

My Mates 441

Chapter 441

441-I Can Be Your Hero, Baby!

“Are you ignoring me because of her?” He brought his eyebrows down to look like a sad puppy when mentioning Kellice.

“Did you not hear Valerie earlier? I am used to my mates having other choices,” I said, and before I could walk away, he came in my way again.

“So you still remember I am your mate,” he smiled, his eyes scanning me from head to toe.

“I do, but that doesn’t matter anymore. You are not him. You took over his body, you were supposed to stay as his wolf-I mean lycan,” I stated, keeping my emotions inside and feeling like sh*te. It is so unfair that I found him again just so that I can lose him again.

It was also weird because I don’t know how I would feel if Nia had taken over and left me just as a voice in my own body.

This time, he didn’t come in my way, and I was able to steer away from him successfully. Once I reached the angry group of people, I let out a sigh and started dialing Marko’s number to come pick me up.

“We are leaving, right?” Maynard asked, expecting a response from me. I don’t get why they were waiting for me to leave. It is not like we came here together.

“Marko! Can you come pick me up?” I asked, continuing my walk to the road. The others followed me, and soon we were standing with the cars.

“You don’t have to call him,” Lazlo grunted, not talking directly to me.

"Umm! I am still here for that," Lazlo approached him from behind, and Theo straightened his back to turn around to him. I had to get out of the car to make a decision for myself.

I rushed over from the back and reached them, finding them stare into each other's eyes strangely. The way Theo was looking at him made me feel icky.

"Where? I mean, if you were here, she wouldn't be taking a cab," Theo mumbled and then turned to Marko. "No offense to you. Cabs are awesome," he added with a pout.

"I appreciate you trying to help my Wife! But I can take care of her and even drop her off at home," Lazlo said, emphasizing the word wife.

"Thank you so much to both of you, but if you want to argue over something, find yourself some other topic because I am not going with either one of you," I said in a clear voice. The two looked my way and then at each other again.

"You p*ssed her off," Theo groaned, "Marko! How much time is the car going to take to get fixed?" He looked over to Marko, who gave me a sad look. It was really disappointing that now I had to go with either of them.

"Enya! get in the car," Lazlo ordered me; his tone was harsh and filled with anger. I stared back at him with an annoyed look on my face. He was still using his aggressive tone with me to control me, even after he clearly told me he had chosen another mate and had been cheating on me this whole time.

The rest of the car ride was filled with awkward silence. Once we reached the pack, I found Lazlo’s car overtaking us and parking before us.

“Ah! Seems like somebody had a rough time.” Theo let out a laugh, watching Lazlo get out of the car in haste and stand there with his arms crossed over his chest. Valerie got out of the car behind him and followed his stare.

“Thank you for the ride,” I said, ready to leave when Theo suddenly held my hand to pull me back in the seat.

“That’s not a way to say goodbye,” he whispered, making me look into his eyes as he brought his face closer to mine. My heart fluttered when his eyes traveled to my lips.

I wanted to pull away from him, but I had been begging the Moon Goddess for the last two years to let me taste his beautiful lips again. Now that I’d been given the chance, it wasn’t easy to reject him. He brought his face even closer, but then c*cked it and pressed his lips against my cheek gently. My eyes closed at the fresh breath that fanned over my cheek.

When he finally pulled away from me, I opened my eyes and blinked hard to get out of his trance.

“Have a good night,” he whispered, pulling back in his seat:

I nodded and rushed out of the car. I didn’t want to keep staying there. He has become my biggest weakness after I realized in the last two years that nobody can ever love me the way he does.

I stayed in my room and cried my heart out for a few minutes, and then I took a shower. I wasn't too sad, just a little worried because I wanted to help Thiago come out. Theo's return meant Thiago can be back too. Kellice was the one worrying me a little. Did he bring her with him from the other side or meet her overnight? Was Theo genuinely in love with her?

What if Thiago loved me but his Lycan loved this new girl?

All these thoughts were making me nauseous, and then I heard a knock on the door. With my hair still wet, and the blue silk gown unable to keep my body warm, I got out of bed to answer the door.

"Why did you lock the door?" Lazlo asked, staring at me as he waited for me to get out of his way and let him in.

“So they are right about you. You are only here to take revenge on those who helped Thiago suppress you.” I scoffed and shook my head, disappointed with myself because, for a split second, I thought he cared.

“Well, I can’t say they are wrong,” he clicked his tongue, agreeing with the statement. Something told me I didn’t want to sit with him and listen to him talk about how he was going to destroy all the people Thiago cared about. So I did what I thought was the best thing to do. I grabbed my pillow and got up from the couch to walk away. But before I could take a step away, he held my hand and forced me down.

“You know d*mn well you are not included in that list.” He grunted, sounding upset that I doubted him.

“But I am one of those who helped him imprison you,” I said, not buying his lie.

“Enya! You were his love, but you are also my mate. I don’t blame you for not wanting me to take over because you never got to know me. And here tonight, I am telling you this in clear words. I want to know you, and I want you to know me,” he said, drawing his face closer and whispering the words on my face. The genuine feeling of affection I sensed from his fresh breath made me tremble in my skin and look away from him in hesitation.

“I will never fall for someone who is imprisoning Thiago,” I commented.

"I don't care what you think of me. I just know what I feel," he stubbornly made another statement that compelled me to close my eyes. Thankfully, I had my head turned to the side, or he would have seen me reacting to his words.

"What happened? You no longer want to talk?" I let out a sarcastic laugh. "This is how crazy you alphas are. You talk a lot, trying to make the other mates look dumb for having side pieces, but when it comes to y—," I was yammering and laughing sarcastically when his response silenced me entirely.

"She is my master." He said this, and the smile on my face faded.

"Master?" I frowned, staring at his face as he looked back at me emotionlessly.

“She holds power over me. You can say I am still imprisoned, and she is the prison guard,” he helped explained his words more clearly to me this time.

“I don’t understand. What do you mean?” I asked in a whisper. His statement had made me feel like we have not been looking at the bigger picture here. No way he came from the other side and instantly fell in love with someone.

“Well, that’s why I cannot share it with anyone for now. I don’t know who wants to imprison me again and might use Kellice to do that. As for the relationship between me and Kellice, there is nothing going on there,” he said, turning over to the stove and pretending to be over this topic.

“Oh wow! Just like old times,” Christina’s arrival made me not continue talking on that subject with him. The way she looked at me sitting on the counter was a sign she didn’t enjoy seeing me look so comfortable.

"And besides, you are only attacking me because you don't want to admit you slept with my mate because your thirsty p*ssy cannot have enough—," she was yelling at the top of her lungs to humiliate me before everyone when she choked on her words.

It wasn't a self-awareness or guilt, but Theo had rushed from behind me to wrap his hand around her neck and slam her against the wall in such a hurry that none of us could prevent it.

"Let— me g—," she pled to him, her eyes bugged out in shock. I was standing, frozen to my spot when Maynard ran over to help her get out of his claws.

"Theo! Stop," Maynard groaned, trying to unwrap Theo's fingers from around her neck.

"Say one more word about her character again, Christina. I will make sure I skin you alive and feed you to the hungry rogues," Theo's eyes changed color, his canines appeared, and his muscles stiffened at the same time. There was no doubt that he was ready to transition.

The office was eerily silent that day. I arrived with Marko even before Lazlo could come. I heard from someone that the alpha king was going to hold a big meeting in our office, and even Theo was invited.

I had finished setting up my own table and didn't even bother touching Lazlo's desk. Valerie was busy arranging for the meeting when Lazlo arrived.

“My desk is a mess,” Lazlo complained, watching Valerie rush inside and quickly start cleaning his desk. “Ahem!” He then cleared his throat and steadily walked closer to my side while she was working on his desk. “So, are you ready for the meeting?” he asked, sounding very suspicious. In response to his question, I only nodded at him.

“If you feel like sk*pping it because of Corbin, you can,” he said, acting super sketchy by shoving his hands in his pockets and then passing me quick glances.

“I will be fine,” I reassured, pretending to sound normal.

The awkward silence when Valerie finished her work and turned to him could be felt from miles away. Soon, the door opened, and Maynard walked into the office with some files in his hands.

“What is this meeting about anyway?” Maynard said the first word when entering the office.

“I have no idea. I just know Theo will also be here,” Lazlo said, turning to see my reaction to the mention of Theo's name.

"Sorry, what did you say?" Lazlo shook his head to wake himself up as he questioned Theo.

"I want my Luna to stay in my pack for a while," Theo repeated himself, and this time he went so far as to point his finger at me. I looked around and noticed Kellice wasn't present in the meeting hall.

"Since the rules have been made already and there will be sometime before they are rejected, I thought why not take advantage of them and ask the beautiful Enya to come to stay in my pack?" Theo said, placing a hand on his chest when talking about me.

"She is not just my mate; she is my wife too. I feel it is very inappropriate that you want to keep my wife in your pack," Lazlo argued loudly, breathing heavily as he objected.

"You were the one who didn't object when the rule was being implemented. You were allowing Corbin to take her home, but suddenly you remember she is your wife?" Theo grunted as he raised his brow to express how annoyed Lazlo had made him by objecting to his demand. Everybody watched Lazlo's face, making him feel disgusted about letting that happen.

The immediate silence and the shift in Maynard's body made me smile internally. Lazlo objecting to that idea was such a comical thing to me. He was the one acting super cold that night. I never thought it would come back to bite him in the
