

My Lady is a Warrior Goddess

Chapter 18

Mrs. Clark shouted, "Senior Colonel Sherman, we, as the members of the Clark family, acknowledge our wrongdoings. I can give you the Clark family's heirloom if you can spare us!"

Family heirloom?

Dorothy raised her beautiful eyebrows and motioned for the bodyguards to halt.

The bodyguards all paused temporarily.

Since Mrs. Clark had taken the initiative to offer the family heirloom, it would save her a lot of trouble.

When the Clark family heard Mrs. Clark's decision, they were shocked.

"Mrs. Clark, please don't do that!"

"That's the foundation of the Clark family. We can't give it to them."

"Mrs. Clark, before death, Mr. Clark said that as long as the Clark family has someone capable of controlling that treasure, the Clark family can become the top family in Country Z! Mrs. Clark, I would rather be imprisoned than watch the hope of the Clark family be buried!"

Mrs. Clark was extremely unhappy.

She retorted, "Do you know what kind of place Northon Prison is? If I go in there, do you think I can come out alive? Do you want me to die?"

"Moreover, after all these years in the possession of the Clark family, who among us can truly control it? It can only fulfill its true purpose and maximum potential in the hands of Senior Colonel Sherman!"

"Senior Colonel Sherman, why don't I have my son bring it to you now?"

William looked at Dorothy.

Dorothy glanced at Leslie and said, "Go ahead."

The bodyguard then let go of Leslie.

Three minutes later, Leslie came out with a translucent white jade box in his arms.

He held the box and stood in front of William, reluctant to give it to him.

Finally, he made up his mind. He held the box with both hands and handed it to William, saying, "There has been no one in the Clark family who can control it for many years. I hope what my mother is right, that you can utilize its value and potential."

William did not answer him and turned to look at Dorothy instead.

Dorothy came over and took a look at the jade box in Leslie's hand. She then began to open it.

The next second, everyone in the scene couldn't help but hold their breath, and their eyes were full of strong desire!

Inside the jade box, a crystal-textured red token lay quietly.

There were many intricate and ancient patterns carved on the token, whereas a complex fire character was engraved in the center.

In Country Z, apart from warriors who constantly enhanced their physical strength, there existed a group of powerful individuals known as the Galaxy Emissary, or simply, the Emissary. They surpassed ordinary warriors by harnessing the power of star tokens in combat.

The Emissary all possessed star tokens and engaged in battles using those cards.

There were no more than ten Emissaries in the whole of County Z!

The Emissary could be said to be an overlord of an area!

In addition, whenever there was an Emissary in a family, Country Z would provide abundant resources to support them.

That was why Mr. Clark said that as long as there was someone in the Clark family who could control the star token, the Clark family could become a top family.

Dorothy looked at the treasure that she had hastily rushed back from the battlefield to search for. She couldn't help but feel her breathing quicken.

Not only was she an Emissary, but she also possessed the four-star tokens of the elements of metal, wood, water, and earth. As long as she gathered that fire element star token, she could reverse the passive state of Country Z on the battlefield!

Dorothy suppressed her excitement and picked up the star token in the jade box.

However, she furrowed her eyebrows the moment she picked up the star token.

Her gaze fell on the complicated and ancient runes on the lower right corner of the star token. She stared at them for a few seconds and sighed.

Sure enough, it was not so easy to collect all five star tokens.

However, thinking about it, it made sense. If there were no issues with that star token, someone from the Clark family would have been able to control it long ago, and they wouldn't have fallen into such a desperate state.

Dorothy looked at them and asked, "This star token has been sealed. Did the ancestors of the Clark family mention how to unseal it?"

"Sealed?" Leslie looked doubtful.

Seeing his expression, Dorothy already knew the answer.

She then scanned the expressions of the other members of the Clark family, but they all looked confused.

Apparently, the Clark family had no clue that the star token had been sealed.

Although Mrs. Clark was dissatisfied with Dorothy, she didn't dare to say anything. She looked at William with hope and asked, "Senior Colonel Sherman, we have already given you the star token. Can you let us go now?"

William didn't dare reply and looked at Dorothy.

Mrs. Clark grew increasingly anxious as William remained silent, causing her to feel even less at ease.

Just as she was about to talk again, Dorothy said indifferently, "You better thank the ancestors of the Clark family. If it weren't for this star token, the whole of the Clark family would have been in prison. However, in this case..."

She ordered the bodyguards, "Take Mrs. Clark, Margaret, and Martha to the Northon Prison and sentence them for insulting the Ministry of Defence!"

"As for the rest of the Clark family, you are all grounded and prohibited from stepping out of the Clark Mansion before I leave Northon City!"
