balance. And both of them maintained that balance. So in that war we tilted the balance in the good side. Normally we should rejoice as we obliterated an evil being but as I said the multiverse needs a balance we tilted the balance."

"Now comes the problem of crack. All of you have been briefed over the Wall, the multiverse and this crack that we are seeing. After the death of Darkness, the crack has been expanding at a rapid pace. With the use of magic, technology and other things we have been able to slow down the process but this isn't enough. It will soon be as huge as a door and beings that are trapped in the Wall will ultimately come out."

"Now about the beings that are trapped in the Wall, I personally have been making a proper story or rather a movie on it. Both other universes have recently been bombarded with movies sponsored by the Stark Industries. I will advise all of you to go home and watch the movies for knowledge purposes. In a few months the beings that are trapped in the wall, their powers, their strength would be out for everyone to see."

"I know this sounds absurd but this is the fastest I can do for everyone to get an idea how powerful enemies we would be facing. Just retelling the story in my mouth isn't enough to describe the horrors of the enemies. And you must be thinking why I have suddenly brought you all on such short notice."

"Well, it's because we have already been visited by a person that resides in the Wall a few days ago."

Chapter 676: Preparations

There was an eerie silence when John finished those words. What John just said just blew their minds. When John called everyone, many of them thought that he had been contacted by OAA or other supreme entities and it has given rise to new problems or even new cracks in the Wall.

But they never expected this.

A person from the Wall had arrived and they couldn't even see how he did it.

"What the hell are you talking about?" one person couldn't hold it together in this eerie silence and spoke up.

"You heard me right. I met him 2 days ago. Don't worry, the person who arrived was friendly and there was nothing that we could have done to stop his arrival. He is commissioned by the Wall to travel the multiverse and record different multiverses. More particularly dying multiverses. Yes, you heard me right... Dying multiverses... We don't have much to live."

John paused after saying this. There was silence again in the huge field. But it only lasted for a second and then a huge uproar occurred. John's words could be described as too blasphemous even for the heroes present. Only the leaders of the organisations were silent and had a gloomy look on their faces.

They had already expected this. Even after 3 months there had been no progress in their research and Reed even declared that it might even take him 100 years more to completely understand the wall and even then he wasn't sure if he would be able to repair the Wall.

This was a shock to many but the other scientist who accompanied him knew that whatever Reed said was true. Even Mayuri, who had so much arrogance worked with Reed to find a solution but there was none and all were just now trying to slow the process instead of repairing the Wall.

But it was still expanding and as the days went by, the crack was picking up pace.

"Silence." 616-Professor X spoke telepathically to everyone and forced them to calm down. There was too much noise. They needed to calm down and listen to John.

"The person who visited us goes by the name The Chronicler. As his name suggests he is given the role of writing down the stories of the multiverse in his book. That is his work and only visits the multiverse when it is in the verge of death. So going by the general assumption we are facing death. Death of the multiverse. But we can survive."

John stopped after saying this. He could see that his last sentence had brought hope back to the people present. They were looking at him with the hope that this person who had arranged such a huge meeting and even rallied their leaders to follow him might have a solution.

"There is a solution. To all of it. But for that we might have to fight for it. Fight for everything and only then we might be able to survive all of this."

There was murmur in the crowd this time. Professor X had given their body control back to them. He had only controlled them for a few seconds.

"We will fight till our death. I have my children waiting for me at home. I don't want to see their death in this lifetime. I would rather die first then see that. I will do anything to save the multiverse."

"I have my parents waiting for me at home. Dad might be a little pain in the ass sometimes but I will do anything possible to see them alive. I am in."

Such brave words were spoken by any and almost all of them volunteered. Since their leaders had vouched for John and many of them had seen how John had worked with them before, they trusted him. Actually most of them were grateful to him instead of harbouring hatred for him.

If John hadn't called all of them and informed them of their crisis, they would never have known. At least now they know and can act on it. After seeing the Wall they were all motivated to work to save the multiverse. Or rather their own universe.

"Good, I am glad that you all are on board with it. Now comes the main point. All of you will have to start preparing for the War. The shinobi and the Seireitei world will be tasked for preparations. The science division of Seireitei will be tasked to work with the scientists of multiple worlds to make proper equipment. Our world has no shortage of money or rather our company doesn't have any shortage. The war will need capital and we have lots of it. The others will be asked to make preparations of their own and be on alert always. As we speak I am also working in multiple fronts to gain more support from wherever possible."

"Doubt not, this war will be a long and harsh one. Many might die, and even I might die. But I promise that we will do our best to save this multiverse."

Chapter 677: Courage

After this Clark came forward to speak his mind and boost the morale of the crowd present. They have come a long way from home and all they received was one shock after another. They needed to calm their minds and give hope to them.

They have been really far away from home and tossed among the people who came from different universes. This was already overwhelming for them and after what John said about the future, if the people present were normal human beings they probably would have broken down mentally.

The future was something that should always be a mystery and never spoken about. If a person gets to know the date of his death, he would probably go crazy little by little. Knowledge of the past and future isn't always good for everyone. It was one of the reasons why Gods don't try to peek into the future too much and don't trust it most of the time. Kang was one of the people who had looked into the future.

And he had gone crazy!!!

So it was better to help the people to be mentally stable. Even Wayne came forward to speak about his plans and try to divert the situation from the horrible death that was waiting for them. Though the general knowledge of the death of the multiverse wasn't good for everyone, John had watched too many movies and comics to see that if in future there wasn't any trust between the members it would never go down well.

Though it was hypocritical of John to think that as he had hidden the greatest secret of his but in the end many of the superheroes had always hidden their means of power. John's source of power had always been vague and it wasn't like he was manipulating people blatantly.

He had given almost full freedom to everyone and only for villains did he stop his hands.

The meeting went on for more than 2 hours where many of the people raised their hands to ask about the doubts about the Wall and other related matters. John had been patient about the questions and he answered whatever he could. At the beginning, the people weren't responsive as they were still trying to digest what they came to know, but soon after initial trouble all calmed down and tried to gain as much knowledge as possible of the future.

After the whole discussion John finally said

"I will suggest everyone to go through the movies that I have made for all of you to get a more graphic picture of the things and enemies we might face. And also the future series, which will come out in 2 years. According to my calculations and precognition there is still time for the war to erupt and thus giving us time to prepare. I hope everyone will go through the movies and series to know your allies and work accordingly."

Everyone was confused by such a weird request from John as they didn't understand why movies and series were important but they didn't question it. Since he said it was important they might just look over all and get an idea.

In this way the greatest meeting of all of the superheroes of their multiverse ended. This meeting was the first one of its kind and it happened at the Void. Such a situation had never happened before so it was a new thing for many.

Even Oblivion felt that this meeting was too huge and John overdid it but he didn't call it out.

The people were allowed to stay at the harvester for two more days to see if there was anything they could do to contribute to the research that was going on near the Wall.

John meanwhile had returned to his home to work on his series. There was still a lot to do. When he returned, there were many who had seen the Chronicler so they were curious about the person but none had the guts to question John.

Not even the famous actors who were playing the great superheroes in the series.

Finally after a few days of awkward mood at work, Kevin approached John and asked who that person was in front of the whole public.

"Sir, can you tell us about the person who had visited. I know it might be very top secret but everyone here is curious. Everyone present here is binded by the laws that whatever happens in the studio and shooting will be a top secret so you don't have to fear that any secret will ever leak out."

John, who had been working all these days, was surprised that they had the courage to ask him. All this time, everyone present had been seeing him from the glasses of worship. When Constantine had arrived the last time many had seen him. After all these years many present here had known that he was an Avenger but none had asked him of his other 'work'.

This was a first.

Chapter 678: Release of 1st series

"Do you really want to know who the person was?" John asked while he eyed everyone present in the huge set where they were shooting. Everyone tried to avoid his eyes but he could already see the curiosity of all present. All this time he could easily tell that they were curious but nobody approached him.

Only Kevin had the courage. John sighed a bit. He knew that he needed to speak up here for a bit. It wouldn't matter anyway because soon they will know of the person who had appeared.

"He is named as the Chronicler. Think of him as an observer. I think some of you who have read the script of the second series know who he is."

Kevin shuddered when he heard John say that. In the script that John had given them, there was an entity who was named as such, but since the story is much in the future he didn't give much importance to it. But now that he knew who he was, he could easily recognize the being who had appeared a few days ago.

Kevin had a bad feeling when he recognized him. The Chronicler in that script has very little screen time but his presence explained many things and showed who was actually controlling the multiverse.

John didn't speak more words about it. The next series would be out soon so he didn't need to explain much. He knew that the knowledge of the Chronicler would scare many people present but there was nothing he could do. All he could control was the spread of knowledge and he would make sure that the more general public would never know of top secrets.

"Let's get to work, people." John said as he got to work again with the others. This shoot was tiring for many people as they were on a tight schedule but everyone was happy to see an epic series come to life so everyone gave their 100%.

In this way more months flew by.

The shinobi world was totally busy with the preparations for the War. America Chavez actually decided to live in their world as she had to open the multiverse for war preparations as help was arriving from two universes. The preparation was working in full-fledged mode.

Factories were made to make new weapons for the shinobis and the normal superheroes. Tony Stark of all three universes were personally working on this. All the three universes Wakanda was also ready to provide Vibranium whenever needed.

Every single superhero, shinobi, magicians from Asgard and even the Shinigamis were now busy getting themselves ready while John and others looked over their Earth.

After 8 months of work on the series, the first series was finally out. The people had worked tremendously hard to work on this series and it was the most anticipated series of that year. Disney had hyped the series by a whole new degree claiming this was a masterpiece and would easily cross the expectations of the fans.

Since it was a series and was made on the budget of movies for every episode, the actors, directors and everyone related to the series claimed that this series would blow their minds. Even Justice League : Apokolips War would fade in front of this story. But Disney had also asked for people to have a general idea of the series of Justice League Unlimited as many characters from that series would also play here in live action.

Since it was a series release on Disney+ (Disney please don't sue me) everyone could watch the series while sitting at home cosily with their family. By now technology was more common to the people than John's previous world. Even the poor had access to high end mobiles and the middle class people could easily have holographic watches.

This was a new age that they were living in. All thanks to the Avengers and Umbrella.

Tony had asked for the concurrent release of the series in all 3 universes at the same time so Disney management had to work overtime to complete the distribution.

On a chilly night of December, all the Avengers had arrived at the House of Mysteries. They had arrived early in the morning and it was only a few minutes before the release of the whole series. They had all decided to binge watch the series together.

Even the family members of the Avengers had shown up for the series. It wasn't a movie like always so they had decided to barge in the huge home of John to watch the series. Normally the Justice League had an idea of any series or movies related to them.

But not this one.

"How long is the series?"

"9 episodes!!"

"That's long!! I hope it is good."

"Does it matter? All you need to care about is that whatever you will be watching has already happened and I tried my best to portray what I had watched in my dreams."

Chapter 679: Death

All took their places in the big Hall. House of Mysteries already conjured comfortable cushions, beds and chairs for each and everyone so that they could watch the series in comfort. Even Morgan Stark who had come with Pepper was given a very comfortable place with Pepper and Audino volunteered to take care of the young child.

She was still very young and could hardly speak her words.

The series they had been waiting for finally started. Since there were no movies or series ever made on it and in order to fit the whole story of the DC universe, John had made some changes to fit his storytelling. There wasn't a huge deviation from the original storyline but he still had to touch on some things to make it more believable.

The exposition opened with a person speaking about the start of the multiverse.

"There was nothing but darkness when this multiverse had taken its birth. In order to fill the darkness, light had to be born. The color of the Light was white. It took its birth and defeated Darkness. But a single color of white light wasn't enough for the new multiverse so it broke down and formed the light that we now see on a rainbow. The seven prominent colors of the rainbow."

"Each colors had their own entites and thus these colors could form the lanterns. The color of Green was the most prominent since it was in the middle of the rainbow. It had more power and since it denoted the will of the multiverse, the Green Lantern Ring proved to be the most powerful rings among all the different colored Rings.

"The Guardians noticed this power of Green Will long and harnessed it for the safety of the universe and the multiverse. Everything was fine until all the different colored rings slowly rose and formed their own Lantern Corps.

"The Violet lanterns which denoted Love and had the Entity Predator."

"The Indigo Lanterns which denoted Compassion and had the Entity Proselyte."

"The Blue Lanterns which denoted Hope and had the entity Adara."

When people all over the world had started watching this, at first they were confused. They didn't expect a bunch of exposition in the beginning but none complained as it showed the origin of their universe and multiverse. When the part of Blue Lanterns came they could finally understand where one of the Avengers got her powers because many had noticed a person in blue light which had almost the same power of a Green Lantern but there was no explanation of it since the start.

Now they finally had an explanation of one of the powers of the Avenger.

"The Yellow Lantern which denoted Fear and had the entity Parallax"

"The Orange Lantern which denoted Greed or Avarice and had the entity Ophidian."

"The Red Lantern which denoted Rage and had the entity Butcher."

"And as we all have known and seen the Green Lanterns which had the Entity Ion. All these entities had existed since ancient times and these entities most of the time chose their hosts."

After this exposition, the story started with a small-time villain named William Hand which goes by the name Black Hand. Hand was born in a family which ran a mortuary. Since the beginning, the young Hand was always obsessed with dead bodies and he had a huge love for death. The family found it very odd and took him to many psychiatrists.

But nothing came out of it. Later the family accepted it and went on as normal. But one day he was met with one alien named Atrocitus. He was a convict who had been running around. When he came across Hand he declared that Hand was evil and had a darkness in him. So he should be obliterated.

So he tried to kill Hand with a weapon. But at that moment, The Green Lanterns showed themselves as Atrocitus was a convict from space and Hand in the middle of it was able to hide the weapon of Atrocitus.

And from that point onwards with that weapon he started his journey as villain. Over time he came across many superheroes. He even once was able to fight toe to toe against Hal Jordan.

"Jordan, a small timer made you run for money. You should up your game." Natasha couldn't help but mock the famous Green Lantern.

"It's my other version. Not me."

But he was never happy with what was happening in the world. There have been various deaths of superheroes over time but no permanent death for them. Many had died but they all came back to life. Hal died on one mission but he was brought to life. Clark died but he too was brought back to life.

He felt it was a mockery of Death. Death should have been the ultimate destiny of all living things and the Justice League had been mocking death over the years.

Chapter 680: All the colors

In the meantime there was a different scenario on Oa. There was a huge change because a Guardian of their own had betrayed them.

Scar was his name.

Betrayal would be a little tough word to explain in this situation. He had betrayed the Guardians because he was being controlled by someone or something and thus he was forced to do that. He killed two of the Guardians and imprisoned all the other Guardians. But that was not all that was happening in the universe.

There was a war happening. A war which involved almost all the Lanterns and it was happening between each other. Every other Lantern was fighting all the other Lanterns. This was happening in every sector of the universe and there was nothing that could be done to stop this.

As the Lanterns were fighting among themselves, a dark power was rising in one sector of the universe. With this the first episode ended. This episode was basically an exposition for the story and showing at what point of time the storyline was.

Only thing that's constant in the series was chaos. Many superheroes were dead like Batman (Batman isn't exactly dead. He is being sent to the past and he is trying to get back to the present timeline. This happened because Darkseid used Omega Beam on him in the Final Crisis. Final Crisis, the Blackest Night and the Darkest Night (Death metal) are all connected. I am not explaining Final Crisis as it is not important for the story and only the other two series are being explained here. Blackest Night is important because it is time that the most powerful Lanterns to rise).

The people who were watching had a sense of fear onto them. Even ordinary people. Until now there had been no permanent death among the Avengers. Now, this story had started in a very dark tone with their main hero Batman being dead.

This showed that even superheroes were not eternal.

Then the second episode started with many people gathering to mourn the death of many superheroes. In the meantime, Black Hand had gone totally insane. He had been obsessed with death to such heights that he went to his home to kill everyone in his family.

And if that wasn't enough, at the end he killed himself with the same weapon that he had been using all this time to cause horror and notorious works over time. And his death blew the final nail in the coffin.

His death gave rise to the connection of an old Entity that represented Death itself.

Nekron.

He was the person chosen to bring Nekron to this universe and thus he was given the power to wield the Black Lantern. The Black Lantern had a very unique power. The power to bring death to work for the Lantern Ring.

In other words, the Lantern Ring could turn a dead person into a zombie. A zombie which had all the characteristics of the dead person when he or she was alive. This changed everything. All the dead heroes that had been dead for a long time were coming back to life.

Superman from Earth 2 who had died long ago in the Final Crisis had risen from the dead (I am not sure where he died as there were so many versions of him that I don't remember).

Aquaman who had died had come back to life.

The Martian Manhunter who had died also came back to life.

Hawkman, Plastic Man (Imagine Reed Richards) and many other superheroes who had died had come back to life.

And they were hunting for flesh and heart. Only that would satiate their hunger. Only by doing that the zombies would be more powerful, making the Lantern Rings more powerful and at the end providing more power to Nekron to fulfil what he was meant to do.

Death to the universe.

This was chaos all over with fights happening in every place and superheroes trying their best. Flash and Hal were fighting Martian Manhunter (his power is like Vision with weakness of fire and also a telepath).

Superman and his son were fighting Superman from Earth 2. Even his dog Krypto had joined this fight. (If you remember that cartoon show of Krypto the super dog)

It took 3 more episodes to portray all the fights between superheroes. Every superhero was given time to show their powers and fight till the end. It was blood all over and from the looks of it the superheroes were finding it difficult to stop this sudden invasion of zombies.

And top of it the other people were killing their fellow countrymen. The more people were facing death, the more the power of the Black Lantern was rising. Superman and other superheroes were able to stop their opponents but they could already see that their fight was far from over.
