Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1149

Chapter 1149 Ninian could not be in a relationship when her career was developing. It would affect her reputation.

However, if her boyfriend was Everett, the ban would nearly be equivalent to non-existent.

After all, he was Everett!

He was the top in the entertainment industry and the benchmark in film and television. Nobody could surpass his reputation and fame in their industry.

Anyone slightly connected to him could instantly become famous.

Furthermore, being in a relationship was shocking news.

The agency and Amber would probably make Ninian the next top actress. Her fame would surge overnight from being in a defamed position. Then, her reputation would slowly turn and stabilize.

Her career would be much better than that of any other female celebrities.

But...

The starting phase of this route would be filled with countless curses, and it would also seem like she was using Everett to become famous.

Ninian would not be willing to do that.

That was what worried Nerola.

“It’s okay. Don’t worry.” As if Ninian could sense Nerola’s concerns, she spoke with a smile and a sharp gaze.

“When I signed the contract with the agency, I raised the condition that I won’t use Everett’s fame. Amber knows what I want, so she won’t act rashly.”

She had joined the entertainment industry because of Everett, so her interactions with Everett would definitely be frequent. As such, she had already taken prior measures to prevent the agency from using Everett to boost her fame. It was clearly written in her contract.

The condition just happened to solve the current issue.

If the agency and Amber really insisted on violating the contract, she would also dissolve the contract immediately. They would not gain any advantage, and they would also offend Everett as well as lose a potential artist like her.

Ninian guessed that Amber would not do such a thing to cause losses.

Indeed, it turned out as she had expected.

When Lana came back from making the call, she appeared to sigh in relief and said, “Amber explained that she’ll have to suppress the news. She asked me to be on alert and not to expose this.”

Hearing that, Ninian looked at Nerola, and both of their eyes were filled with satisfaction.

“Don’t worry about keeping this confidential ,” Nerola said. “Everett’s team is famous for its skills in the industry. If they want to suppress this, no paparazzi will dare to expose it. Ninian, you can relax and be in the relationship.”

Ninian pretended to fall into contemplative silence before she said, “Ahem, please keep it low-key.”

But she could not stop smiling no matter what.

After Nerola and Lana exchanged glances, they looked at Ninian like ruthless wolves.

“Now, please explain your crime honestly! Tell us how you got together!”

“Mention all the details clearly, or else, we’ll scratch you!”

The two of them rushed toward her simultaneously. When Ninian saw them, she screamed and ran away.

Laughter filled the apartment.

The next day, when Ninian returned to set and looked at Everett, she actually felt more affection for Everett after parting with him.

They had just been apart for one night, but it felt like a long time to her. She kept staring at Everett and refused to look away.

The new female lead had already joined the crew, so the scenes of her and Everett were mainly being filmed lately.

Meanwhile, Ninian was acting with the supporting cast in Team B. Therefore, despite being in the same crew, they might not be able to see each other all the time.

When she noticed that Everett was about to enter Team

A's shooting site, she pouted and felt a little gloomy.

Why did he not turn back and look at her? Did he not miss her?

While Ninian let her thoughts run wild, she suddenly heard an exclamation from the crowd.

She subconsciously raised her head and saw Everett abruptly walking toward her from not far away.

Everett was the most dazzling person in the crew, so almost everyone kept staring at him.

Right then, they all saw what he was doing.

Everett approached Ninian before their gaze of amazement. His tall figure hid the sunlight, and his indifferent aura also made Ninian subconsciously hold her breath.

She really did not expect him to openly walk over. After all, their relationship was a secret. If their interaction in public was too strange, their relationship would probably be exposed, affecting Everett's career as a result.

But Everett did not seem to care about that.

He raised his arm and helped Ninian tidy the bow on her head. He spoke only after he adjusted its position. "Wait for me. We'll have lunch together."

Ninian's mind went completely blank.

Her surroundings were full of different gazes, but nearly everyone widened their eyes in shock. They stared at the scene in disbelief.

Ninian was equally stunned.

She nodded almost subconsciously, unable to think at all.

Everett pursed his lips nonchalantly and flashed her a satisfied smile. "Good girl."

The crowd around was already looking at her in horror at this point.

Who was Everett? He was an infamous unpleasant demon in the entertainment industry! Outside the crew, no . stranger could be within three feet of him. Even the staff who had worked for him for many years could not approach him.

His mysophobia was severe, and he never made physical contact with anyone.

Yet, he actually took the initiative to go up to Ninian now. He even personally tidied her hair, invited her for lunch, and smiled with dotting affection!

The sun must be rising from the west. Everett had to be possessed!

Almost everyone watched Everett leave with a dazed and misty gaze.

Not far away, the female lead who saw the situation even nodded and smiled at Ninian, appearing friendly.

The female lead who had just joined the crew had not interacted with Ninian at all, yet she could tell that Ninian was close with Everett. Hence, she took the initiative to show her friendliness.

Others looked at her with complicated gazes; there was envy, jealousy, and contempt. Paul had the most intense gaze among them all. He seemed to be slightly agitated. His eyes were filled with shock, disbelief, and anger that were hard to mask.

Ninian was very sensitive to people's bad intentions. When she frowned and looked back, Paul acted completely natural. He seemed to be holding the script and reading, not noticing the situation there.

Ninian looked away and felt slightly puzzled.

Was she hallucinating again?

Lana got Ninian a glass of water. She looked a little nervous as she said, "Ninian, isn't Everett too high profile? It's very easy for the crew to see that something's going on!"

Ninian felt somewhat helpless too. "I don't know why he would—"

"Everett is really brave." Lana sighed in a low voice and showed her a big thumbs-up. "Are you going to have lunch with him at noon?"

Everett's actions earlier had already made many people speculate. If they had lunch together later, it would be equivalent to announcing their relationship.

Was it best to announce it now?

For one, Everett's fans would go insane and even unfollow him because of this. Ninian would have to bear pressure that was unimaginable for any regular person.

Therefore, Lana could not help but feel worried. "Sure. Why shouldn't I have lunch with him?" Ninian raised her eyebrows. Something crossed her beautiful eyes, and with a firm expression, she said "Since he's not afraid of this, why should I be afraid?"

As she spoke, she winked at Lana in an adorable but cunning way. Why should she be afraid?

At worst, she would just quit the entertainment industry and go home to inherit her family business.

When she thought of her family assets that were worth several hundred billion dollars, she was delighted. Haha!

Ninian did not care about it at all. She just walked straight to the shooting site.

Due to her slacking over the past few days, she was not at her best. Luckily, Paul, who was acting opposite her, did not seem to be at his best either. They shot the scene a few times but failed to get it right, so the associate director allowed them to rest for a while and recollect themselves while the other actors filmed their scenes first.

The associate director's attitude remained good as if he did not blame them too much, but Ninian still felt guilty. She held her script and practiced repeatedly in front of a mirror.

"Ninian."

Someone called her from the back. When Ninian turned around, she saw Paul walk over with the script and a tired expression.

“Is this a good time for you? I’d like to practice the scene with you,” Paul said.

Ninian nodded. “Great. I’d like to practice too.”

They practiced two scenes in a short time and finally improved a little. Ninian gently breathed out, and her furrowed eyebrows loosened up. “Thank you very much for your hard work!” Ninian chuckled and said to him.

Paul smiled as well, but his gaze was a little profound. “Ninian, are you very close with Everett? I remember you previously saying that you weren’t close with him.” Ninian frowned slightly and said, “We’re quite well acquainted.”

She could not accept Paul’s questioning tone. Even though she treated him as a friend, they were still not close to the extent that she had to report her personal life to him.

Most importantly, she did not like Paul’s gaze very much.

“What’s wrong?” Paul softly asked. “You seem upset with me.”

Ninian pursed her lips. “You’re overthinking it. I just don’t like being questioned.”

“Okay, I won’t question you,” Paul said. “Can we go back to our friendly relationship? It will be better for our acting.”

When Ninian heard that, she gave him a strange look.

He was saying such baffling things in a serious manner, and it really confused her. But when it occurred to her that this was work, she nodded and smiled politely.”

Okay.”

Paul finally smiled, looking as handsome and bright as he did before. “Do you have time tonight? I’d like to ask you out for dinner. Plus, we can also study the script,” he said.

Ninian contemplated for a while before she said, “I’m not sure yet. Can I get back to you later?”

“Sure.” Paul smiled and said, “Don’t feel stressed.”

Ninian nodded before she turned around and left.

She did not look back, but Paul slowly hid his smile, and gloom filled his face. With the practice during their break, Ninian and Paul quickly got into their roles and finished the scenes that they had to film.

Since Ninian was a supporting actress, she was not very busy. After she finished filming in the morning, she waited in the crew’s rest area.

Team A’s filming was also coming to an end. People came and left, and the staff started distributing lunch boxes.

Just as Ninian was about to get her lunch box, Zayn called out to her.

“Ms. Winters , your lunch is ready in Mr. Craig’s resting lounge.”

Ninian was momentarily stunned before her eyes crinkled in a smile as she said, “Thank you.”

When she arrived at Everett's private lounge, she scanned her surroundings curiously. Its interior was simple and clean, which fitted Everett's well-defined style.

A few exquisite dishes had been placed on the table, and they were kept warm on a hot plate. There were some scripts and documents on a small table not far away. Ninian walked over, picked up a script, and flipped through it. When she saw the dense notes on the script, a trace of awe crossed her eyes.

People said that Everett was gifted in acting, but who knew about the time and effort that he privately put in?

When she flipped through the script, a photo dropped out of the file. Ninian picked it up with curiosity, and she was surprised by what she saw.

The person in the photo was her. To be precise, it was her from many years ago.
