Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 161 SLAP ON PENNY'S FACE

"What about Luke? Have you ever thought about Luke? Luke is now very dependent on Winnie. If you separate them, Luke cannot accept it." It was the most important. They could not let a child in deep depression because of the adult's selfish interests. "I worry that too, I don't want to hurt Luke." Felix knew it was difficult, but there was no perfect thing. He could only find a way to reduce the damage to the lowest to Luke. "If Wendy comes back, I'll take care of Luke. I will never allow Luke to be bullied by his stepmother. Wendy left because Luke, if she can accept Luke, she would not leave. Even if she comes back, she is impossible to get along well with Luke." Rufus said firmly. He came here with the main purpose of fighting for the custody of Luke. About that, he could not communicate with Brian now, so he could only talk to his father. As long as he could have Luke, and took Winnie as his god daughter, Winnie could live with the two children, so that no one would be hurt. "All right, let Luke live with you. I will talk to Brian." For the time being, Rufus's idea was the best, and Felix had no reason not to agree. "Have you improved your relationship with Brian?" Felix asked. "Yes. He's been to my house several times and had spoken to me." "These are all the credits of Winnie. She was the only one who could convince Brian to do that. Take your time. A good beginning is half the battle." Rufus said with a sigh. He got something on his trip to fight for the custody of Luke. As for Brian and Winnie, he could only try not to violate love. Rufus left the old house and went directly to Richard's office. Richard was even surprised when he saw Rufus. Before he often met Rufus and he never met him and got news of him. He did not even show up when Penny and Brian married. He was somehow uneasy, except for shock, at his presence. "Rufus, long time no see." Richard greeted him warmly, but Rufus was sulky with a sharp look in his eyes. "I have something to tell you, otherwise we wouldn't meet." Rufus's voice was cold and deep. He hadn't talked to others like this for many years. The moment he saw Richard, he could think of the scene of Penny mistreating Luke, even if he wanted to be gentle. ".....All right, sit down, sit down." Richard was embarrassed. Looking at Rufus's unkind expression, Richard could do nothing but smile. Rufus sat down, but the cold momentum did not reduce. When contacting with Richard at the beginning, Rufus knew his treachery, and now it seemed that Penny inherited her father's malevolence. "I'll go straight to the point. You ought to teach your daughter to stop her mistreating my grandchild. She knew the existence of Luke when she married to Brian and agreed to accept him. She should be good to him. If she mistreated Luke again, have psychological preparation, I never missed in the business." Rufus warned coldly. He was not afraid of revealing Brian's plan, not afraid of the Burns family getting prepared. As long as he made up his mind, he would achieve the goal. Rufus never hurt anybody, but Penny provoked the wrong person, she should not mistreated Luke. "I don't know what you're saying, Rufus." Richard looked at Rufus in daze, but he was no confident, because he was afraid of Penny to make trouble again. "I don't seem to be making myself clear..." As Rufus was to explain, Richard's phone rang. "President, Miss Penney came to see you." "She can explain." Rufus also wanted to meet Penny. "Let her in." Richard could only say so but it was not the right time Penny came. As soon as Richard's voice fell, the door of the office was opened and Penny walked proudly in like a rooster. "Dad....." As soon as she saw Richard, she called him, Penny then noticed Rufus sitting on the sofa. "Dad, why are you here?" Penny was surprised and had a bad presentiment. She could only see Rufus in the New Year reunion dinner, but unexpectedly he appeared in the office, she was nervous. "I am here because of you. I won't come if you did not maltreat Luke." Seeing Penny, Rufus gnashed teeth and said coldly. "Dad....." Penny turned frightened from astonishment. His heart was beating violently. Even in this panic, she did not choose to be honest. "Dad, I don't understand what you're saying. When did I abuse Luke?" Penny asked, looking innocent. Penny had no repentance, which anger Rufus. He came up to Penny and gave her a slap on the face directly. "You are ignorant. I won't talk nonsense here without proof. You don't repent and pretend you did not do that. Don't you know what you did? Aren't you ashamed?" Rufus angrily stared at her and loudly rebuked her. He did not care that Richard was there, or that Penny was his daughter-in-law. What he was teaching now was a wicked stepmother. "Dad....." Penny was stunned by that slap. As she was to explain, Richard stopped her. Richard saw Rufus's anger. It must be Penny's fault, otherwise Rufus would not beat her. "Rufus, let's talk. There's no need to be angry. Penny, you go out first. I want to talk with Rufus alone. Richard went to Rufus, took Rufus's arm and said with a smile on his face. "You can't go, tell your father how you mistreated Luke. Show your father if he has a cold-blooded, treacherous daughter." Rufus would not allow Penny to leave anyway. He saw through the trick of Richard. He was afraid he would again beat Penny. For so many years Rufus never beat others, but now he was furious. He could not vent out his anger if he did not beat Penny. He did it for the sake of Luke. But this slap was simply insignificant compared with Luke's injury. "I..." It was the first time that Penny saw Rufus as angry as a lion. She was so scared that she did not know what to do. She could only look at Richard. "Then you stay and tell me all about it, and we'll figure it out." Richard had to ask Penny to stay. It seemed that Rufus would not give up. "I... I'm sorry, dad. I was wrong. I shouldn't have hit Luke. But don't get me wrong, I regard Luke as my own child. He has wrong and I disciplined him." Penny did not dare to hide it, and she could not lie. But she must find a reason for herself, or Rufus would kill her. However, her words once again infuriated Rufus, and Rufus mercifully slapped in the face of Penny again. "I'm not asking you to lie but to explain. I'm giving you a chance to repent. It seems that you have no idea of repentance." Rufus loudly rebuked. He did not expect that Penny was more ignorant than he imagined. "I..." "What happened, Penny?" Richard interrupted Penny in a sharp voice, afraid she once again angered Rufus and got another slap. "She has used up the chance, I'll say it." Rufus never gave second chances to others, especially Penny. "She maltreated Luke when Brian was not there. She beat him, scolded him and put him in the warehouse. Such things happened more than once, so Luke got depression. He's just a kid and you did that to him." Rufus scolded Penny pointing at her nose. Penny was trembling and her eyes were erratic. "I'm sorry..." "Richard, let me tell you, the child of my family has never been so maltreated. If you don't teach your daughter a lesson, don't blame me." "You should know me. Once I make a move, there is no way for you to make it up." Rufus did not want to listen to Penny's sorry, do not want to look at her. If it was not bound by other things, he would now let Penny pay the price. Rufus said coldly and turn to leave directly. Richard got angry at the moment Rufus left. He stared at Penny, with the flame of rage in his chest. "Is that true?" Richard said coldly, which made Penny shudder. "Yes, it's true." Admitted Penny at last. But the next moment she was slapped again, not one but in succession, and her face became numb. "Are you stupid? Luke is important to the Bennet family and you dared to abuse him. You don't want to live?" Richard loudly scolded, he felt that Penny was of no use. "When you got married, I told you that the existence of Luke is a good thing for you. As long as you treat this child well, the Bennet family will certainly treat you with special regard. You can only do something to him when your position in the Bennet family is stable." "You didn't hear me? How could you waste such good opportunity? You deserve to be beaten." The more Richard scolded, the angrier he became. He felt that Penny had reached a hopeless point. "Dad, I was wrong. I couldn't stop getting angry, so I vent anger on him." Penny sobbed as she confessed her mistake, ignoring the swelling of her cheeks.

CHAPTER 162 PENNY CAME TO THE SUBURBS

Richard seemed to have sensed the breath of death and become anxious. He continued to loudly accuse Penny. "Didn't you know it will make the Bennet family even angrier? Even Rufus came here personally, do you think the Bennet family will spare you?" He knew Rufus that he never did things he was not sure of. Now that he came personally, it was basically impossible that Penny could continue to stay in the Bennet family. "I did not expect that. Dad, I know I'm wrong. Do something about it or my plan will be ruined." Penny took the arm of Richard to implore, at the moment she also felt the arrival of the crisis. She was scared. She was really scared. She was really wrong. "Not only is your plan ruined, but you could spend years in prison for child abuse." Richard couldn't think of a way to do at this moment. His biggest concern now was not about Penny, but whether his company would be implicated. Since Rufus knew it, Felix would know it, and so would Brian. They knew about it, but they didn't come until now. Wasn't the intention obvious? Had he become a thorn in the Bennet family, or had Penny done something even more outrageous to annoy them? Rufus walked out of the Burns Group and commanded Paul in a sharp tone. "Keep an eye on Penny and keep her from getting away." "Got it. I'll call and arrange it." Winnie cried alone at home for a long time before she calmed down. Tired of crying, she lay down in bed and fell asleep. When she woke up, she found it was time to pick up the kids. "Leo, can I borrow your car?" Winnie called Leo. Now she dared not take a taxi, or asked Brian to help. She was sure if she could buy a car, so she thought of Leo. "No problem, I'll bring it to you." Leo was happy that he could help Winnie. About twenty minutes later, Leo knocked on Winnie's door. "I'm sorry to bother you." Winnie invited Leo in. "I have an excuse to come out for a rest. You're helping me, so don't worry about it." "Here are the car keys." Leo said and handed the car keys to Winnie. "Winwin, have you recovered from your wound? If you can't drive, I can be your driver." Leo said gently. "I can't bother you all the time. Don't worry, I am fine. I can drive." Winnie refused Leo. "Well, ok. If you can't drive, I'll be your driver." Leo never forced her and would not make Winnie feel embarrassed. Now that she could drive, he would let her try. "Winwin, is there something wrong with you and Mr. Bennet?" Leo's expression became serious. On the way to Winnie's house, Leo had been thinking about it. Winnie needed a car, she should find Brian. Brian had many cars and they were all better than his. Winnie chose him, something must have happened. Winnie's face darkened. When she heard the name of Brian, her heart would in pain. "It's nothing serious, but I don't want to trouble him. Leo, you know me, no matter who has no obligation to be good to me, I do not want to ask them for help. I would think twice before I borrowed your car." "There is nothing between me and Brian. It's just my wishful thinking. So I don't want to bother him about anything. I feel more comfortable with your car since we are friends." This was the first time Winnie talked much about Brian, but also the saddest one. They had less than two months left before it was all over, and they might not even have a chance to see each other, let alone borrow his car. Winnie felt that there were only two people in this world who were obligated to be good to you - father and mother, but unfortunately both of them had left her. So she was not qualified to ask for anything from others, including Brian. "Winwin, none of this matters to me. I just want to tell you that I will always stand behind you, as long as you encounter difficulties, you can come to me. I will help you unconditionally or let you feel the burden." Leo hoped that Winnie and Brian separate and that Winnie could be back to him. Even if he it was impossible to achieve, he wanted to protect Winnie. "Thank you. Don't worry, I will ask you for help when I need help." Winnie gently said. Although Leo was not her husband, it would be good to have such a good friend. "Leo, it is time to pick up the children. I need to go downstairs, let us talk later." Winnie looked at her mobile phone and found here was no time for chatting. "Well, we go downstairs together and you pick up the kids." They went downstairs together to the parking space. Leo said to her. "Winwin, remember, no matter what happens, tell me. I will be on your back. " "Ok, don't worry." Winnie nodded and drove to the kindergarten. For Winnie, no matter what happened, she had to fact it. When she could not support herself, she would ask for help. But she would not ask help from Brian, because she did not want to be looked down upon by him. Winnie spent a few days quietly, but Brian did not come back these days. She heard that he was on a business trip. Winnie was almost recovered except that she was weak and her face had returned to normal. She was still in good condition except that her mood was still depressed. She was a person who could never be idle. When her wounds were just recovered, she started to work. She was no longer concerned about the company's affairs, only waiting for Brian to call her to hand over the work. Now she was busy working on her latest software because life had to go on, because it needed a lot of money to survive. When Winnie was busy in the studio, there was a knock on the door. "Who is it?" Winnie asked while vigilantly turned off the computer, after all, the things in her computer could not be revealed. "Winwin, there's a woman outside looking for Mr. Bennet. I don't know her. Come and see." The speaker was Paul's wife, who had been working at Rufus' house. "Coming." Winnie turned off the computer and came to the living room on the first floor. When she saw Penny, she was surprised. And Penny did not expect Winnie would be here. "What are you doing here?" Penny asked in surprise. "Nobody took care of me, so I came here. So you don't come for me. Just wait a minute." Winnie answered and then said to Paul's wife. "Raya, this is Brian's wife. She should come for Rufus. Tell her to wait here." Winnie was not the owner here. Although she did not like Penny, she had no right to drive Penny away. "Oh, so it's Mrs. Bennet. I've never seen her before." Raya said in embarrassment, but she only said to Winnie. "I'll go upstairs." Winnie said and was to leave. Penny called her. "Wait, Winnie, I think we should have a talk." From the conversation between Winnie and the butler, Penny knew that the person she was looking for should not be at home. Since she met Winnie, she would not miss this opportunity. "Is there anything to talk about?" Winnie slowly turned back and asked in a low voice. "Yes, we should have a talk." They came to the outside pavilion. Raya was not there and Penny's face became sinister. She fixed her eyes on Winnie. "Winnie, did you tell Dad that I mistreated Luke? Did you tell Brian?" Remembering the slaps she had received that day, Penny's hatred was as thick as a dark cloud. If this were not Rufus's place, she would have liked to slap Winnie in the face and let her know what it was like. Winnie was surprised for a moment, and then calmed down. So Rufus must have found Penney and talked her about it. So was she to explain or apologize? "Do you finally admit that you mistreated Luke?" Winnie asked with disdain. "You.....That's what you said. You must be making a rumor. Winnie, you will be punished, since you did bad things." Penny suddenly realized that although she and Winnie were aware of it but never put it out. If she said it, it was equal to admit the fact that she mistreated Luke. Now Penny felt powerless facing Winnie, for fear that she would say something wrong. "Hum..." Winnie snorted with disdain. "Are you speaking of yourself? Am I making a rumor? You think I don't have proof because you destroyed my phone and my computer? You studied law and I'm licensed. You think I would lose an important piece of evidence?" "Do not think that what you do is unknown. Maybe you have made yourself a trap. I have nothing to say to you now. For the sake of being a former classmate, I advise to stop now."Winnie knew everything but said nothing, and her kindness won out in the end. All things were about to reach the end, she hoped that Penny could turn herself in to strive for leniency, and not get herself on the desperate."Winnie, come on. Just tell me if Brian knows it. Did you say that to him?"Penny was confused by Winnie's words. She could not calm down to analyze Winnie's words. She now just wanted to know who knows that, so that she could find countermeasure.

CHAPTER 163 MAKE A SCENE IN THE SUBURBS

Winnie ironically shook her head. Seeing that Penny was ignorant, she felt funny. Since Rufus knew, how could the Bennet family know nothing about it? But she could not figure it out. "Penny, you are hopeless. If you don't take your last chance, you'll ruin the rest of your life." "Well, Never mind. When will you leave Brian? If I promise you that I will not do any mistreatment to Luke, can you leave Brian?" Penny did not know how to deal with Winnie. All she could do now was to temporarily compromise. "You think too much. From the beginning to the end, I am not a threat to you. There is no possibility for me and Brian to be together. Don't worry, we will over soon. It doesn't really matter now. It depends on whether you can keep Brian." Winnie said easily and naturally. Winnie had seen Penny's ending, but Penny knew nothing. "Winnie, you are lying. If you have nothing to do with Brian, why do you live here?" Penny could not accept Winnie's words. She thought that Winnie had been lying to her and had been fooling her in various means. She would not give up Brian. "Don't believe it, just do what you want." Winnie was speechless and could only allow Penny do anything she wanted. Winnie turned to leave but Penny stopped her. "Stop there, Winnie, make it clear. Leave Brian. If I lose Brian, there is nothing I can't do. Don't blame me for being unkind to you." Penny gave a ferocious face. Now her head was in a mess and she didn't know what to do next. She could not even control herself. She did not know anything except that she had to keep Brian, no matter what, as long as Brian did not leave her. She showed off to Winnie with Brian. And Brian was a symbol of her status. With him, she could enjoy the envy from other women. "What can you do? Kidnap me again? I can die, but even if I die, can you get Brian? Do you think he'll love you?" Winnie shouted back against Penny's ignorance, for her ignorance, Winnie felt hopeless. Originally she was clever, but now she became the victim of the interests. She wanted to sober her by scolding her or beating her, so that she could see all the facts, she could face the reality, but at the moment Penny's eyes were filled with anger, which could not be controlled by her. "Shut up. It's none of your business whether he loves me or not. He won't do that to me if you don't show up to him, and it doesn't matter to me whether you die or not. It's because of you, and you deserve it if you die." Penny tried her best to push her so as to vent her anger to Winnie, but Winnie did not stop her, because there was a child in the belly of Penny. Even if she was not malicious, her stop might cause harm to Penny. She hated Penny, but the child in her belly did nothing wrong. For the sake of the child, she allowed Penny to shake her weak body. "Stop." At this time a furious voice was heard. Before Winnie and Penny realized what happened, Brian had come to them and pushed away Penny. "Ah..." Unsuspecting, Penny was pushed away, but she did not fall to the ground but to a chair. "Brian... how can you push me?" Penny asked with tears in eyes. "It will hurt the child." Winnie hurriedly pulled Brian who was approaching Penny. They were a lot of tragedies happened, she did not want to see more. "Winnie, I don't need your false mercy. It's all you, you wicked woman. You go to die. You die now." Penny burst into tears and did not care about Winnie's kindness. She blindly thought that Winnie was showing herself and pretending to be nice in front of Brian. She hated Winnie being like this. "Shut up. You should be the one to die." Brian shouted loudly and angrily. Winnie tightly held him to stop him from getting close to Penny, for fear that he would hurt Penny's child. "Will you calm down? She is pregnant now and it is normal to be emotional." Winnie persuaded him, hoping that everyone could calm down at this time. "She did that to you, and you stood up for her." Brian turned around and scolded Winnie because she was too kind, because her heart was too soft, because she did not know how to take care of herself. She had been weak. If she was shaken by Penny, it would hurt her injury. When he saw Penny did not show mercy, he was nervous, distressed. Why didn't Winnie fight back? "It's not the case. I'm not speaking for her. I'm thinking of the child. Whatever feud we have, the child is innocent." Winnie repeatedly stressed the child, hoping that Brian showed mercy for his child. "You.....Did you, did you hurt?" Brian was speechless. He wanted to get angry with Winnie, but he endured it. "No, I'm fine." Even if it hurt, Winnie would not tell him, otherwise, Penny would be death. She did not feel she was important to Brian, or that Brian would kill Penny for her. But Brian's anger to Penny was real, because Luke got abused, and he would take revenge for Luke. "You.....How could you do that? Brian, I am your wife. The baby in my belly is yours. I am the one you should care about, not this bitch." Penny had broken down and could not bear the two men showing love in front of her. She cried out in protest and abuse. She just hoped she could get Brian's attention, even if it was a caring look. But she was disappointed. She only made herself vexatious. "Get out of here now. If Winwin hadn't stopped me, I would not spare you." Brian shouted angrily. His eyes were full of murderous spirit. If it weren't for Winnie holding him, Penny would die today. He would have exposed what Penny had done, but that there was so much to be done. "You..." Penny had been desperate and was to refute, but it suddenly came a dignified voice, so Penny did not speak. "Shut up." There were only two words, but it was cold. Rufus had been without such an imposing manner for many years. He raised his eyebrows and looked coldly at Penny. Had it not been for the two children beside him, he would have been furious. "Paul, take the two children in." Afraid to frighten the two children, Rufus solemnly ordered. "Brian take Winnie in. Don't you know she is in weak condition now?" Rufus once again gave a severe command. Before their relationship get better, he spoke to Brian angrily, because if was not because of Brian but Penny. At this time, Brian became obedient and took Winnie's hand to walk toward the house. Only Rufus, Penny were left and Albert was on standby. Rufus said coldly after two children were taken away, Brian and Winnie left. "Penny, though you are still Brian's wife, you have no right to come here to make a scene. So what you are Brian's wife? Brian can marry you, but he can also divorce you." "Dad, you misunderstood, I didn't come here to make a scene. I came to explain to you about Luke. I did not expect to meet Winnie here and she scolded as she saw me....." "Shut up. You still accused her? Do you expect me to believe you? You are wicked in your nature. Do you think you are persuasive?" "I tell you, Penny, you are too simple-minded to be my daughter-in-law. There are surveillance cameras everywhere in my yard. If I check, I will get to the truth." Rufus disgustingly interrupted the words of Penny. Penny must be the evil man to frame Winnie to prove her innocence. But now no one would believe her. Everything was clear, and they were just waiting for the opportunity. Only Penny did not feel it. "Dad....." Penny looked at Rufus in panic. She forgot that there were surveillance cameras. Now she felt as though she had been slapped in the face, and her face burned with embarrassment to the extreme. She came to explain, to asked for forgiveness. But she failed to control the situation, which was getting worse. "Leave now, and don't come to here again. No matter if was you started the fight, as long as Winnie gets something wrong, I will be angry with you." "Albert, send her out." Rufus commanded and Albert quickly came to Penny. "Please get out." Albert's indifferent attitude stunned Penny. Albert used to call her Mrs. Bennet, but now there was no even a name. What was going on here? Was it really going to end? Penny stood in situ and did not move. In the next moment Albert drove her out. Rufus looked at the back of Penny angrily and held resentment in heart. This was the result of his father's obstinacy in family marriage, which made the whole family restless. Rufus had been waiting for Albert in the pavilion, because he had something to confirm with him. "Albert, come here." Albert was called to the pavilion. "What is it, Sir?"

CHAPTER 164 TALK THE MOST

"Is it true that Penny got pregnant?" Rufus solemnly asked. If it was true, it would be difficult to deal with. "Yes, she is pregnant, but the father is not Mr. Bennet." Albert never lied to Rufus, because he knew that Rufus cared about Brian and helped him to deal with some difficulties that Brian could not solve. Albert felt in the Bennet family, only Rufus was good really good to Brian. It was not for any interest, it was just father's love for son. "Ok, good." Rufus never asked too much, for fear causing trouble to Albert. He only wanted the answer he wanted. "And, are you planning to acquire the Burns Group?" Rufus continued. "Yes, it has almost done. But it is not easy to see the breakthrough." Give me the document, I will help you with that." With that, Rufus came into the room. He did not need to say too much and Albert knew what he meant and would not tell Brian. As Rufus came to the living room, Brian got up from the sofa and came to him angrily. "I asked you to take care of Winnie, but you allowed Penny to come here. Don't you know Winnie is weak now. Penny could make her into the hospital again." Brian shouted to his father, as if venting his resentment. "...". Rufus did not get angry or speak. She looked at Brian apologetically. It had been years Brian had said much words with him. even if Brian was accusing him, he was pleased. He had hoped that Brian could scold at him and that he could vent his angry. in this way, he could feel relaxed and move on. Rufus did not speak anything, but Winnie thought he should not say that to Rufus. Winnie got up and shouted at Brian. "Are you mad? He is your dad, you can't speak to him like that?" "No, he is not my dad. My dad would not make me sad and make my woman in danger." Brian shouted loudly. He had forgot his father's existence. Since the day his mother died, he had lost his father. Brian's words worried everyone present. Raya whispered. "What are we gonna do? Will they get their relationship even worse?" "Don't take. Winnie can have him under control. Don't worry." Paul said in a low voice. He was calmer than Raya. Because he saw the facts and understood the heart of Brian. Brian's rage was related to Winnie and Winnie would be able to stop him. Brian's words annoyed Winnie, but at the same time her heart was warm. If her EQ was not low, Brian felt distressed for her. Well, let her be selfish, let her be pleased because Brian felt distressed for her. Winnie held back her emotion and looked at Rufus carefully. She was afraid that Rufus would be sad for that and that their relationship became worse. So, she could only lectured Brian. "If he is not your father, he has no obligation to protect your woman. You should not blame him. You should protect your woman by yourself and you are the one to blame. Winnie's words were useful, it made Brian froze. Looking at the angry face of Winnie, Brian had nothing to say. She was right, she was his woman, why did he want others to take the responsibility? "Follow me." Winnie pulled him upstairs seeing that he had been calmed down. When they arrived at the bedroom, Winnie felt relieved after she closed the door. It was good that Rufus and Brian did not have a quarrel. Brian sat on the bed with a gloomy face, looking tired. Winnie felt distressed about that. She came to Brian and sat down. "I told you I am fine.

Why did you still blame your father?" As soon as Winnie's words fell, she was shocked by Brian's sudden embrace. "Are you really all right? Doesn't it hurt?" Brian could not help missing Winnie. He asked in a soft voice. He went on a business trip for several days and missed Winnie every day. He could not eat well or sleep well, even the quality of his work had dropped because of Winnie. When he got off the plane, he came to see if she was okay, but he didn't expect to see such a scene that made him nervous and resentful. "I am all right, don't worry." At this moment, Winnie was moved by Brian's embrace. This was the moment she wanted to be a little woman, as if she had someone to love her. "How can I not worry? You are so..." He did not say out the word "important". He was afraid that he would fail to control himself and that he would ask Winnie to stay. Winnie did not hear the next half sentence of Brian, so she knew that Brian had returned to reason. Her moment had passed, but it was too fast. Winnie broke free from the embrace of Brian and said. "Don't worry. I can take care of myself. And don't make your relationship with your dad worse because of me. Otherwise, I'll never feel at ease and I will feel I owe you." "Winwin..." "Your father has always been good to me. He treats me like a daughter. Today he went to the dance class to pick up Megan. He took care of us well and you misunderstood him." Brian tried to explain, but Winnie didn't give him a chance. For Winnie, Brian's words were superfluous. She chose not to listen to it, at least she would not feel hurt because of it. Brian again fell into silence. He was too emotional and he did have the problem, but he failed to control himself because of Winnie. After a short silence, Winnie found that he was tired and decided to let him have a rest. "I'll go downstairs and check on the children. You take rest and have dinner here. I'll cook for you." Winnie got up, but as soon as she stood up, her wrist was held by Brian. "It is true that Penny is pregnant, but I am not the father. I told you had never had sex with her. So don't overthink about it." Brian explained in a low voice. He wanted to tell her when everything was over and thought that there was no need to explain since they were to part. But when he found Winnie was sad because of the child, he felt he had to explain. "....." Brian's explanation surprised Winnie and she could not say a word. The pregnancy was real, but Brian was father, then who was the father? Now it seemed that it had nothing to do with him. "Daniel should be the father. She and Daniel had been together for a long time." Brian guessed Winnie's mind, so he explained. "Oh, I see." Winnie could not be silent anymore, otherwise Brian would continue to explain. Although she was happy to hear that Brian was not the father, it didn't make any sense now. She had to leave. Brian's choice would not change depending on who the father was. "You look tired. Lie down and rest. I'll get dinner ready for you." Winnie once again was to leave, but Brian took her wrist and did not let her go. Brian got up and held Winnie in his arms again. "Take care of yourself, and don't make me feel guilty. No more danger, or I'll break down." Brian's voice was low with sadness, melancholy with reluctance to give up and worry. He wanted to hold this woman in his arms forever. He wanted to be with her, but he had to face the reality. "There's no need to feel guilty. You did nothing wrong. We take what we need from each other and we don't owe each other. Don't worry. I will try to take good care of myself. I will try not to put myself in danger. You take good care of yourself." Winnie's heart was like being torn and it was bleeding. It was not Brian broke down but her. If she continues to be with Brian, she could not leave him. "After leaving you, everything has nothing to do with me. As long as you don't make it hard for me, my life will always be calm and nothing you worry about will happen to me." "Take a rest, I will cook." With the same excuse, Winnie finally broke free from Brian's arms and quickly left the room. She had to let go of things that did not belong to her and she had to stay away from the men of others. Downstairs, Winnie did not see the two children and Rufus and she learned from Raya they played in the yard. Winnie came to the yard and saw Rufus sitting in the pavilion watching the two children play. His loneliness made Winnie pity him. "Sir." Winnie greeted him and sat down beside Rufus. "Oh, are you all right, Winnie?" Rufus asked with concern. "I am fine, I'm not that weak." "I'm sorry, Sir, Brian was so angry with you because of me. Please don't be angry with him. Don't blame him." Winnie was afraid that Rufus would be upset and disappointed with Brian, so she explained and apologized.

CHAPTER 165 FEEL WRONGED

After listening to Winnie's words, Rufus showed a charitable smile on his face, which was completely different from the time when he had just cursed Penny "I am not angry, and I don't blame you. It's none of your business, so don't worry about it too much. Brian's tantrums with me look disrespectful to you, but I'm glad. It was the first time in years that he had said so much to me." "It makes sense, but I think there's still something wrong with his attitude. I just talked to him upstairs. He'll watch his language." Winnie was afraid of the aggravation of the conflict between Rufus and Brian. After Rufus said that, she found that was the first time in years that Brian had said so much to Rufus. In Rufus's opinion, this was a big step forward. "Alas.....What a pity, it would be good if you were my daughter-in-law." Rufus said looking at Winnie who was sensible and considerate. She was such a good girl and kind to anyone. Most importantly she could make Brian have a better attitude and control Brian at the critical moment. And it would be happy that a family of four lived together, but god made a joke and the result was not satisfactory. "Sir, you think too highly of me, I am not so good to be your daughter-in-law, so there is no pity." Winnie said casually, but only she knew she felt bitter. No matter who approved her, Brian did not love her. Winnie had no delusion that she would become Rufus's daughter-in-law, because she knew that Brian loved the other woman and the gap between her and Brian was big. "You are a good girl, and Brian is not lucky to have you." "But don't blame him. He has been holding a grudge for so many years and he needs a chance to let it out or he will get tired." Rufus loved his son. He wanted to find a suitable opportunity to quarrel with Brian so that Brian could feel better. However, he had not had the right opportunity in so many years. "Yeah, I know." Winnie answered faintly. How could she blame him? She had no qualification. "I am glad that you don't blame him, Sir. He rests in his bedroom. I will get dinner for him." "Don't get too tired." Rufus reminded her kindly. "I won't, I have Raya to help me. Don't worry." Winnie said and turned to leave. The days of cooking for Brian were numbered. Even though she was tired, she wanted to cook more for him. After dinner was prepared, Brian was still asleep, and Winnie did wake him up. After dinner, the two children went to do their homework. Rufus and Paul went for a walk. Winnie was depressed, so she drove out. Winnie didn't go far. She went to the cemetery to see her parents. Standing in front of her parents' tombstones, she suddenly found that she should be the most wronged person, but she blindly thought of others and forgot that she needed comfort too. "Mom, Dad, I wish you were still alive. As long as you're alive, I'm still the princess protected by you. Even if we had no higher status than others, not as rich as others, but at least I have someone to love me." "Now I am tired. Can you help me?" Winnie said, failing to hold back her tears. At the moment she seemed the most helpless. Although everything was a foregone conclusion, the two children still worried her very much. Would Brian give her the custody of the two children? Would Megan call him father? Whether it would affect the relationship between Brian and Wendy? Winnie had no idea at all. She loved him but never wanted to possess him. She loved him so she wanted him to be happier than she was. But the existence of two children would certainly affect his life, but Brian could not remove this fact. Winnie looked at her parents' tombstones blankly for a long time, but she couldn't figure out how to do. As it was getting dark, Winnie turned to leave. Back in the car, as she had just fastened her seat belt, the phone rang. "Vanessa." "Sister, I will get the scores the day after tomorrow. I want to go to B City, so that you can help me with the university application." Vanessa was expected to get the results. "Ok and I'll book a flight for you. Will Auntie come back with you?" Winnie said in a warm voice. "Auntie said she will be back after a time. Sister, don't you feel Auntie was not willing to go back to B City? I always feel she is in delay." Vanessa told her doubts. There were several people who wanted to rent the drugstore with good price, but her aunt always reused with various reasons. Vanessa suspected that her aunt might not be willing to leave A City, to leave the drugstore. "Really? I will talk to her." Winnie hung up the phone and booked a flight for Vanessa and then drove to leave. On the way home, she thought of what Vanessa said. Did her aunt really was not willing to go back to B City? Winnie had some memories of her aunt's past, but she did not know the details. She only knew that her aunt did not return to B City because she got hurt in love. It happened when she was young. Could not her aunt get it over now? Winnie drove home. As she closed the door, Brian appeared in front of her and asked. "Whose car is it?" Brian's tone was of dissatisfaction and his eyes had doubts. "Leo's, I borrow it." Winnie did not hide it, nor did she have to. "Why did you borrow his car? I have one." Hearing that the car was Leo's, Brian's face suddenly became gloomy. "I have to give your car back in a few days, but I can use his car for a lifetime." Winnie looked at Brian seriously. Why did he ask what he knew? Would there be different results? "What do you mean? Are you in a relationship?" Flustered, Brian asked. If they were a couple, she could use Leo's car for a lifetime. Winnie sighed and did not know how to answer Brian's question. "Stop dwelling on these things, there's no point." "By the way, have you had dinner yet? Winnie changed the subject, not wanting to waste time on meaningless things. Entangling with these things would only hurt her. "No." Brian replied coolly. When he woke up, it was dark outside and everyone was at home except Winnie. He could not get through her mobile phone and was worried that he could not find her, so he had no mood to eat. "Give his car back." Brian was still cared about that. Whether the car was borrowed or given, whether the car could be used for a day or a lifetime, Brian did not want Winnie to be related with Leo. "Stop being unreasonable, will you? Are you gonna give me a car, and then, when we're apart, you take back your car? We'll be connected for the rest of our lives by this car. Can you stand it? Aren't you afraid that I will affect your relationship with Wendy? Aren't you afraid Wendy won't be happy about it?" Before Brian became angry, Winnie frowned and raised her voice. She did not understand why Brian was so domineering. Since he had nothing to do with her, he should treat her as a stranger. "Don't mind my business. I have my own way of life. If you meddle in my affairs again, I will always cling to you and spoil your good things." Winnie had no choice but to use this method to threaten Brian. Actually she did not want to rely on him. She just wanted to tell Brian, whether they had an affair or trade, it had been gone. Only the children had not been solved. So Brian only needed to focus entirely on getting a DNA sample. He did not need to care whose car she borrowed. Brian stared at Winnie angrily. He really wanted to let her cling to him for a lifetime, and wanted to let her destroy his good deed all the time, but these were not the facts. Brian also knew that he should not mind Winnie's business, but sometimes he really could not control himself. The thought of her with Leo hurt him. Now he admitted that Winnie was much more rational than him. Should he feel lucky that he met such a rational woman, or could she be so rational because she did not love him? The latter had the bigger opportunity. If Winnie loved him, she would not let go so easily. At that thought, Brian became angrier. After staring at Winnie mercilessly, he turned around and walked towards his car. He should not come and should not be meddlesome. "Where are you going?" Winnie asked after him, but she did not get an answer. Winnie chased after Brian quickly. When he opened the door, Winnie stood in front of Brian. "Are you leaving? Are you not going to have dinner?" Winnie asked angrily. "Get out of my way. You're not in charge of my business." Said Brian angrily, but he didn't push Winnie away, fearing his strength might hurt her. "I cooked tonight, eat before you leave. If you don't eat, you will have no chance to have it again." Winnie's anger did not decrease. There was no relationship between them, but she would not allow Brian to abuse him. "I told you to get out of the way." Brian's anger was not reduced, but the voice was down. Since Winnie's accident, he had hardly had a proper meal. Today, when Winnie went out of the bedroom, she said she would cook dinner for him. He went to bed with expectation, which meant he wanted to have this dinner. But no one expected this to happen.

CHAPTER 166 THE PERSON WHO HIDES INFORMATION

Winnie sadly stepped back two steps, leaving a distance for Brian to open the door. "You can skip your meal, or you can leave at once. But remember, this is the last time we'll see each other." Winnie was stubborn, and when she was stubborn, what she said would definitely become reality. She vowed that if he left now, she would disappear with her two children and never appear before him. She would let him miss the children all his life, so that he could not solve the doubts in his heart. Brian saw Winnie's stubbornness. The sullen eyes and the pouting mouth were highlighting her insistence. From the moment when he met Winnie, Brian could not deal with her stubbornness once. As long as she did this, he had no way. It happened again, for he was really afraid that he would never see Winnie again. Brian said nothing, but slammed the door shut and walked into the room. Brian was in a bad mood, but he had dinner carefully. As Winnie said, he didn't know when the next meal would be served. After the meal, Brian left the suburbs without taking Winnie's DNA sample. On the way back to the city, Brian sat in the back seat and called Kevin. "Does Winwin know something? Why could I see her toothbrush every time I was there?" Brian suspected that Kevin had told her so that Winnie was on the alert. If so, his guess had become a fact, and it was not necessary to check. "If you can't get her toothbrush, so get her hair." Kevin pretended to be ignorant of what he said. But he knew it would not last long. "Not one. I can't pluck it on her head, can I?" Brian said in dissatisfaction. He knew this common sense. "Then I can't help it. Find your own way." Kevin helplessly said. "Did you tell Winwin?" Brian asked directly. "What did I tell her? I haven't seen her or called her since she left the hospital. How could I tell her?" Kevin denied decisively. If he admitted it, Brian would want his life. "Then how could I not find her toothbrush? It was clearly a defense against me." Brian was impatient, which exposed his helplessness. From the day when he knew that Wendy would come back, Brian began to alienate Winnie, but he found that the more alienated he was, the more he missed her, the deeper his love was. In this way, he really wanted to choose Winnie regardless of everything. So it was a smart choice for Brian to get everything out of the way as soon as possible. "It is your business, not mine. Find another way, Megan and your sample would work too." Kevin did not want to do say. He felt that the present condition was torment to two people, and it would be better to solve the problem as soon as possible. "I can't get a sample of Megan either." "If you can't get it, ask somebody else to do it for you. Ask your father for help. He's with the kids all day. He can get her hair." Kevin really did not want to see Brian to be tortured, so he advised. Winnie deliberately delayed, so that Brian and Rufus could have more time to get along. As long as Brian talked to Rufus, they would have more communication and it could improve their relationship. Only in this way could things be solved, so that they could move on. Brian became silent. Kevin gave him a good idea. But how should he talk with his father? He had not communicated with his father for years. Did he really have to leave the hatred behind? Brian hung up the phone and was still thinking about whether it was feasible. When he was in meditation, Albert who was driving answered a phone call. Albert then put down the phone excitedly and he said to Brian. "Mr. Bennet, the person concealing the information of Winnie has been found." "Who is it?" Brian asked in surprise. "It's Miss Bennet." "My sister?" Brian was puzzled. Brian made a call to his sister, who was abroad. The call was connected, and Brian went straight to the point. "Sister, can you contact with that surrogate woman for pregnancy?" Hearing that, Stella's look suddenly dignified. "No, why asked that?" "Nothing, just asking." The excuse Brian gave was too far-fetched, because his tone was anxious and he called suddenly to ask. "Is there something wrong? Was Penny not good to Luke?" Stella did not believe Brian's words, because she had never heard Brian's voice being restless. "No, don't overthink about it." Brian was afraid of worrying his sister, so he did not tell her the fact. Brian continued to ask. "Sister, did you conceal that woman's information?" "You investigated her?" Stella asked in reply. "Sister, answer me." Brian said impatiently with a feeling of annoyance. "Yes, I made it hidden. I was afraid of you and the child to find this woman, so her previous information has been all deleted." "Well, my fears have come true. You look for her before the child grows up. Tell me, if there's something wrong with you or the child. Brian called so suddenly and asked things she hid, so Stella was worried. "I'm fine, the child is fine. I just want to find out about this woman's background. Do you know anything about her?" Brian continued, although he knew his sister might not tell him. "This woman had received a high education abroad. Her family was in trouble. That was why she made money from surrogacy. That's all I know." Brian knew that information and it was of no value. He wanted to know the name and identity of the surrogate woman. "Sister..." "Don't ask. I don't know the rest. I haven't even seen this woman. It's no use asking me. Brian, why do you care a surrogate woman? Knowing it won't change anything. We give her money, she gives us good genes, and that's it." "If Luke knows you check her information, it is not good, it will hurt him. Don't look for her and you won't find her." Stella hung up the phone directly. Brian was disappointed, but he didn't blame Stella. At the beginning he required to keep it a secret, and his sister did her best to hide it. "Albert, did you find the nanny who worked in the villa? She had been with the surrogate for some time, and she must be able to recognize her." Suddenly, Brian thought of the nanny, and his hope was rekindled. "Yes, she died in a car accident a year ago." Albert answered. He used all method and did not expect the clues stopped at Stella. Brian was disappointed again. He took a deep breath and spat it out with annoyance. It seemed that he could only ask his father for help. Winnie looked at Brian leave standing in the window of the bedroom on the second floor, just like a few years ago, that tall and straight back did not change, that cold imperious temperament did not change. It seemed that Brian was the same as before and it was her changed. She failed to control her heard when she met him again. After Brian left, she stood there and thought for a long time before collecting her thoughts. Winnie came downstairs, Rufus was not there. So she went to his study to look for Rufus. "Sir, did I bother you?" Winnie said softly. "No, I am idle." In fact, Rufus was looking at the information Albert sent him, analyzing all of the Burns Group. But he still greeted Winnie kindly. "Sir, I'm taking the children home tomorrow." "Why?" Rufus asked in surprise. He guessed Winnie would find him at this hour, but he did not expect that she would go back. "My sister will be back tomorrow, and she can take care of me. I won't bother you anymore." Winnie said politely. Even if her purpose had not been achieved, she had to go back. She could not let Vanessa stay home alone and Vanessa could not live here, so she could only go back. "I thought you were not used to living here. No need to go back, bring your sister here. Tomorrow morning

I will ask Paul to clear a guest room." Rufus was relieved to hear that it was no big deal. "No, we can't bother you, I..." "Well, it's all right. I haven't got on enough with the children and I haven't made much progress in the relationship with Brian. There will be no hope without you. Help me, leave here and return your house." Rufus said sincerely. He had been used to living with Winnie and the children, and put his hope on Winnie. If she left, he would be alone and he did not want to be lonely again. "Sir..." "Well, that's it." Winnie still wanted to refuse, but Rufus did not even give her a chance. He insisted that they stay there. Winnie could not find any reason to oppose it and could only accept it with embarrassment. The next afternoon, Winnie took two children to the airport and went home after receiving Vanessa. When getting on the car in the parking lot, because Winnie's car was high, the two children could not get in, Vanessa held them to get in the car. After putting Megan in the car, Vanessa turned to hold Luke. When Luke opened arms, Vanessa noticed the birthmark on Luke's arm.

CHAPTER 167 WAITING FOR SCORES TOGETHER

Vanessa stared at the birthmark on Luke's arm in surprise. "Sister..." She did not know what to say and could only look at Winnie in shock. "Get Luke into the car, I will tell you." Winnie knew that it could be hidden any longer and then everyone would know. Vanessa did as her sister said and did not continue to ask, but she was shocked. On the way home. "Vanessa, we now live in the suburbs..." Winnie told Vanessa what happened during this period of time to Vanessa. After that, they got home. But Vanessa felt difficult to accept so many things. As they got off, Rufus and Paul came out. When Rufus saw Vanessa, he was stunned. "Rufus, this girl looks like Stella. When Stella was 20 years old, she looked like this." Paul's words made Rufus recovered. It seemed that he was not the only person who thought they were alike. Stella looked like him, and this girl looked like him. "Yes." Rufus walked to the car and smiled kindly. "Welcome!" "That's Rufus I told you, Vanessa." Winnie introduced. "Hello, Sir, thank you." Vanessa greeted cheerfully. She was polite, modest and lively. "Take this as your home, you can stay as long as you like." The two sisters had the same qualities, polite and elegant. It seemed that their parents and aunt educated their children very well. After a chat in the living room for a while, Vanessa went back to the room to tidy up the luggage and asked Winnie to come with her. After closing the door, Vanessa checked Winnie's wound. "Sister, I need to make sure you're all right." "I am all right. If I am not, how can I drive to pick you up?" Winnie said while showing her wound. She knew that Vanessa would not rest assured if she did not check it. Winnie's wound recovered, but there were still scars. Looking at the scars, Vanessa could not help but hold her sister and cry. "Sister, it must be very painful. Why didn't you tell me? I should have come back and looked after you." Vanessa cried out of guilty. She never expected that her sister had encountered such a thing. "I didn't tell you because I was afraid you would be worried. Don't cry. It's all over now." Winnie comforted Vanessa, knowing that she loved her. "I'm sorry, sister, it's my fault. If it weren't for this family, you wouldn't have to suffer these things. If it wasn't for me, you wouldn't have to make money desperately. If it wasn't for making money, you wouldn't have met a man like Daniel Wong..." "Well, I am ok. It's none of your business. Don't blame yourself." Winnie was gratified that Vanessa finally grew up and became sensible. Even without her, Vanessa now could live well. "Sister..." Vanessa cried loudly. She felt distressed for her sister that she had suffered a lot. If her parents were alive, her sister wouldn't have met so many setbacks. Winnie comforted her for a while before Vanessa calm down. Vanessa wiped her tears and asked about Luke.

"Sister, the birthmark on Luke's arm....." "Well, Luke is the child I sent back and he is Megan's elder brother." Before Vanessa finished asking, Winnie gave the answer. "Really? Is he really your child?" Vanessa got tears in her eyes and confirmed in excitement. For a long time of getting along with Luke, she did not notice the birthmark on Luke's arm. The birthmark became larger, but it remained the same shape. If she was careful enough, she would have known Luke was her sister's child. "Yes, I've done the DNA test. He is definitely my child." Winnie said with affirmation. "Good, really good. I can't believe how lucky we are to meet him again." Vanessa burst into tears in excitement and her voice became louder. "Shhh...Keep your voice down." Winnie reminded in a soft voice. Everyone knew it expect the two children, She must make the children have psychological preparation and asked Brian for opinion before she told them. "Oh, I'm so excited, I keep my voice down." Vanessa reminded herself not speak loudly, but she was excited. "Sister, you have been working in the Bennet Group and kept Luke with you. Did you know he is your son?" Vanessa thought of a lot of things that she did not understand before, now it seemed to make sense. "Yes, what I do is all for Luke, as long as I can be with him, I can do anything." Winnie answered firmly. The child made her brave and for him, she could be desperate. Even if she was scolded as the secret mistress, even if Brian played with her, she would endure it. As long as Luke was fine, she could give up her life. "Sister, you are right, you are right to be with Luke, but you are attentive to Luke, didn't Brian have doubt?" Winnie admired her sister's tenacity and her devotion to her children. "Yes, and he is looking for proof. I think it will be revealed soon. He will soon find out." Thinking of this matter, Winnie was in dilemma. "What shall you do then? Will he take Megan away?" Winnie suddenly became panic. She understood the possessiveness of the rich people, once he knew that Megan was his child, he certainly would not let her continue to live with Winnie. "Sister, let's go. We're leaving with Luke and Megan. Go somewhere they can't find us." Vanessa was really afraid of children being snatched, so she could only come up with this idea. "....." Winnie did not speak. She had thought about this idea, but it did not solve the practical problem. No matter where she hid, she believed that Brian would find her, the child would doubt, and she would not be able to explain. In addition, Vanessa could not leave B City since she had to go to the university. Vanessa seemed to see her worry, so she added. "Sister, I can study in elsewhere and I can do a good performance in other city. Now the most important thing is to keep Megan and Luke. We will not see them again if they are taken away." For the sake of two children, Vanessa would rather give up her university in B City, because she considered children were more important than her. Vanessa was afraid, just like the danger had come. But Winnie was calm. "You have to study in the university in B City, and there will be a way for the children. Don't worry, it can be resolved. I don't believe that fate will drive us into a blind alley." If her younger sister gave up her dream university, Winnie would be guilty for a lifetime. If Luke left Brian, it would be a loss for Luke and unacceptable for Brian. So Winnie had only one choice: to face reality. No matter what, as long as it did not hurt the children, did not affect Vanessa's future. "Sister, I support you. I have grown up and I won't let you face the difficulties alone." Vanessa did not have much hope of the outcome, but her sister insisted, she had to support her sister. No matter how much she could help, it was a kind of strength and warmth to her sister. After Vanessa knew Luke's identity, she felt more like Luke. She had been following Luke. She even sat beside Luke when having dinner and watching TV. The family was sitting in the living room after dinner, waiting for Vanessa's score. Although the scores were to come out at 12 a.m., everyone was in good spirits. "Auntie, what is wrong with you today? Why do you like Luke today?" Megan pouted and said in dissatisfaction. "I like you, too. Luke always takes care of you, so I thank him." For fear that Megan would get angry, Vanessa found a persuasive excuse. "So, you love me more?" Megan did not understand, but hearing her aunt's explanation, she felt better. "I love you more. I love you since you are very small. So now I want to love Luke, is that ok?"Vanessa loved both of them, but she felt that Luke had not been around them, he must lack of maternal love, and Megan did not have father's love. Alas, the two children were poor. They did not know their parents were around. "All right, don't be too obvious, Auntie, I will be jealous." Megan reluctantly accepted it and she loved Luke too. "Ok, ok, I will be fair." Vanessa smiled, looking at Luke. This child was lucky, at least when he needed help, he met his mother who loved him the most. "Auntie, I love you. I am a boy, I should take care of Megan and you." Luke said, which made Vanessa's tears almost fell down. "Luke, good boy. Only when you grow up can you take care of me." Vanessa was flattered that there was one more person to love her. They chatted happily and did not feel nervous about the scores. It was the first time Rufus met Vanessa, but he felt familiar about her, perhaps she looked like Stella. He was also sitting in the living room with everyone waiting for Vanessa's score. He would be excited if the score was high. As they were talking, Brian suddenly appeared in the living room. "Daddy..." "Uncle..." Although they met yesterday, the two children were excited to see Brian. "Why are you still up so late at night?" Brian squatted down and said softly.

CHAPTER 168 SUDDEN DEPARTURE

Now he had been used to getting along with the children, so he knew how to get along with them, consciously revealing his love. "My aunt's score will come out tonight, we are waiting for it!" Megan said in a bright sweet voice. "Can you wait till midnight?" Brian unconsciously raised the corners of his mouth looking at the lovely Megan. Winnie and Vanessa saw such a scene often, but Rufus was surprised that Brian had such a change. Since Brian's mother died, he had not seen Brian's smile. He always had a bitter face. Brian was serious. He brought pressure to others and virtually set up obstacles for himself. Seeing that he smiled, Rufus was more pleased than surprised. Brian was his child, and he hoped more than anyone else that he could be happy, put aside all the repressed things in his heart and live a free life. He was changing little by little, and this change was the credit of Winnie and the children. But could he change after their relationship ended? "Yes, we must be the first time to share the joy of Auntie." Luke answered positively. He was not sleepy now, so it could be no problem to wait until 12 o'clock. "Good, let's wait together." Brian got up and looked at Vanessa, who was also looking at him, but Vanessa's expression was different. It seemed that she had something to hide. "Here you are, Brian." Vanessa even spoke in a somewhat restrained voice. "Yes, I know your will have your score today, so I come to wait with you." Brian stopped smiling, but he was gentle. "Thank you, Brian!" Vanessa was usually very lively and talkative, but after knowing Luke was the son of her sister, she did not know what to say. She was more nervous to see Brian than to wait for her score, for fear she said something wrong and they would accidentally lost Megan and Luke. "Not at all. Let's wait." Brian did not think too much, thinking that Vanessa was nervous because of the scores. Brian sat down, and the two children stuck to him and leaned on him. Winnie was next to him. With them around, he felt at ease. Brian looked sideways at Winnie, but Winnie had been watching TV and did not look at him. In spite of this, he was at ease at the moment. "You won't leave, right, Vanessa?" Brian asked her. He thought it was too quiet in the living room because there were only two children talking, but the silence seemed to be because of him. "When the score comes out, I will see which university to apply for. I have to go back to A City to help my aunt take care of the drugstore after the application. And then I come back when school starts."

Vanessa answered carefully, for fear that the question got Luke and Megan involved. "It will take some time. Sell the drugstore as soon as possible. If you really like the drugstore, you can open a new one here." Brian wanted them to be together, so they could take care of each other. In doing so, he was relieved. "Aunt loathes giving up. Never mind, when I go to the university, she will come back." Vanessa knew what her aunt was thinking and never urged her. She wanted to stay with her aunt like this for the last two months. "Is that you can't find the right buyer because the money is not enough?" Rufus asked. "It is one of the reasons. My aunt was reluctant to give it up." Winnie answered, because she found Vanessa was nervous. Winnie continued. "My aunt went to medical school and became an excellent doctor. Later, she went abroad to provide medical support in some underdeveloped countries in Africa. She has never left the medical profession in her whole life. It is understandable she does not want to give up." "I've also thought that if she gets bored at home after she comes over, I'll let her run a little drugstore, as long as her mental world isn't empty." It was the first time Winnie told so many things about her aunt. She had made a plan and had discussed with her aunt, but her aunt still refused to come back. Winnie knew that she had things reluctant to let go. It was the first time Brian heard of that Winnie's aunt used to be a doctor, so he unconsciously fixed his eyes on Rufus. There was a moment of astonishment and meditation of Rufus and then a look of undetectable pain was on his face. When he saw the melancholy on Rufus's face, Brian's resentment against him burned up again, and the image of his mother dying in front of him also invaded his mind. Anger and resentment rose up in his mind, but he could not lose temper because Winnie, children and Vanessa were there. He pushed the children aside and went straight outside. For the sudden departure of Brian, they were puzzled, only Rufus guessed why he was angry. "Winwin, go out and see him." Rufus asked Winnie for help, because if he went out now, they would get a quarrel. "Ok." Winnie got up and followed out. As Winnie came out, Brian was about to drive the car. "Wait a minute." Winnie called Brian. "You're upset about what I said?" Winnie asked, in fact, she was very baffling and did not know why Brian was angry, but she was very disappointed in Brian's performance at the moment, because he did not care about the feelings of children and the elderly. "Your aunt does not want to come to B City, so you all go back and never come to B City." Brian inexplicably vented his anger on Winnie. His cold voice and ruthless words stunned Winnie. "Do you have us and you have to drive us away?" Winnie looked at Brian sadly and did not understand why he hated her to this point. She had been obedient and low key. More than once she guaranteed she would not affect his life, and would not disturb his relationship with Wendy. Why did he have to drive her away? "Yes, I hate your family. You must go." Brian roared out the heartbreaking words. At the moment his resentment to his father's was vented on the innocent Winnie, even her aunt he had never met inexplicably became his imaginary enemy. Winnie was disappointed and despair, at this time, she could not say a word out. It turned out that she could not even breathe the air of the same city with him. "Give me some time, I'll think it over. When I find a place where nobody hates me, I'll leave." Winnie turned to leave and her tears flowed down. Damn Brian, ask her to leave. Ok, don't meet again. Winnie did not go back to the house. She would worry everyone if she had gone back in such a way. She quickly walked to Leo's care, opened the door and started the car as fast as she could, then sped away. She needed a space to release all her grievances, a little time to let her emotions settle down, and a place where there was no one to put all her love out. Winnie suddenly drove the car away, and then Brian recovered from anger. Looking at the car galloping away, he was afraid that Winnie had an accident because of emotion chaos. He got in his car and chased out as fast as he could. Winnie did not know where to go. She felt this city was so strange that she had no room to stay. Winnie suddenly heard the horns of car behind her, and the light alternately refracted her eyes. She knew it must be

Brian. In the dark and silent outskirts of the city, the sound of the whistle was particularly harsh. Winnie angrily stepped on the accelerator and turned in intersection, but had been following her. Brian was angry and anxious. He regretted he lost temper to Winnie. He did not control his motion and hurt Winnie. What he said just now was not true. He did not want Winnie to leave, nor did he dislike her family. But the words had been said, and it was too late to regret. Brian now just wanted to catch up with Winnie and explained to her. But no matter how he honked the horn, no matter how he flashed the lights, Winnie ignored him and drove the car faster and faster. It worried Brian. Winnie turned the car around and it came to the end of the road. She slammed on the brakes and the car stopped at once. The beach was ahead, and then it was the sea. As long as she drove forward a little bit, she would say farewell to Brian, and she would never be disgusted again. Winnie's anger erupted at this moment, she did not do anything wrong, why should she be so treated unequally. Why Brian decided if she stayed or not? She loved him, he was treasure, but if she did not love him, he was nothing and she had not need to care about everything he said. At this thought, Winnie opened the door to get out of the car and walked towards the car behind angrily. As the sea breeze blew, she found tears on her face. She stubbornly wiped away the tears, and continued to walk to Brian who had got off the car. When Brian got off the bus, he happened to see Winnie wipe her tears. This scene stung him like a needle. Seeing this scene, he blamed himself even more. "What do you want? I just want a quiet place to stay for a while, and you forced me here. Must I jump into the sea?" Before Winnie finished speaking, Brian held her in the arms. Brian interrupted Winnie's words and his heart was full of guilt. "No, I don't mean that. I'm sorry I let out my anger on you. I'm not angry with you. It's just that someone was there, I cannot yell at him." "I'm sorry, Winwin, I don't hate you or your family. I did not mean to drive you away. I could not control my emotions, so I said nonsense. Forgive me, don't leave this city. You cannot leave."

CHAPTER 169 OFFICIAL BREAKUP

Brian forcedly embraced Winnie, trying to keep Winnie, explaining with sincerity. He could not accept that Winnie left this city. Even if they were separated, even if they were unrelated, he had expectation, looking forward to see her again occasionally. He could accept that he was not with her, but he could not accept that he would never see her again. However Winnie dared not believe Brian's sincere apology. He said he got angry because of Rufus, but Rufus did not say anything, how did Rufus make him angry? He said he could not yell at his father because there were many people, but did he vent his anger on her? What did that mean? It meant that she was nothing in his heart. It meant that he just spoke out his mind, and that he just found a random excuse. Winnie burst into tears, broke free from Brian's arm and shouted loudly at Brian. "Brian, enough. I can tell it is true or false. You hate me, and if you hadn't wanted to have sex with me, you would have driven me away." "I do not accept hypocritical apology, I do not need you to apologize. It is my fault to show up to you. Don't worry, I will far away from you one day." Winnie cried while speaking. Brian had been depressed in the heart, but she was in grievances. With what she had to bear the pressure from Brian? Because she loved him? If loving a person was so painful, she would rather give up. She did not want to love him anymore. As Winnie's words fell, she turned to run. Brian stopped her. "Winwin, what I said is true. I was wrong. I apologize. How can you ever forgive me?" Brian ignored Winnie's struggle and again held Winnie in his arms. Winnie pushed against Brian's chest with both hands. Her tears blurred her eyes. Even if she widened eyes, she could not see Brian's face, so that she could not see his love and sincerity. "I will not forgive you, I will hate you for the rest of my life. It is the darkest time of my life when I was with you. I hate you! I hate you!" "Let me go, let me go, you asked me to disappear, why do you stop me?" "Let go, do you hear me?" "Damn you, Brian, you're a scoundrel. You're a bastard. I hate you." Winnie felt her heart was pierced again and again. The pain made her have no place to hide and she could only endure. She really wanted to give up everything and stay away from Brian, the man who made her sad. But it wasn't everything she gave up. It was her children, the important thing in her life. "Sorry, sorry..." "Don't say sorry. Since you are sorry, why did you do that? Are you fooling me? You want to drive me away because you played enough with me....." Winnie roared loudly. There was no one else by the sea, she could release her emotion. She could scold as she wanted. Brian was nothing to her and she had no to care about his feelings. "Brian, I hope you came to the suburbs to improve the relationship between your father and you, not to fool me again and again. Now I wish you never to be seen in the suburbs again. Your problems with your father have nothing to do with me. From now on, we're strangers." Winnie was tired. At the moment her heart was carrying too much, as if she would soon sink to the bottom of the sea. If she did not unload something, she would become the food of the shark. She told herself that from now on, she didn't care about anyone, except for the children and family. Other people's affairs had nothing to do with her. Whether they were dead or alive, happy or bored had nothing to do with her. "Winwin..." Brian was in panic now, because he could hear Winnie's disappointment and despair to him. "Don't call me, I don't know you, go away..." Winnie pushed Brian hard, because of the loud shouting, her voice had been hoarse, because of crying, her eyes had become red and swollen, which hurt Brian. He now had no other way to make Winnie calm down and could only try the old method, even though he did not know it would work. He held Winnie's waist with one hand and held the back of her head with the other and kissed her on the lips. At the moment when he touched Winnie's lip, he felt as if he had encountered an electric current and shudder all over. How long had it been? Brian could not remember how long he had not kissed with Winnie. He had been missing this feeling day and night deeply. Brian's kiss was sudden. Although Winnie missed it too, she could not accept it at this hour and did not want to humble in Brian's kiss. She tried to push away Brian, but she failed. She tried to avoid Brian's lips, but the back of her head was firmly held. Winnie could only bit his lips, but after he tasted the blood, he still refused to let go of her. She bit hard, but Brian did not let her go. Winnie burst into tears because of Brian. She failed and gave up, since she did not want to taste the blood of Brian. Brian kissed Winnie till she calmed down. Finally he let go of Winnie, and Winnie could clearly see blood on his lips, accompanied by Winnie's tears. Winnie stretched out her hand to wipe Brian's bleeding lips, but Brian took her hand and then kissed her again. No anger, no rejection, but guilty. Because of this kiss, Brian was aroused, and he could not restrain his eager. Brian picked up Winnie, who had fallen limp, and put her directly in his car. At this time, he was especially glad that his car was big enough and that this was a beach with no one at the end of the road. Otherwise, he would surely be hard to endure it. Winnie's consciousness, her body and her whole heart had been captured by Brian. She even had no thought to refuse, allowing Brian to caress her from the top to the bottom, to kiss every inch of her silky skin, to get into..... Now she was not Winnie, not the children's mother. She just wanted to be a little woman, who loved this man deeply. The car was shaking at the end of the road. The sea was wide, the air was fresh and the car inside was charming. Forty minutes later, Winnie was dressed, the car was quiet, and both of them were calm. "Isn't it time we should have a talk?" Winnie broke the silence first. At the moment, she was not the little woman who loved Brian. She was the rational Winnie, the strongest woman who could bear everything. "Winwin, I'm really sorry. I..." "It is ok, it's over anyway. If you feel guilty, just take it as the reason we break up. We fight because we are tired of each other and break up because we fight""Mr. Bennet, we signed a contract when we were together, so breaking up should be official. Now I officially break up with you, we are no longer related. From now on I won't mind your business, and please don't mind my business."Winnie said indifferently, in fact, her heart had been torn.She would not mind anyone's business or care about Brian. She knew the reason they still entangled was they did not break up officially."Winwin, are you willing to leave me?"Brian could not keep Winnie, although he wanted to, it would hurt Winnie.Breaking up made him hurt, but he could do nothing. I made him feel guilty and regret.Even so, he had no choice.Were they really over? Were they strangers from now on?Stranger was a common word, but at the moment it made him despair."I have to leave. You have driven me away, I should not stay anymore. Live your life and be happy with the woman you love."Winnie felt Brian's words were cruel and that was the reason she wanted to give up. He did not want to let her stay, or he would not ask that question."Winwin..."Well, I should go back. Vanessa's score will come out soon, I want to face it with her."Winnie got off the car directly. She was strong this time. She did not shed tears, but her heart was bleeding.Winnie drove home, and Brian followed back. They entered the room together as if nothing had happened.Rufus was still waiting with Vanessa, and the two children had fallen asleep on the sofa.Before Winnie walked into the living room, she had adjusted her mood and nothing was different except her swollen eyes.Winnie did not speak, but her face was calm. She bent over to hold the children upstairs, Brian behind pulled her away."I'll do it."Brian carefully picked up Luke and sent him to the room on the second floor. Winnie went to the room of Luke and helped cover the quilt.

CHAPTER 170 THE TOP SCORER OF SCIENCE

After covering the quilt for Luke, Winnie turned off the light. At this time, Brian had gone upstairs with Megan in his arms. They came to the room of Megan. Brian did not leave, but stood by and watched as Winnie arranged a pillow and covered the quilt for Megan. "I like Megan after getting along with her for so long. I don't want to leave her." Brian said in a soft voice. "People get apart all the time. Just get used to it." He was reluctant to leave Megan, but he had to face the reality. "If only she were my daughter, then we have no need to be apart." Brian said tentatively, hoping to see Winnie panic look. Winnie froze for a moment, and then she spoke. "Your thoughts are cruel to me. If she were your daughter, would you let me leave alone?" Winnie asked Brian, which made Brian speechless. If Megan was his daughter, would he let Winnie leave alone? "Go downstairs, Vanessa is still waiting for me." Winnie knew that Brian would not answer her questions. She knew that he would selfishly keep the child and let her leave alone. So Winnie must put down all at this time, and strive for the custody of the children. She would never let her children grow up with a stepmother who didn't like them. Penny had hurt Luke and no one could guarantee that Wendy would be kind to children and that Megan would suffer what happened to Luke. When it was time to announce the score, Vanessa felt nervous. She closed her eyes and her heart thumped. She dared not look at the computer screen. However, when Winnie accessed the website, there was an accident. She failed to access it. "Sister, are there too many people to check the score, so the server broke down?" Vanessa was worried. She had been waiting so many days and now there was problem with the computer. "Check if anyone in your class has got the score." Looking at the state of the web page, Winnie felt that the server was not down, but rather was attacked by hackers. Vanessa hurried to check. "Sister, they do not get the scores too." "I know, the server has been hacked. I'll fix it now." "Mr. Bennet, go upstairs and ask Luke to go down. I'll show him how I fix it." Winnie would not miss this good opportunity for her child to learn. She looked up and said to Brian. Although she often called his name before, Brian felt strange now, because they had broken up, because they were only connected due to Luke. Brian did not speak but directly turned to go upstairs. Winnie told Vanessa to take another professional computer. When Luke got down, the computer was ready. "Luke, watch attentively, remember attentively." "Well, I'm watching." In the fastest speed, with the most skilled means, Winnie began to fight with the hacker. At the moment she was nervous, because too many people were waiting for the results after twelve years of hard study. The faster she was, the less nervous the parents would be. Winnie was quite fast, like a rocket to the sky, like a meteor across the sky. Several people around including Paul and his wife gathered around to see, but they did not understand, only Luke watched without blinking eyes. He could understand Winnie's every step of the operation. The hacker was so great that it took Winnie a full 40 minutes to successfully attack the hacker, and the website was recovered in a split second. Winnie sighed with relief and looked at Luke. "Do you understand?" "Yes, I understand what you're doing, but I have something don't understand." Luke said clearly. "It is ok, because you have to learn how to hack before you can attack hackers. Tomorrow I will teach you how to hack." "Vanessa, input your ID card number to check scores." Winnie got excited again, but Rufus looked at Winnie thoughtfully. He knew that she was a software expert and that she had some achievements in the appearance design of mobile phones. To his surprise, Winnie was also a computer expert. Rufus was thinking Winnie was a all-around talent. If Brian dismissed her, it was the Bennet Group's biggest loss. "Sister, I am nervous and my hand is shaking. You do it." Vanessa was nervous when her classmates had announced their scores. "You make me nervous." Affected by Vanessa, Winnie did not dare to check the score. Then Brian volunteered. "I'll do it." He sat next to the computer, entered Vanessa's ID card number, soon the computer showed Vanessa's scores. When Brian saw the score, he was shocked. "Vanessa ranked first in the province with a total score of 731." "Champion in science!" Rufus could not calm down hearing that. He knew she had good performance in study, but he did not expect that she would rank first in the province. "Yes, top scorer in science." Brian recovered from the shock and repeated. "Really?" Vanessa had been covering her eyes and could not believe what they said. She went to the computer and looked at her score with a nervous heart. After confirming her name, ID number and test number, she looked at her score. When she saw that the total score of 731, she screamed. "Really, I really was the first in the province. Sister, Sister, you see that?!" Vanessa announced excitedly. She was happy and could not restrain the excitement. At this time, Winnie did not shout excitedly but cried. Vanessa came up to hug her sister. "Don't cry, it is a happy thing." Vanessa comforted her sister. "I cry because I am glad. You have been studying hard for twelve years. I'm proud of you." Winnie knew how hard it was for Vanessa to get over the mental torture of losing her parents and the damn phobia. She did not go to bed until she learnt to one o'clock in the morning. It worth though. "Don't cry, don't cry, I'm proud of you, too." Vanessa comforted sister with excitement. After her parents passed away, they did not have an easy life. "Vanessa, good for you. You are the best." Brian could not restrain his excitement. He also felt that this was the highest honor and worthy of pride. "Congratulations, Vanessa is the pride of us all." "Congratulations, Vanessa." "Congratulations, you are great." Everyone congratulated her and Luke could not help but feeling joyful. "Congratulations, Auntie. You are my pride and my role model. I will study hard to become the number one in the province." "Good boy, Luke, you are the best, you can do better than me." Vanessa endured for a long time, and finally she cried by the words of Luke because she was moved. "Now stop crying, it's a good thing, and everybody should laugh."Rufus comforted the two sisters, feeling that they cried not only because of excellence, but also their past bitterness."Vanessa, made a call to aunt, she has been waiting."She was so happy that she forgot her aunt.Vanessa picked up the phone to call her aunt, and then the voice of Megan suddenly was heard."Oh, you skunks. What did I miss?"Everyone looked up at the top of the stairs on the second floor and saw that she was rubbing her dim eyes, which made everyone laugh.Vanessa achieved good scores. Rufus proposed a celebration and held a small family dinner the next evening in the suburbs.In addition to their family, there were Kevin and Daenerys.As promised, everyone came. They congratulated to Winnie and Vanessa. It was barbecue."Our champion is the leading role today. She must drink."Kevin raised his glass to propose."No, I'll drink soda."Vanessa refused in embarrassment. She never drank wine and she hated the smell of wine."It is such a happy day, you can drink."Winnie advised her sister, afraid to let everyone upset.Vanessa agreed. Although she hated wine, she drank one glass of it."Vanessa, you are amazing, we are so proud of you. The person I envy most now is your sister, because she has such an excellent sister."Daenerys could not restrain the excitement. Since Vanessa made such good performance, Winnie's efforts of many years did not pay in vain."Thank you, Daenerys. I'm not that good. It is my sister's credit."Vanessa was very modest. She thought she had been influenced by her sister for so many years, and it was her sister's constant encouragement and support that made her motivated to study hard."You are modest. You need not speak of such civility. If you don't drink, I won't force you. We'll drink soda and propose to your sister."Daenerys' proposal was approved. Vanessa filled the soda and handed a cup to her sister."Sister, after parents passed away, you are the only person supporting our family, you must be very tired. I will study harder, find a good job and then I will support this family and you can rest.""Sister, I propose to you. Thanking for your meticulous care when I was sick, thank you for your help and encouragement in my study!"Vanessa finished her words and could not help but shed tears.Thinking of their hardships when their parents died, she could not help but shedding tears. Her sister, aunt, Megan and she were not easy.She had never been so serious to say thank you to her sister, but today she must say, because without her sister, she could not rank the first."It is ok. I didn't do anything. It's aunt's work. No need to say such polite words with family."Winnie hugged Vanessa and patted her back. She felt gratified for her sensible sister. It was good that she was grateful.
