

Chapter 30

Lydia stared at Donald, who was kneeling to Dorothy, and her mind went blank.

Such a scene was completely beyond her expectations.

Wasn't Donald a Senior Colonel?

Why was he kneeling to Dorothy?

Could it be that that little b*tch was not only the leader of The Guardian, but also the commander of the Ministry of Defence? Was her position even higher than Donald's?

How was that possible?

Wasn't that little b*tch the most insignificant ant in a small family in Northon City? When did she have such powerful abilities?

Moreover, Dorothy was only 19 years old. How could she become a commander of the Ministry of Defence?

Colin was also confused!

He was completely dumbfounded!

When he discovered that Dorothy was the Master of The Guardian, he was already so shocked that he could not speak. At the moment, Donald's actions showed everyone that Dorothy's position might actually be higher than his.

Why was he there?

He had even asked her to run away several times before.

What a joke!

Moreover, he had even mentioned that he was the future master of the Rogers family in Imperial City. Those useless titles were nothing to Dorothy.

In the face of the Sherratt family in Northon City, it would be as easy for her to destroy them as if she was crushing an ant.

In that case, why was his presence needed?

Colin looked at Dorothy with a complicated expression. In the end, all his thoughts turned into a silent sigh.

Of course, the one with the most complicated emotions was undoubtedly Donald.

No matter what the situation was at the moment, as a member of the Sherratt family, he would never watch the Sherratt family be ruined like that, let alone watch Thomas and Howard die.

He looked up at Dorothy and pleaded bitterly, "Your Excellency, I only have two relatives, Howard and Thomas. Please let them go. I beg you!"

At that moment, Donald's originally righteous face appeared a lot older, as if he had suffered a lot.

Dorothy looked at him indifferently, and her expression remained unchanged. "Yesterday, I let Howard live for your sake, but they didn't cherish it!"

After that, she looked at Celestine and Uriel beside her and ordered calmly, "Go!"

Donald's heart was almost in his throat.

He couldn't watch his loved ones get killed just like that.

He stared fixedly at Dorothy and tried his best to say, "Even if your title is higher than mine, you're turning a blind eye to the law if you kill people in public!"

Hearing that, Dorothy smiled.

She looked at Donald coldly and questioned in an indifferent tone, "Law? Are you talking about the law with me now?"

"When your son almost drained my brother's blood, did he ever think of the law?"

"Did your good brother and son ever think about the law when they brought hundreds of people with them to kill me?"

"If I was an ordinary person, I would have died long ago, and you would have only watched all this from behind, right? Would you think of the law then?"

"What a joke for a group of defeated soldiers to bring up the law with me!"

"Was the law made by your family? You use it when you need it, but disregard it like a piece of trash when you don't!"

"Senior Colonel Sherratt, you must be dreaming!"

Donald was rendered speechless by her words.

However, he said righteously, "They are just ordinary people of Country Z, and you are a senior commander of the country. How can you compare with them? What you say and do represents the authority of Country Z. If you insist on hurting them today, then you can do so over my dead body."

"Otherwise, no one can hurt them!"

Even though Donald knew that his words could make Dorothy charge him with the offense of contradicting his superior, that was nothing compared to the lives of his relatives.

Dorothy's gaze grew colder and colder. "What if I insist on killing them?"

The only thought Donald had was to save his family members.

He looked firmly at Dorothy. "Since that's the case, I'll have to report this matter to Field Marshal Walter and let him handle it."

He knew that Dorothy was only one step away from the Field Marshal. At a critical moment, her position would be unstable if she made a mistake.

Moreover, killing Howard and Thomas was strictly against the law of Country Z. If word of it was spread, she would be greatly implicated.

He thought that Dorothy would not want to disturb the Field Marshal because of that matter.

Moreover, Dorothy had said before that she would not show Walter any respect. By that time, as long as Donald inadvertently revealed those words, it would be regarded as Dorothy insulting her superior.

Then, Dorothy would no longer need to think about maintaining the position of Field Marshal!

Thinking of that, Donald regained his confidence.

He straightened his back and stared sharply at Dorothy.

He was waiting for Dorothy to change her decision to kill Thomas and Howard.

At the same time, he was also waiting for Dorothy to beg him not to mention the matter to Walter.

However, Dorothy didn't react as per his expectations. There was even a hint of mockery in her eyes. "Oh? You want to let Walter deal with this?"

After that, she turned her head slightly, looked at a big tree not far away, and said slowly, "Field Marshal, have you seen enough?"

"Come out if you've had enough."
