Chapter 381

381-The Wicked Revenge

It took Hazel about two hours to finish the spell. She kept crying for her daughter's future, as she knew her daughter would face a lot of challenges now. "See! It wasn't that hard, was it?" Shaun grabbed the book out of her hands and gave her a smile.

"Now! You are free," he said, watching her get on her feet to approach him.

"Please promise me my daughter will remain safe." She met her palms before him and begged for Enya's safety.

"Look! She will be fine. My son will make sure she doesn't die. I mean, she will be the source of power for him. He will be an idiot to get rid of her— so soon!" He said with a wide grin on his lips. Hazel's heart sank in her chest upon hearing those words.

"But that is so far away. Your daughter will grow up, get marked by him, and live some happy days. As for now, let's talk about us-," he whispered huskily, putting his finger under her chin and raising her face.

"What do you mean?" Hazel shook her head to get away from his touch and looked at him disgustingly.

"Oh, come on! You really thought I would let you live after you just told me you were planning to run away from me?" Saying those words, he instantly brought a knife out and stabbed her. She was so confused that she couldn't even respond to him properly.

Enya's POV:

"Let me go!" I tried to fight it, but the restraints were pretty tightly wrapped around my wrist.

"I cannot. You have to make a decision. Listen to me carefully," she let out a sigh when I demanded to be set free. It was as if she wanted me to willingly listen to her, even after the fact that she had kidnapped me.

"If you want your mates to be free of this curse, you need to be a good person and give back all the powers. Everything will be sorted out by itself." She rubbed her palms together, preparing to grab something from the table on her left side.

"This! It is your blood. If I want, I can do worse things with you. But I am giving you a chance to do the right thing and let go of these powers." She was starting to sound rushed. She would constantly turn around to look outside the window and then look at me.

"Fine. But I will speak to Mother Witch myself." I stopped struggling and demanded to have a word with Mother Witch. Hearing her name made Moana's face take on an expression of disappointment.

“You said I needed to give the powers back, so I am ready to do it for the sake of my mates. But I will only give them back until she comes and talks to me,” I repeated my demand, watching her click her tongue and let out a sigh of disapproval.

Lazlo's POV:

I walked into the academy, making my way to the room with my heart pounding in my chest.

Taking steps briskly, I marched around the hallways in anger.

'I couldn't believe she asked me to reject her. I repeated her words in my head, and the same striking pain of rage hit me as before.

her.

'It is not like you were nice to her, either.' Laz, instead of taking sides with me, blurted out as if he didn't remember why we were so mad and angry with her.

'What do you mean by that?' I frowned, slowing down to give him a better response.

'Your behavior changed so drastically with her,' Laz said, forgetting why.

'But it's not like I didn't have a reason to be upset with her. But how did she say it so casually, as if-', I shut up when I realized I was making no sense? I was the one who was second-guessing my relationship with Enya, and now I was the one going mad crazy just at the thought of her leaving me.

'Could it be Corbin?' I stopped dead in my tracks when his name popped up in my head.

'Huh?' Laz sighed.

I got up on my feet the moment she set me free.
"Where are you? Show yourself," I screamed, huffing and panting in fright. No matter how hard I tried to look for them, all I could see were figures made of mist. They were able to touch me, but I couldn't touch them.
'We need to leave,' Nia suggested, waking up from her deep slumber and acknowledging the mess Moana had caused for us.

'It is not like we can hide. These things will cause terror. The entire world's order will be ruined,' I complained, running out of the room and looking for a way to stop this madness.

"Argh!" an agonizing scream left my lips when a white witch, dressed up in a grey and white gown, attacked me. She hit me in the stomach and knocked me down.

I raised my hand, and that's when I was able to blow her away. I couldn't cause them any damage, but I could push them away.

I staggered to my feet and began rushing to the stairs. They kept coming after me. There seemed to be no way to kill them entirely, and that's what left me at a disadvantage.

"Ah!" A white witch grabbed me by the back of my neck and dragged me upstairs again. I was so focused on attacking the witches that were trying to come for me from the front that I couldn't blow away the one holding me by my neck.

385-Let's Go Home Now.

She didn't tell me what she meant by that, and I couldn't ask her because we had reached the academy. The whole ambiance had changed. We were able to hear the screams even outside the academy. Lazio and I bolted towards the entrance and found everyone trying to fight to their best abilities.

I whistled, and the witches scattered around for some time. The students approached me after realizing I could help them.

I wasn't sure how long I could keep doing that.

We reached our floor and found everyone gathered in that same hallway.

"Enya!" the principal approached me with much hope in his eyes. "Help us," he said, and I gave him a faint nod.

"Are you okay?" Corbin pushed the principal aside to inquire about my wellbeing.

"I am fine. Maybe we can use some loud music to get them distracted. It seems like they are more sensitive to sound," I advised, and everybody got to work gathering all the speakers they could find to adjust them on the floor below ours. The moment they played the music, the witches slowed down, but it also started giving others headaches.

"What do we do now?" Lazio asked, standing beside me and helping the wounded students around.

"I don't know." I shook my head. "I really have no idea what we can do," I confessed.

I didn't shift entirely but used Nia's powers to sprint to my home. It took me about twenty minutes, and now I was at the door. Corbin had gone back after I told him to take care of the academy. He didn't have to accompany me, since I was the only one who could find the book of spells. I needed him to secure the academy and maybe make wonderful decisions along with Lazio. I was also worried about Lazio's safety, so the two of them together might help each other survive.

'Okay! Let's look around. Nia! I want you to stay awake and keep a close eye on me just in case I get distracted,' I told Nia before I started looking around.

The house was so filled with memories, but I couldn't remember anything at that moment. Maybe a part of me didn't even want to recall anything anymore.

It took me a lot of courage to enter my room. The cold breeze stuck inside felt like it had been waiting for someone to open the door and free it.

Tears filled my eyes as I stared at my little bed in the corner of the room.

"Were my parents that bad?" I whispered to myself.

I couldn't find anything in the room, so I moved to my mom's office. There were some books in the closet, but the state of them told me maybe somebody had stolen some stuff from there.

Ignoring all that, I stood at the entrance of the office and raised my hands to look for the spell much more easily.

I was shivering when I raised my hands and instantly put them down, even when he was right in my face now.

He raised his claw to attack me, and that's when I fell behind out of fear. He was grunting when he crawled on top of me.

It was too dark on the road. Since the house was an abandoned one and was known to be a witch's house, there was no population even for miles around.

He let out a howl before launching an attack. As he raised his hand to hit me, the world seemed to have gone numb. Nobody said a word. We both stared into each other's eyes silently. I noticed how red his eyes were.

He was a Lycan, a humanoid wolf. His body was big and broad.

He stared at me in silence for a few minutes, even before he jumped off me and sprinted away. I couldn't see Thiago's face, but I felt him in his eyes.

I stayed on the road, even minutes later.

'I knew he was around,' Nia sounded much happier when gushing over her ability to sense him in the surroundings.

'I wonder what made him come back,' she proceeded to talk while I got on my feet to get back to the mission at hand.

'I know I should have been happy to see him around, but the fact that he had turn—ed into a full lycan just shattered my heart,' I whimpered when trying to talk. Tears blurred my vision as I snorted and walked on the empty road. I was

388-Not A Blessing

We started helping everyone around us while the witches kept coming back. I had to whistle into the microphone to scatter them away. At this point, my throat was turning dry from all the whistling. It seemed like I wouldn't be able to carry on after an hour. I was already low on energy.

It was then that somebody informed us that Moana had come to the academy with the rest of her witches. We had to hide most of the students in the cellar, while there were only a few of us left on our floor.

"We need someone in the basement," I told the others, "Thiago! You will go down there and make sure you keep them safe." I pointed at Corbin, who was Enter title...

about to listen to me, but then he stopped dead in his tracks and stared at me in confusion. I noticed the principal and even Lazio watching me in bewilderment.

"What?" I asked in confusion.

"I am Corbin!" Corbin said as he walked away from us, looking all sad. It was only then that I realized what a mistake I had made. I stole eyes from the others, and then, soon, the principal headed downstairs to his office. He had to make sure he kept the others informed via phone, just in case Moana sent her witches away to the other packs as well.

"What the heck does she want?" Lazio grunted, mentioning Moana.

"What will happen to everyone afterward?" I asked, trying to understand what plans she has made after she gets the powers.

"I will set everyone free. I just want those powers because I think I deserve them." She sounded more casual this time. I gulped as I watched her tap her fingernails on the she-wolf's forehead.

"Enya! Don't. She will not do what she is saying." Lazio shook his head as he told me not to give up on my powers. He was raised against the wall by the witches, who were waiting for one signal from Moana to end his life.

"I don't have a choice," I whispered under my breath.

"Are you ready to surrender?" Moana asked in a much more hopeful tone.

Before I could finally give up, we heard something eerie.

"AWOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!"

A monstrous howl silenced everything. Even the air didn't dare make a noise for a few seconds. I have heard it before, just a few hours ago, in fact.

"What the heck?" Moana ran towards the open window in the hallway and looked outside. She watched in confusion and then groaned.

"Go! See what is going on down there," she ordered the witches, and they obeyed her. She was the one who set them free, so they were pretty much her slaves.

How did Corbin manage to make me think my mates didn’t love me?

At least one of them did.

He turned to me, his eyes not showing the love he once carried. He was not like other wolves because he was a Lycan. He looked more monstrous, walking on

There was no human skin left. I wondered if he could even recognize me. But why was he here?

“No!” I screamed when he was staring at me, and a white witch attacked him. He growled and then moved his arm around to throw her away using the powerful air pressure created by his arms.

“We need to go,” Lazio whispered in my ear, but I refused to leave. If Thiago is here, I am not leaving. It had been over a month since I heard from him.

“Stop him from coming after me,” Moana ordered her witches while hiding behind them.

Thiago was fighting the witches to get near Moana. I didn’t understand what he was trying to do or why he was going after her until something sparked in my head.
