

Chapter 41

"Miss Rogers, I didn't manage my subordinates well. I'm sorry for causing you any inconvenience!"

Boom!

The people around were shocked by Graham's words in an instant.

Who was Graham?

He was the general manager of Global Palace Hotel!

At the same time, he was also an existence that the first-tier families in Northon City had to respect!

However, such a person was apologizing to a young girl in the most humble manner at that moment.

Moreover, the reason for his apology was that he didn't manage his subordinates well and he didn't go to greet her in person?!

Were they dreaming? Or was there something wrong with Graham's brain?

Not far away, Connie stared blankly at Graham, who was bowing deeply to Dorothy. The smile on her face froze.

Even as the daughter of the Crawford family, she was not qualified to have Graham welcome her at the door!

Moreover, she did not doubt that Graham would punish a waiter if the waiter offended her in the hotel. However, that was all she would get. He wouldn't apologize to her in person.

As for Dorothy, she was merely a criminal who had just been released from the Northon Prison a few days ago!

What right did she have for Graham to apologize to her in such a way when she took the initiative to hit someone?

Before Connie could come to her senses, Graham turned to Ethan and the group of guards and scolded them.

"What are you waiting for? Apologize to Miss Rogers!"

"If you can't get Miss Rogers's forgiveness today, you can just get out of here!"

When Ethan and the guards around heard Graham's words, they quickly recovered from the great shock.

Ethan didn't hesitate at all and quickly looked at Dorothy.

"Miss Rogers, I didn't consider things thoroughly today. I didn't mean to offend you. Please forgive me this time."

Although Ethan didn't know why Graham was so afraid of Dorothy, he knew he would lose his hard-to-come-by job if he didn't follow Graham's orders.

Hearing Ethan's words, all the bodyguards nodded and followed suit.

In fact, they were still confused until now.

Hadn't Graham told them before that everyone had to abide by the rules of the hotel and be driven out?

Moreover, Dorothy was the one who took the initiative first!

They were just going to control Dorothy according to the rules. How could it be their fault now...

Dorothy glanced at Ethan and the guards indifferently and then said to Graham.

"That's enough. They were doing things fairly. If I really wanted to make things difficult for them, their arms may not be on their bodies now."

Graham's breathing hitched.

That was because he knew Dorothy's identity, so he did not doubt the authenticity of her words.

In the next moment, he quickly looked at Ethan and the guards and said to them.

"Hurry up and thank Miss Rogers for showing mercy!"

Ethan and the bodyguards quickly nodded.

"Thank you, Miss Rogers..."

Although the guards said so, some disdain flashed in their lowered eyes.

They had seen people who bragged, but they had never seen someone who was so good at boasting!

Had it not been for the arrival of Graham, their arms would no longer be on their bodies?

Did she think that they, professional guards, were made of thin paper?

For a young girl like her, any one of them could press her to the ground and take her down.

Seeing the expressions of the guards, Graham frowned again.

However, it was not suitable for him to teach his subordinates a lesson on such an occasion.

Therefore, he just smiled apologetically at Dorothy and then said to her.

"Miss Rogers, I'm really sorry about what happened before. Now I'll take you to the best seat!"

Dorothy nodded.

Then, under everyone's gaze, she followed Graham to the front of the crowd.

From that seat, she could witness the lucky one who would be chosen to get a place in the middle-level college in Imperial City!

However, just as Dorothy sat down, a hotel waiter suddenly ran over.

After he whispered a few words in Graham's ear, the latter's expression suddenly changed.

After that, he looked at Dorothy with some embarrassment.

"If you have something to do, you can go and deal with it first!"

Dorothy looked at him and said indifferently.

"It's something tricky. Thank you for your understanding, Miss Rogers."

Seeing Dorothy nod, Graham heaved a sigh of relief.

Later, he turned his head and seriously told Ethan and the guards not to neglect Dorothy. Then, he turned around and left the banquet hall.

After Graham had left for a while, whispers began to rise around them.

"Didn't you say that she just came out of prison a few days ago? How could Mr. Stephens be so polite to her?"

"Who is she? Is she a lady from a big family in another city?"

Upon hearing those words, the expressions of some people who looked at Dorothy changed.

However, some of Dorothy's junior high school classmates who knew her couldn't help but snort coldly.

However, due to Graham's warning, they didn't dare to reveal Dorothy's identity.

While many people were looking at Dorothy with increasingly puzzled expressions, an elderly figure suddenly walked in from outside the hall.

His gaze slowly swept over everyone and soon landed on Dorothy, who was sitting in the most conspicuous position.

He frowned, then walked up to Dorothy and asked,

"Which family are you from?"

Everyone in the banquet hall was slightly stunned when they saw the old man.

Wasn't that old man the butler of the Wilkins family, Patrick Wilkins?

Before the invitations to the banquet were sent out, they had been checked by him.

However, now, Patrick asked that question.

Could it be that the woman had snuck in?

"Mr. Patrick, her name is Dorothy. She's from the Clark family."

Before Dorothy could speak, Connie, who was still half kneeling in front of Patricia, hurriedly spoke.

After that, she looked sadly at Patricia, who was in front of her, and her tone was full of worry and anger.

"Mr. Patrick, she just knocked out my friend. Please help me find a doctor to do an emergency treatment for her. Otherwise, I don't know if my friend can hold on until the ambulance arrives."

When Patrick heard Connie's words, his expression suddenly turned cold.

He first ordered the Wilkins family staff members around him to find a doctor.

Then, his cold and sharp eyes suddenly fell on Dorothy.

"The Wilkins family didn't invite anyone from the Clark family at all. Men, capture this nobody who snuck into the banquet to make trouble!"

When the dozen or so Wilkins family guards standing around the banquet hall heard that, they immediately stood up and surrounded Dorothy.

The hotel guards quickly looked at Ethan.

Ethan hesitated for a moment, then shook his head at them.

That was the Wilkins family's banquet. They had no reason to stop the Wilkins family from driving away those who had snuck in.

Seeing that, the hotel guards looked at Dorothy's face and immediately looked gloating.

They wanted to see just how miserable the fate of the woman, who claimed to be able to easily remove their arms, would be in the hands of the Wilkins family guards, whose strength was comparable to theirs.

As for the others in the banquet hall, their eyes were filled with disdain and contempt as they looked at Dorothy.

"I thought she really had a powerful background. It turns out that she is from the Clark family, a second-rate family!"

"I heard that the Clark and the Wilkins families have always been at odds with each other, but she still insisted on attending the Wilkins family's banquet. She is too shameless."

"I'm afraid she must be interested in the admission qualification of the middle-level college in Imperial City!"

"Haha! Even if Mr. Wilkins wants to give out a medium-level college spot in Imperial City, it's not something a person of her background can get, okay? She's shooting way out of her league!"

Connie's smile deepened as she looked at the Wilkins family guards rapidly approaching Dorothy.

Heh!

What an idiot!

So what if Dorothy managed to win Graham's respect through some underhanded means?

At the end of the day, Dorothy's background meant that she had a limited future!

Did Dorothy really think that just because Graham was on her side, she could make people think that she was in the upper class?

That day, the reality would show her that no matter how bold she was, because she was from the Clark family, she could only be a humble second-rate b*stard.

She would never be able to become a superior!

She was even less qualified to get an invitation from the Wilkins family!

However, just as the sarcasm on Connie's face became more and more obvious...

Dorothy glanced indifferently at the people of the Wilkins family who were almost in front of her, and then suddenly raised her hand.

In the next moment.

The gold invitation card, which represented the most important guests, suddenly flew towards Patrick's face.

Slap!

The hard invitation card hit Patrick's face, making a clear sound.

Then...

The invitation slipped down from Patrick's face.

Before Patrick could react, a cold voice that seemed to pierce through people's hearts slowly came out of Dorothy's mouth.

"No invitation card? Open your eyes wide and see what it is."

Send Gift

Comments

 Watch Ads to Get 8 Vouchers