Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 191 INTEREST RELATIONSHIP

Winnie cried more and more bitterly, but after so many years, she had to wipe her tears herself. Winnie said, "It is my fault that I did not tell you, but I had not let Megan suffer a bit no matter it was tough of my life. But you had not kept your words." "What?" Brian was softened to see that Winnie burst into tears and did not bear to blame her or mentioned the things happened before. "When I gave Luke to you, I asked you to take care of him and let him grew up happily, but he had been living in fear and it is your fault." Speaking of Luke, Winnie was excited. She had long wanted to quarrel with Brian as Luke's mother, because he did not take good care of Luke and did not do the duty of a father. "If I knew that Luke will become what he is today, I would rather suffer than give him to you. Since you don't cherish him, why do you have to confirm if Megan is your daughter?" "No matter what I do, Megan is my child, of course I need to confirm. And you appear in my life, causing many doubts and misconceptions to me, how could I not seek the truth?" Brian raised his voice. Some things were not his intention, some things he was forced to do. "I admit that I did not take good care of Luke, I admit that I did not do a good job as a father. But that's not the same as concealing the existence for Megan." "We had an interest relationship, so you should have followed the terms of the contract and given me the child. Instead of popping into my life like this with a child. If this is known by grandpa, he must suspect you have another plan." The fact that he did not know he had a child in the world showed his incompetence as a father. This made him feel even more guilty about the child. It used to be one, now it was two. Although he was happy, he was guilty. "You've been telling me that I have a plan and I don't care if one more person sees me that way." Winnie said sadly. "Let's not talk about the past. It is pointless. Don't you want to end our relationship? What do you want, say it." Speaking of the past will only make Winnie sadder, as if the wound got salt on it. People who hadn't experienced this could not feel it. "Simple, give me Megan, I give you the money." Brian felt himself selfish, but Megan was his child. "Money, money, money, that's all you know. Megan and Luke are your children, but they are also my children. If I give you money and you give me Luke, how do you think?" Brian's selfishness made Winnie sad. After getting along for so long, Brian still did not know her. She was the surrogacy woman for money and the low woman who could be settled with money in his eyes. "I understand how you feel, because I feel the same way. I also want custody of two children. But I can't accept your request. I won't give you Megan even if I lose everything." Winnie showed her tough attitude. She had been preparing for so long for the two children. "You want custody of your two children? Do you think grandpa would agree? Do you think Grandpa would let the children..." Brian wanted to solve this thing perfectly, but Winnie's idea would not be accepted by the Bennet family. It was impossible for him to explain what she was thinking, but Winnie suddenly became excited and interrupted him. "Grandpa, Grandpa, don't talk about Grandpa anymore, okay? You don't have anything in the house except money and Grandpa?" "I'm talking about things between the four of us, Brian. Don't always bring other people into it. I gave birth to the children and no one else has the right to interfere." "You should not always talk about Grandpa, don't put him in priority of everything. You should consider the happiness of the children, you should think independently." "I don't understand why you let Grandpa control you. You are so talented and could have built your own business." Winnie continued. "I tell you, Brian, your grandfather has no right to control my affairs. I am the children's real mother. If he wants to control me, I will defend my rights in my own way." "Even if your family is powerful, I will not back down. I will not give you my two children until I die." Winnie was angry, because Brian was obedient to his grandpa. Brian was speechless, yes, why was he always obedient to his grandpa? "Winnie, they are the children of the Bennet family. You must abide by the agreement we signed." "They are my children. I was pregnant for ten months and gave birth to them. I signed the agreement, but the agreement said that if you treat the child badly, I have the right to take back custody of the child." Winnie said. She would have risked everything for her children. "Brian, I don't think we can reach an agreement on this for the time being. Think about it from the standpoint of the children. It is the best if I have the custody." Winnie got up and went to the window. Brian needed to think about it. She also needed to calm down. Silence fell on the room, and neither of them spoke. One stood by the window and the other sat on the sofa with his head bowed. This was the most difficult problem for Brian to solve. Winnie calmed down. She went from the window to the sofa and sat down. "Don't tell the children we're biological parents until they're older." Winnie whispered. She could not let the child be affected. "I'm her father. Why should I wait until she grows up? I've lost five years of being with her." Brian objected, but his tone was moderate. "Don't you know the children? They want us to be parents and four of us to be together, so that they can have a happy family. And you and I can't give them a complete home." Winnie seemed to have no energy to quarrel with Brian, she just elaborated the fact. Again, Brian was speechless. He could give everything to his children, but not a family of four with biological parents. Just when they were silent, Brian thought over Winnie's words. Why was he obedient to his grandpa? Now he got the answer, because his grandpa always had a chip to threaten him. It had been Wendy, and now it was Winnie. He didn't want Winnie to be hurt and her life to be messed up because of him. He disgusted grandpa but he was obedient, so everything could be hidden from his grandpa. "If you really want to recognize the child, just act like a godfather to her for now. We'll tell them when they're old enough to understand." Winnie thought about it. For the time being, this was the best way. Brian thought about what Winnie had said. Nothing seemed better. This could conceal the identity of Megan and the two children could stay together. "If you want to tell your family about Megan, I have no objection to it, but you have to think about how much of an impact it will have, and whether it will affect your relationship with Wendy." "You can also seek Wendy's opinion on the custody of the two children. I don't think she can accept that. So it's best to give it to me." "You don't have to worry about me interfering with your life. I moved out of the suburbs with my two children after my aunt and Vanessa came. I'll find a new school for them." "You can visit them whatever you want. You can take them out on Saturday and Sunday. For the sake of our being together, give me the two children. I can't live without them." Winnie made the final summary, but she did not know what Brian's final decision was. They sat on the sofa and spent the night like this. In the morning, Brian drove Winnie back and he could visit Megan. As soon as the car stopped, the two children ran out of the house. Naturally, Luke ran to Winnie and Megan to Brian. Brian lovingly picked up Megan and tightly hugged her in the arms. "Megan, call me Daddy from now on." Brian said, but it scared Winnie. Brian did not agree to her suggestion last night and now he asked Megan to call him Daddy, sure Winnie was nervous. "Really? Are you really my Daddy?" Megan asked in surprise, feeling she was in a dream. "It doesn't matter whether it's true or not. What matters is that I like you to be my daughter. Megan, call me Daddy." Brian explained and he could only answer like this for the sake of the child and Winnie. Winnie was relieved to hear such an answer. "That's great. Whether you are my real father or not, you're my favorite Daddy. Daddy, I love you." Megan said sweetly. She was happy and proud. "I want Mommy, too. I want Auntie to be my Mommy." Luke was jealous and loudly shouted. Winnie bent down to pick up Luke. "I will be your Mommy then, you and Megan are close brother and sister."

CHAPTER 192 FREEDOM GOT RESTRICTED

Winnie would meet the child's requirements, only in this way, Luke could call her Mommy aboveboard. "Mommy, Mommy, I am Luke, I am your son. I love you, Mommy." Luke had been waiting for this moment for a long time. He loved Winnie and relied on Winnie. "I love you too, son." Winnie could not help crying. She thought she could not hear Luke called her Mommy, but now it realized. Looking at Winnie cried again, Brian felt depressed. How should he do so he would not hurt the three people he loved so deeply? The matter was basically settled, and he needed to make a final decision. After that day, Brian would come to suburb to spend time with two children whenever he could. Each time he came, Winnie would go back to her room to continue her work. She wanted to honor her promise to Brian, not to disturb him and not to appear in front of him as much as possible. Brian was playing outside with his two children. From time to time, he would look at the window on the second floor, hoping that Winnie would stand there and he could see her. But the figure he had hoped for never appeared. "Daddy, can the four of us go out this weekend?" Megan ran to Brian and asked in a sweet voice. "Yeah, we haven't hung out for a long time. Daddy, if you don't have to work, go out with us." Luke came to ask for Brian's opinion. "Sure, I am free this Sunday. Let's go out. But you need to tell Mommy." Brian readily agreed, now he would be a competent father. He could not satisfy all demands of the children, but he would do his best. "All right, I will talk with Mommy with brother." Two children excitedly ran to find their mother, Brian sat outside waiting for the good news. After a while, the two children came back in a happy mood. Brian knew they had made it. ... Penny lay in the hospital, people finally came to see her, but they were the last people she wanted to see, and they were not visitors. "You are so shameless, because of you, the Burns family is ruined, everything is ruined." "Why didn't you bump dead, so the Burn Group would not go bankruptcy." "Penny, you are a curse, you should not have returned to the Burns family. Dad was wrong to bring you back." These words were spoken by the half brothers and sisters of Penny. They hated Penny to the extreme, otherwise they would not have come to the hospital to scold her. "Get out of here, you failed to defend the Burns Group, why blame me?" Penny was unconvinced. They had not seen her as a sister, and she had never seen them as families. "You are the one should get out. We won't be like this without you." Penny's sister snarled sharply, and at the moment she wished she could kill Penny. "Why don't you go to Brian now and ask him to help? It's better than staying in bed." Penny's brother said without pity. "Get out, all of you. I have nothing to do with you." Penny could not bear their insults and cried out in a wild voice. But the next moment, her voice stopped, because she was slapped by her sister. "You are so arrogant. I really don't know how your mean mother lectured you. The Burns family has nothing to do with you." "Our family is defeated, but we are still together. From now on you are still alone, you are still an orphan. If I see you again, I'll skin you." After that, Penny's brother and sister left. Penny was again alone in the ward and she could not help but shedding tears. From this moment on, she was alone again. She had Winnie and Daenerys with her before. But now she had no one around. Penny burst into tears and began to recalled the past. Even if that Winnie said Brian had a woman was false, Brian would not fall in love with her. And now the Burns family had nothing, even her status as not as good as Winnie's, Brian was more unlikely to have a crush on her. So she finally understood that Brian could not be with her anymore. Since it was impossible for her to stay with Brian, she couldn't stay here. As for her hatred with Winnie, she wouldn't forget. It would not be too late for her to come back and take revenge when she had recovered. After making a decision, Penny found a nurse, asking for discharge procedures. Soon after the nurse walked out than the police came in. "Miss Burns, you have been accused by Mr. Brian of child abuse, and the result of the traffic accident has not been reached, so you are not allowed to leave the hospital for the time being, and you are not allowed to leave B City until the matter is investigated." After the warning, the police left, and Penny was stunned. Her travel was restricted from now on. Evidence of child abuse meant there was no chance for her to leave. At this thought, Penny suddenly regretted. She should leave as her father told her. ... It was Sunday, and Qin got up early to prepare some food by herself. Two children were going to the Binhai Park. Binhai Park was big and it was a park that integrated amusement and leisure. The lunch would be had in the park. Handmade food was hygienic and the children loved to eat. Today, Brian drove his car he was in a very happy mood. When they arrived at the park, Albert had already got the tickets. Winnie carried a backpack containing children's tissues and mobile phones. After the rest of the things were handed over to Albert, four people started a day of play. Megan came here for the first time and she was particularly excited. It was not the first time Luke came, but he was excited too, because he had Daddy, Mommy and sister with him. "Megan, let's play with the pirate ship." Luke excitedly shouted. "Well, let's play together. Daddy, Mommy, let's play together." Megan begged. She wanted to play with her parents and to experience what it was like to have parents. "I won't play. Let Daddy take you and brother to play." Winnie was most afraid of these recreational facilities, even if there was no danger, she did not dare to play. "Don't be afraid, Mommy, Daddy is here. Daddy and brother and me will protect you." Megan continued to beg, knowing that Mommy was afraid to play that. Then Brian spoke in a low voice. "Let's go. The kids are looking forward to it. Pirate ship is not dangerous." "I..." "Yes, Mommy, don't be afraid. I'll protect you." At this time Luke who had run away came back to persuade Winnie. "Well, then, let's go and play." Winnie did not want to let the two children down and reluctantly agreed. So all four of them went to the pirate ship. Winnie stood in front of the line, the two children stood in the middle, and Brian stood in the last. "There are so many people here, I will ask Albert to arrange us to play first." Brian pulled out his phone and was to call Albert. Winnie turned around. "Don't call. The children have to experience the normal lifestyle. Everyone is standing in line here and they are no exception." Winnie whispered. And Brian put away the phone. Brian admired what Winnie said and approved of the way she raised her children. Looking at Brian put away the phone, Winnie turned away. "I'll take your bag." Brian said. "No, it's not heavy." Winnie refused with indifference and did not turn back. But the next moment her shoulder felt the strength. She turned back and Brian took his bag. Brian forced to take Winnie's bag in his hands. Winnie had to turn around. Thankfully, it wasn't long before it was their turn. They all knew that Winnie was afraid, so the four sat in a column, and then Winnie was placed in the middle. The two children sat on both sides so that their Daddy could protect their mother, and gave the middle position to Brian. Before it started, Winnie was already nervous, and sweat oozed from her palms. Finally, the pirate ship started to run and Winnie could barely accept it. When it reached a certain height and slid down, Winnie's heart tightened. Then she screamed. "Ah..." Brian knew that Winnie was afraid and unconsciously grabbed Winnie's cold hands. Winnie was afraid and she did not notice Brian's hand, but as the pirate ship was in the next turn, she was not afraid anymore. It wasn't until the pirate ship stopped that she realized that Brian was holding her hand. She withdrew her hand in embarrassment and followed the child to the next game. The four of them played one game after another. Although Winnie was afraid, she was happy. Soon it was noon. They walked to the lunch area and saw a bungee jumping game. "Brother, do you dare to play bungee jumping? Isn't it too scary to be that high?" Megan was curious. "I think it's fine. They'll protect us. Want to play?" Luke was a boy and dared to try. "Give it up, you are not the age of bungee jumpers." Brian said to the two children. "Too bad, or I'd like to try it." Megan said, as if she really dared to try. They continued to move forward, but Winnie still stood there watching the people bungee jumping in the high place. Some jumped on their own, some were pushed over by staff, some screamed, some were silent. Winnie wondered what they were thinking at the moment they jumped, and what it was like to stand there and jump down.

CHAPTER 193 ATTEMPT TO DIE

Luke looked back and found his Mommy did not keep up with them, so he told her. "Mommy, let's go." "Luke, I want to have a try." Winnie said suddenly. She didn't know what other people were thinking when they jumped down from high places, but she knew it would be a good way to relax. She had been depressed for so long. She wanted to jump down wishing to throw out all the worries in the heart, so that she could have an easy life. Luke was surprised and looked towards the direction of bungee jumping. At this time Megan came to her too. "Mommy, you're too scared to go on a pirate ship. Are you sure you can bungee jump? It's scary to be that high." Megan reminded Mommy and worried about Mommy. "I can do it. I want to challenge myself." Winnie smiled. Life was always challenging, so was Winnie's life, but her challenges were more than others, bungee jumping was not a big deal for her. "Don't play, it's too dangerous." Brian said, but his words became Winnie's motivation. "Never mind, I'll have a try." Dangerous? Did she experience less danger? This was the least important one. Winnie eventually made her way to the bungee jump ticket office. Albert did not get the ticket for this. They had to line up to buy tickets, take their blood pressure and weight, and finally sign a safety notice. "This gentleman is your husband, right? Sir, Please take a look at safety notice, and then sign on it." Said the staff in a routine way. "He's not..." Winnie wanted to say that he was not her husband, but Brian had taken the safety notice and signed his name on it. Brian was now glad that he did not succeed in preventing Winnie, otherwise how could he have the feeling of being Winnie's husband. "Families can follow." The staff spoke again. "Never mind. I'll go up by myself. You take care of the children." Winnie refused. She was afraid that she might be laughed at by Brian. "There are staff who can take care of the children, and your husband can accompany you up." The staff's words made her speechless. After giving the children to the staff, Brian followed Winnie up. Brian's position was not far away from Winnie's, but the middle was in suspension. The two were parallel, but all he could see was Winnie's profile. Seeing that the staff did security work on Winnie, Brian got suddenly nervous. He was afraid that Winnie was in danger because of the staff's negligence and that he could not see Winnie again. Winnie had been ready and she was not nervous as she imagined. Standing at the highest point, the sky she saw was boundless, and the sea was boundless. At this moment all the things for her were nothing. She looked up at the sky and looked down at the foot, and the smallest thing in the world was human being. Would it be the end and everything would start all over? Would she forget everything, all people, all the joys and sorrows as well as the man she loved? "Are you ready, ma'am?" Asked the staff. "Yes, don't push me, I will jump down." Winnie said indifferently. "OK, look at your husband. There is someone taking picture of you and recording your brave moment." Winnie, in accordance with the staff, looked at Brian. She wanted to see what her husband in others' eyes was like. She wanted to see if he belonged to her at this moment. Brian was standing there, he was close but she could not touch him, just like them in real life. She would have fallen to pieces if she had gone to him recklessly. There was only one step between them, but this step was an abyss. At that moment, Brian was even more afraid. He suddenly had a feeling of losing Winnie forever, and this time the feeling was particularly strong. His eyes were full of worry and fear, and he spoke. "Winwin, don't play, let's go home." Brian could not help saying that if he saw a road, he would run to stop her. It reminded him of his mother. If he had gone home earlier and stopped his mother at the most critical moment, the tragedy would not have happened. Winnie heard Brian's words, but it was her own decision to stand here. Even if she jumped down and she would die, she would not flinch. Just like her fate, all the roads were curved, but they were chosen by her and she would finish it. Winnie did not answer Brian, but showed a beautiful smile. Then she jumped off. 'Goodbye, Brian, after this jump, please leave my world. I hope to bump into amnesiac and to forget Brian.' If she could not forget Brian, she would rather be buried in the sea with the rope broken, so that she would never have to remember Brian and never suffer for him again. Winnie's smile made Brian's heart suddenly sink to the bottom of the valley. At the moment Winnie jumped down, as if it was their departure. Brian's heart stopped beating at the moment when Winnie jumped down, and his breath also stopped. This moment was like the history repeating itself when his mother died. His mother was dying in front of his eyes and Winnie was jumping down before his eyes. Both of these women were his favorite who made him painful if they left. At the moment when he saw Winnie jumped off, Brian suddenly felt that he owed Winnie too much. And she jumped down with despair and did not even give him a chance to make it up. If Winnie disappeared in his world, the debt to her that could not be compensated would become his lifelong regret. At this moment, he understood a lot of things. Winnie was the woman he loved deeply. Even if he could not give her close care, he could not make her, which was the most basic protection. Brian came down and saw Winnie in the reception hall. At that moment, he walked up to Winnie without saying anything and held her tightly in his arms. Only in this way could he truly feel the existence of Winnie, and only in this way could he be sure that the panic was just a dream. Winnie was suddenly embraced. Although she was still in shock and needed such a hug to appease her, this man did not belong to her, and she could not hug him. Winnie broke free from Brian's embrace and once again showed a sad smile. "Come on, let's go get the kids." Winnie had already thrown everything in the sea of just bungee jump, but Brian's embrace picked up all the troubles back, including her love for him. They came to the location for lunch. Albert had brought over the food Winnie made. "Megan, Luke, I made it, have a try." Winnie placed the lunch in front of the two children and ignored Brian. Because they were not boyfriend or girlfriend, not friends or even colleagues. He was just the father of her children and she was the mother, biologically. "Mm, it's delicious. Daddy, have some food. Mommy is good at cooking." "Yes, she is the best." Luke loudly praised. "Okay, I will have a try." Brian put a piece in his mouth and tasted it carefully. It was the taste of home, the taste of happiness. "Well, it is delicious. It is blessing to have Mommy's food." Brian praised. "We are all blessed. We can eat Mommy's cooking for the rest of our lives. Daddy, you can come back and eat when Mommy cooks for us." Megan said and she did not feel the estrangement between Daddy and Mommy and thought they would be like this forever and Mommy would cook for Daddy. Hearing that, Brian and Winnie had different feelings. Winnie thought it was a joke that Brian liked to eat her food. He would soon have another person to take care of his daily life. It was impossible for him to eat her food. Brian thought it would be impossible for Winnie to cook for him because she would spend her limited time making money. "Eat, or it will be out soon." Winnie said to relieve the embarrassment of two people. Their picnic in the park continued. Seeing that the two children were so happy, Winnie felt that it was a success to have such a life. Back home in the evening, they were tired, and the two children had fallen into asleep on the way back. In the suburban villa, Winnie returned to her room after settling their children, only to find Brian sitting on the sofa. "It's too late, you should go back." Winnie whispered as she walked to the bed. "I have made a decision about custody of two children." Brian said coldly and frowned tightly, which made Winnie nervous. "Wait, listen to me before you make a decision." Winnie seemed to have known Brian's decision and she would strive for the children's custody. Winnie went to the bed and sat down. "If Luke stays with you, I am afraid that the chairman will train him into the second you. Luke and you are different, he is a boy who can not be bound or restrained. I want him to be free while growing up. I can't let him live without ego like you do." "The chairman is too autocratic. He puts too much emphasis on interests and neglects the growth of the child. He will neglect his needs. You are willing to be bound, but I don't want Luke to become a person who only cares about the interests." Winnie thought for the sake of the children.

CHAPTER 194 CUSTODY OF CHILDREN

When Winnie found that Luke was her son, if she found that Luke was happy, she would have left with Megan. But Luke had a miserable life and she had to stay. Now that she had stayed, she would devote all her energies to the child, and do all she could to gain custody of him. Brian looked at Winnie and knew that what she said was reasonable, but he was not willing to be bound. He had his reason and wanted to be free. "Winwin, grandpa is almost 90 years old, it is impossible to influence Luke..." Brian just wanted to explain, but Winnie became more and more nervous. "I know, but I am afraid you will become the second chairman, in case you restrict his freedom." Winnie was reasonable to worry, in her view, Brian and the chairman had not difference essentially, otherwise he would not be willing to be bound by the chairman. Hearing that, Brian's eyes were covered with sadness. In Winnie's eyes, he was like his grandfather, who care profit only. But he wanted it was not the truth. He was not the kind of person who was irresponsible. There were people in his heart who were more important than profit. "Winwin, I have decided to give you custody of two children." Brian did not continue the topic just now and directly gave his answer. Winnie stared at Brian in surprise. She doubted that if she had heard it wrong. How could it be? How could Brian make such a decision? How could he give her the two children? She was ready to force him with death, but not it did not need that. "Really? Did I hear you right?" "No, I'm serious. We're going to have custody of the child certified tomorrow." Brian's decision was made at the moment when Winnie jumped down. At that moment, he was afraid that the children would lose their Mommy. At that moment, he was afraid that she would really leave him. At that moment he figured out everything. It didn't matter who had the custody of the children. The important thing was that they were his children. "Thank you, thank you, thank you for thinking of the children, thank you for not fighting with me." Winnie was so excited that she wanted to cry, but she held back. That was a good thing. She could not cry and could only laugh. "I know it's unfair to you, and I know I've been selfish. But that's the best I can do for the kids. Don't worry, I promise you, I will not get married and the children will not have stepfather. I will let them grow up healthily and happily." Winnie kept talking excitedly. Seeing that Winnie was happy, Brian finally felt at ease. That was what he made it up to her. "Don't be so happy. I have my own demands." Brian said in a calm voice. "Ok." "Megan has to have my surname. When I want to see the children, you can stop me. You can't take your children away and leave out of the country. You have to live in B City all the time. Grandpa will not know about this. Besides, I will pay five million a month for the two children." "No problem. I'll agree to all your terms. But you don't have to pay, I can..." Brian had given her custody of two children, and she had no reason to refuse any of his demands. "I have to pay, or I would feel sorry for them." Speaking of this, Brian was in a low mood. Winnie felt distressed and did not refuse. "All right, then." "Since you gave me the children, I will give you back the money. But it will be a while. I just bought the house and I don't have much money." "What money?" It confused Brian. "The surrogacy money, I should pay you back." Winnie explained about the money. "Surrogacy money? Winwin, it is an insultation if you give it back to me." Brian's face suddenly darkened and his voice cooled. Winnie did not ask him for a penny and even wanted to give him back the surrogate money. He really couldn't take it. Not taking a penny from him showed only one thing. She had no feelings for him after such a long time. That was why she had to figure everything out, especially about money. But he still loved Winnie in this case, who was independent and strong, tough and unyielding. Brian got up and wanted to leave, but Winnie spoke again. "I didn't mean to insult you. I have respected you all the time." "Mr. Bennet..." Winnie was more emotional than rational at the moment, and almost said that she loved him. However, she knew that she would only be laughed at and would only bring trouble to Brian. Thinking like this, Winnie held back. "Mr. Bennet, thank you for letting me be with the children." Winnie said thank you from her heart. She was grateful that she could meet this man in her life and that they had two priceless treasures. Brian did not speak and left in silence. The next day Winnie asked for a leave with the company in the afternoon and followed Brian to implement the child's household registration. At Brian's request, the children should be on his household book. When the household registration officer asked her what Megan's name was, Winnie was perplexed. "I was so tired yesterday that I slept after you left and forgot the matter of Megan's name. Shall we call her Megan Bennet?" Winnie asked Brian for advice. "Julia Bennet." Brian said firmly, because he had long thought about the name of Megan. "All right, whatever you say." Winnie didn't think much of it. Instead, she thought Julia Bennet was a good name. So Julia Bennet's name was on Brian's household registration book. Holding the household registration book with Julia Bennet's name, Brian was unusually at ease. On the contrary, Winnie was lonely. "It's a bit sad that I'm alone with such a big household registration book." Winnie involuntarily burst it out. "Better than me, you are alone in the household book, but I am alone in the real life." When it came to loneliness, Brian felt he was more lonely. Now he didn't even have a home. He lived in an office all the time. He didn't want to go to his grandfather's house. He even hated there when his uncle came back. The villa had been given to Penny and he had taken his stuff away. He intended to live with Wendy in the mountain villa, but since he knew that Winnie was the surrogate, he wanted to seal it up, so that there were only his and Winnie's memories. He went to the suburbs occasionally because Winnie and her children lived there. After a few days, Winnie and the children would move out and he became homeless. "You're alone temporarily. You'll have a home when Wendy comes back." Winnie whispered, she knew she shouldn't say these things, but could not control it. Speaking of Wendy, Brian did not continue. Because the closer Wendy came back, the more agitated he felt, and sometimes he even had the impulse to escape. "Let's go to the notary office." With that, they moved on to the next item. Coming out of the notary office, Winnie felt at ease. The custody of her two children was protected by law and would never be taken away. However, standing outside the door of the notary office, it was time for two people to really separate. "In the future, if you can't solve the problem, ask me for help. Only when you are well, can the two children be well." Brian said in a low voice. It was his concern for Winnie, which Winnie could accept. "Well, don't worry. I'll turn to you for help if I can't get over it. You don't have to worry about the children. I'll take care of them." Winnie assured Brian. The atmosphere between the two people was so repressed that Brian wanted to roar loudly. "Winwin..." "Yes." "Keep in touch with me whenever the kids need help." Brian wanted to say something, but he didn't know what to say. "Sure, take good care of yourself. Be happy in the future." Winnie's nose became sour when she said that. She turned and wanted to leave, but was pulled by Brian into his arms. He tightly embraced Winnie, wishing to melt her into his body, so that they would not separate. But the reality was so cruel that he had to separate from Winnie, so that she could have a peaceful life. "Take good care of yourself and don't make me worry." After that, Brian suddenly released Winnie and turned to walk away. The straight figure was still calm, the sonorous and powerful pace was still steady, but his heart was hurt. Winnie could not hold back her tears. From that day on, Winnie never saw Brian again, nor did Brian come to see her again. It was not that there was no chance to meet, it was not that Brian did not miss the children, it was that both of them deliberately avoided each other. The airport. Winnie picked up her aunt and Vanessa with Megan and Luke. To her surprise, she met Brian when she got off the car and walked toward the airport. "Daddy!" "Daddy!" The two children ran to Brian. Winnie stood there, watching him. He was still handsome and cold. Looking at her casual clothes, she felt there was a huge gap between them. "What are you doing here?" Brian was surprised to see the two children and Winnie. After many days, she was still so beautiful, elegant. "We come to pick up my aunt. Daddy, why are you here? Are you here to pick up my aunt?" Megan asked. "Oh, your aunt is back. I am not here to pick her up, I came back from business trip." At this time, Winnie walked to Brian. She did not speak but gave a faint smile. "Is Vanessa back?" Asked Brian. "Yes, she will go to school tomorrow." Winnie was always smiling and polite. "You moved out of suburb?" Brian continued to ask, but felt frustrated.

CHAPTER 195 THE FAMILY REUNITES

"Yes, we moved to our house last night." Winnie replied lukewarm. "Go home when you have time. Your father is old and afraid to be alone." Winnie could not help but said. It was for the sake of Brian, because she was afraid that Brian would regret one day. Brian's emotion changed and his face darkened. Seeing that, Winnie said. "Vanessa's flight will be soon arrived. I have to pick her up." "Megan, Luke, say goodbye to Daddy." "Bye, Daddy!" "Bye, Daddy!" The two children spoke in unison and left with Winnie. After receiving Vanessa and her aunt, they went to the cemetery to see Winnie's parents. Isobel inevitably cried. Then they went home and Winnie cooked dinner. It was the first time the family got together and had a reunion dinner. From then on, Luke was with them. "Sister, I love this house so much. There are exactly five rooms for each of us." While eating, Vanessa looked at the house. But the best part was there were exactly five rooms. "Well, it's nice. It must be expensive." Isobel's thought was completely different from and Vanessa's. She thought the size of the house did not matter and it was the steadfast to have money in hand. "Winwin, will Luke live in our home?" Isobel liked Luke, but she did not understand why his parents kept him with Winnie. "Have dinner first, Aunt, then I will tell you why." Winnie knew she could not hide it from her aunt anymore and she should know about it. She chose to tell her after dinner otherwise her aunt could not finish the dinner. After dinner, the two children played in the living room and there was crying of joy coming from Winnie's room. "Really? Are you serious? Is Luke your son?" Isobel asked in disbelief. "Yes, I have the paternity test. If he is not my son, how would I keep him around me? It is a big responsibility to raise a child of others." Winnie said and Isola was happy and burst into tears. "Good, good, finally we have him back. I want to give him a hug, I want to see the birthmark on his arm." Isobel was to walk out excitedly, but was stopped by Vanessa. "Aunt, don't go out like this, you will frighten the children. They don't know it yet and sister said they will be told when they grow older." Hearing that from Vanessa, Isobel sat down, but she was excited. "Right, I can't frighten the children." Let alone the children, she was frightened. "Aunt, I found Luke and have the custody of the two children." Winnie told her the good news and Vanessa became excited. "Really? Did Brian agree?" "Yes, it is incredible, but he agreed." Winnie still could not believe it. "But he changed the name of Megan and two children were in his household book." "It is not a big deal, as long as we have the children." Vanessa had the same thought as Winnie. As long as the children could live with them, they could agree with any requirement. "What is Megan's name now?" Isobel calmed down and minded the surname of Bennet. "Julia Bennet." Winnie felt it was a good name. And after transferring to a new kindergarten, she would give this name to Megan. "It must be a powerful family." "Sister, who came up with this name?" Isobel wanted to know about the Bennet family, but Vanessa asked a question, so she did not get what she wanted to know. She did not continue to ask and hoped she was overthinking. "Mr. Bennet came up with it." Winnie explained and did not think much of it. "Good, it is a nice name and easy to be remembered." Vanessa hoped that there was not no meaning of it, but according to her understanding of Brian, it could not have any meaning it. The next day the family began a happy life. Vanessa's school was very close, and she went to school by herself. To her surprise, her class had been arranged, and she had the best teacher in the school as her tutor. Vanessa wondered who helped her and thought it should be her sister. When the tutor came to her, she knew that it was Brian helped her. She left the school after talking to her tutor. Instead of going home, she went to the Bennet Group. "What do you want, Miss?" The receptionist stopped her. "Oh, nothing. I'm here to find Mr. Bennet." Vanessa said in embarrassment. "Do you have an appointment?" Continued the receptionist. "Sorry, I don't have an appointment. By the way, is Mr. Bennet available?" Vanessa politely asked. "Mr. Bennet is here, but you can't see him without an appointment." The receptionist did in accordance with the rules and regulations. "Well, I'll call him now." Vanessa pulled out her phone to call Brian. "Brian, this is Vanessa. Are you in the office?" Vanessa asked happily. "Yes, are you here?" Brian was surprised to receive a phone call from Vanessa, but he was happy. "Yes, I am downstairs. But I can't see you without an appointment." Vanessa told her the fact. "I'll ask Albert to pick you up." Brian hung up the phone, and soon Albert came down to take Vanessa to the president's office by exclusive elevator. "It won't be easy to see you, will it?" Vanessa asked mischievously. "You can see me at any time. I don't meet others, but I must see the best student in our province." Brian liked Vanessa. Seeing her, he felt like to see Winnie, feeling warm in heart. "You are funny, Brian." Vanessa took a sip of water and then became serious. "Brian, I know your time is precious. I'll go to the point. You gave me my tutor, didn't you?" Vanessa said the point. Brian was surprised that Vanessa was so intelligent. She knew it on the first day of school. "Yes." He didn't deny it. "Thank you for giving me a good tutor, I accept it. But I don't want the school and tutors to give me special treatment under your influence, otherwise I won't make any friends." Vanessa said frankly. She really needed a good tutor to help her accomplish her studies, so she gladly accepted it. "Well, your character is like your sister's. I'll call tomorrow and it won't stop you from making friends." Brian could not help but thinking of Winnie. This period of time not seeing Winnie was the most difficult day in his life. He thought that his feeling would become faint if he did not see her for a long time, but he could not forget her but miss her more. "Vanessa, don't tell your sister about, or she won't accept my help." Brian told Vanessa, lest Winnie refused. "Ok, I won't tell my sister." Neither of them would tell Winnie, because they knew Winnie's personality. Vanessa paused for a moment and then continued."Brian, have you ended the relationship with my sister? Is there no hope?"Vanessa asked about their relationship.Now her only regret was that the two children did not have a complete home."Yes, we have no hope. We are over."Brian answered and was depressed."You don't love her?"Vanessa continued and wanted to know why."....."Brian was silent for a while and then then braced himself up to answer Vanessa."I never liked her. You've been guessing.""Oh, so I thought too much."Vanessa was disappointed, not because Brian gave her answer, but Brian dared not admit he loved Winnie.Vanessa got up immediately."Brian, thank you for giving my sister the two children, thank you for not pushing my sister into a corner. Thank you for thinking of her."Vanessa said thank you and then gave a bow with gratitude."Brian, I have been bothering you for a long time. I gotta go. Let's have dinner in other day."Vanessa said politely and turned to leave.It seemed that Brian was very concerned about the right and status, otherwise there would be development on his relationship with her sister.He could not hide his love to her sister in his eyes, but he denied it.Denial was equal to giving up.Brian's mood was affected by the sudden arrival of Vanessa. He could not put his attention into the work and could only stand in a daze by the landing window.He stood in front of the landing window for a long time and finally the knock on the door pulled back his thoughts."Come in."Brian said as he made his way to his desk.When he heard the door open, he looked up involuntarily, but stopped in his tracks with a look of rare surprise."Sister.""When did you get back?"Brian walked toward Stella and gave her a hug."I just got off the plane and came to see you."Is everything all right?"Stella's voice was soft. She hugged his brother with a smile."I am good. How are you?"Brian looked up and down at his sister.This was the only one in the world he did not treat coldly. To him, his sister was the only family in the world after his mother died.

CHAPTER 196 STELLA RETURNS HOME

Stella was a woman in her late 40s. Although she had never participated in the management of the Bennet Group, she was clever and competent. Once Brian encountered difficulties, he would come to his sister for help. To Brian, Stella was a sister, a mother and a teacher. "I am good." Stella said with excitement. "You must be tired from your trip, have a seat." Brian pulled his sister to sit down on the sofa and then he continued. "Why didn't you tell me you would come back, so that I can pick you up? Where is your luggage?" "I want to surprise you. Paul picked me up and my luggage is in his car. He is waiting me downstairs and I will go see Dad." Stella said in a soft voice. "Did you come back by yourself? Where is your husband?" Hearing that Stella mentioned his father, he changed the topic. "He is busy and has no time to come back. But he will be back after some time." Although her brother was a excellent grown-up, he was still a little boy in her eyes. "Why did you come back suddenly? Is there anything wrong?" Brian asked. "Dad told me that Uncle Thomas is back, so I came and see what I can do for you." It was a simple reason, but Brian was moved. "I can deal with it. Thank you for coming back, sister." Brian understood the meaning of Stella's words. "Bring Luke back for dinner, I miss him." Stella got up, because she had not seen her father yet. "I don't know if I have time at night, but I will bring Luke back." Brian did not want to go to the suburb. Winnie used to be there, and he would go there. But since after Winnie moved out, he had not been there for once. Without she around, he did not feel at ease. "Oh, you have work. Try your best then. I gotta go, Dad is waiting for me." Stella did not force him, because she knew Brian had a bad relationship with his father. But Paul said their relationship had been improved and he often went back. She was confused why he refused today. But she did not ask him. She wanted to live for a longer time and she could have a chat with him about it. Stella was to leave, but was stopped by Brian. "Sister, have a seat, I have something important to tell you." "Important thing?" Stella sat down again with doubts. After a moment of thinking, Brian told her about Megan, but he did not mention Winnie. He wanted to tell Stella about her cute and clever daughter and wanted to bring Megan to see his sister. Stella was shocked to hear that. "I never thought that Luke has a sister. I don't know what to say now." Stella was surprised. "I was shocked too, but I am happy. She is cute and clever. Sister, you will like her." Brian said. Stella had never thought that Brian would like kids. "Where is she now?" Stella asked. It was a happy thing to have a more kid, but she asked with a serious tone. "They are with their mother." Brian then told her about the custody of the kids, but he did not say it was for the sake of Winnie. He said he was afraid that Wendy would not accept it and that Grandpa would have an impact on Luke. "Sister, Grandpa has not yet known about Luke's custody. I don't want him to know it, please hide it from him." Brian was afraid that it would have bad influence on Winnie if it was revealed, so he had to ask his sister to do so. "...I really don't know what to say. I won't tell Grandpa, but can't Wendy still accept Luke?" Stella said with concern. From her point of view, it was not the key problem that her grandpa did not agree, because he was in his 90s, and he would not have impact on Luke. But Wendy would not come back if she could not accept Luke. So what was the problem? It seemed that she needed to see the mother of the children. "If she could accept Luke, she would not leave." He felt it make sense. "Ok, bring her over at night, bring her mother over too." Stella said and got up again. "Sister, I am not sure, but I will try." Brian was not sure if Winnie would come with him, but he wanted to have a try. It was a reason that he could stay with Winnie and he did not want to miss that. Stella took a look at Brian and then left. He just said he had no time, but now he was excited when speaking of the mother of the children, so this woman meant a lot to him. Winnie got home from work and got a phone before she changed her clothes. Seeing that it was Brian calling, she picked it up after a moment of hesitation. "Yes?" Since they separated, Winnie never called his name because she did not know what to call him. She was not his employee anymore and had nothing to do with him, so she did not feel right to call his name. "I want to bring the children to the suburb. I am downstairs and he asked you to come with the children." "He" referred to his father, but he did not call him for years and did not use to it. "You bring them there. I will not go." Winnie did not want to go because she did not want to see Brian and did not want to have dinner with him at the same table. "If you don't want to see me, I won't go. He wants to see you more." Brian said it deliberately, otherwise Winnie would not go. He did not mention his sister, or she would not go either. "I... all right, we will be downstairs soon." If she did not go, Rufus would be sad. After telling her aunt, she went downstairs with two children. When Brian saw Winnie, he felt relieved and showed a faint smile. On the way, they did not speak. The children felt it weird. After looking at each other, Megan asked. "Daddy, Mommy, did you fight? Why don't you speak?" Megan's sweet voice broke the silence in the car. "No." "No." They answered at the same time. "I got tired from work, so I don't want to speak." Winnie found an excuse. "I am driving, so I have to be focus." Brian found an excuse too. But the children did not believe them. "But Daddy never came to our new house after we moved out from the suburb. If you did not fight, you have broken up." Luke said in a low mood and suspected they had broken up. They fell into silence. They did not want to lie to them, but were afraid that the children could not accept it. Plus they were on the way to the suburb, they did not affect the children's mood. "Luke, it is not the truth. Daddy had been business trips lately and he is convenient to come to our house since Auntie and great-aunt are home." Winnie explained. But Wendy would be home soon, and the children would know it when Brian had a wedding. When they arrived, Winnie realized a visitor was there. She felt awkward but she could leave. "Auntie..." Luke ran to Stella excitedly. When Stella left, he was just two, but he often had video chat with Stella, so he recognized her. "Luke." "You have grown up, I almost can't hold you up." Stella was excited. She loved Luke, because she did not have her child and because she felt sorry that Luke did not have his mother around since he was born. "I miss you, Auntie. I look forward to your coming everyday." Luke said. Even if his aunt could not hold him up, he wanted to be held by her. "I will stay with you for a longer time." "Really? Great." Luke was excited. "Luke, get down. Auntie is tired and had no strength to hold you." Brian took Luke down and pulled Megan to Stella. "Sister, this is my daughter I told you. She is Julia Bennet, we call her Megan." "Nice to meet you, Auntie, I am Megan." As Brian's voice fell, Megan said. "Good, good, give me a hug." Stella liked Megan when she heard Megan's voice. She bent down to hold Megan, and at this time, Megan said. "Daddy said you are tired. I am heavy and you will more tired." "Never mind, I can hold you up even if I am tired." Stella did not expect that Megan would be so adorable. Stella had the impulse to cry holding Megan in arms. She was surprised to see such a cute little girl. "You are not heavy. I love you." Megan was a beautiful gift, a treasure. Stella wanted to thank Megan's mother for give them such a gift.

CHAPTER 197 MEET STELLA

Holding Megan in arms, Stella fell her sight on the woman beside Brian. She was tall and slim with fair skin. A pair of sharp eyes on her delicate face were full of confidence. She was elegant and sedate, showing that she was intelligent. She was a beauty, quiet and natural. No wonder Brian's mood would be affected by her. The person she assigned had a good taste and found an excellent woman. "Sister, she is Winnie, Mommy of Luke and Megan." Seeing that his sister was looking up and down at Winnie, Brian introduced Winnie to her. Unconsciously he put his hand on the back of Winnie. However, such a simple action in Stella's view was a strong desire to protect. "Winwin, this is my sister Stella. She just got back from abroad." "Nice to meet you, I am Winnie, Megan and Luke's Mommy." Winnie smiled elegantly to greet Stella. "Hello." Stella put down Megan and then held Megan's hand, feeling reluctant to let go. "I asked Brian to bring you here. I know all about you. Anyway, thank you for giving birth two children for the Bennet family. Sit here." Stella was gentle, and there was no disdain in eyes and no sharp words, which made Winnie relaxed. She was angry that Brian cheated her to come over, but she did not show it. "Thank you!" Winnie said politely, and then sat down. As she sat on the sofa, Rufus walked out from the study. He was in a good mood to see them. "Here you are." Rufus said happily, then the two children ran to Rufus. "Grandpa!" "Grandpa!" "Good, good, I miss you." Rufus said while stroking the heads of the two children. He missed the two children and their parents. "Hello, Sir." Winnie greeted Rufus with a bright smile. "Good, good, Winnie, you should come back often." Rufus said. "I am sorry. I was busy recently. I will bring the children back when I have time." Winnie was awkward that she had not come back once since she had moved out. Rufus was nice to her. "It is good for the young people to be busy. I am just kidding. When I miss you, I will go and see you." Rufus understood that Winnie was busy. She had to support the whole family and sure she would be tired. And she got invisible pressure. "Welcome to come to us, Sir." Winnie felt more ashamed of that, because she thought she should be the one to visit the elderly. Brian stood next to Winnie all the time. With Winnie there, he felt he was one of the family members. Since Rufus came out of the study, he did not say a word. Winnie did not make a chance for them as before. She was awkward and did not know with what identity she stayed there. So she became restrained today. At the dinner table. After dinner, they chatted in the pavilion. Rufus was playing ball with the kids, so there were Winnie, Brian and Stella in the pavilion. "Brian, on which day will Wendy come back?" Stella mentioned Wendy on purpose. Winnie and Brian were sensitive of that name. Winnie asked Brian not to mention in front of her, but she had no right to require others to do so, so she had to listen to it. Brian knew that Winnie did not want to hear anything about Wendy, but he had to answer his sister. He said after talking a look at Winnie. "She still has thing to deal with and will come back in a few days." "How is the wedding going? You should have a wedding when she is back." Stella continued, but Winnie felt upset her face changed. She cared everything related to him and minded that he would marry with the other woman. He had been in her heart. She used to Bungee jump to get rid of everything, but she failed. Stella noticed that Winnie's face changed and Brian fixed his eyes on Winnie. When Brian did not know what to say, his phone rang. "Sister, I will pick the phone first." Brian wanted to escape and did not continue this topic. It made Winnie feel better and take a deep breath. Stella showed a faint smile and then kept silent. "You should hide the existence of Megan and since you had hidden, you should now appear again. Our family will get lost because of you." Stella became serious and said with dissatisfaction. Winnie was stunned and then looked to Stella. She was displeased, but her face was clam. "I am selfish. If I was not in urge of money, I would have not brought Luke back, otherwise I would not have anything to do with the Bennet family." "But don't worry, I have trying my best not to affect the Bennet family." Winnie said faintly. She did not deny that she had brought disturbance to the Bennet family, but she would rather do that for the sake of Luke. "But you have already brought disturbance to my family. If Wendy knows you and Megan, I think she will leave again. She has kept Brian waiting for many years. If she leaves again, Brian will be single all this life." Stella was serious but not sharp. Winnie did not feel good to hear that, but she could not lose temper. "I have thought about it, but I don't have a way. If I will affect them, I can leave with the children to a place when Wendy will not see us. But I need the approval of Mr. Bennet." Winnie could leave, but she had promised Brian that she would not leave with the children. Winnie paused before she continued. "I am waiting news from Mr. Bennet. If Wendy hates the children, and if Mr. Bennet agrees that I leave with them, I will leave immediately. I hope you will not misunderstand me. I did not intend to damage the relationship between him and Wendy, nor did I intend to use the children to get the property of the Bennet family. I only want my children to be good under any circumstances." "Having given you custody of the children, Brian would not accept that you take the children away nor would the Bennet family allow it." "All you have to do now is make sure you don't interfere with their life." Stella was afraid that Winnie was more important than Wendy in the heart of Brian. If so, even if he chose Wendy, he would never be happy in his whole life. Such a marriage had no difference with family marriage and it would become a bad marriage. "No, don't worry." Winnie gave the answer decisively. When she did not know that Brian had a woman at the beginning, she never had extravagant hopes for Brian. After knowing the existence of Wendy, she would not allow herself to destroy their relationship. "Do you love Brian?" Stella asked. She was not one to pry into people's privacy, but at this point she wondered if Winnie would do what she said. However, when Stella asked this question, Brian stood outside the pavilion. At the moment he was nervous, looking forward to Winnie's answer. Winnie hesitated for a moment and then gave an affirmative answer. "I don't love him." Winnie lied and felt heartache. But in order to let Stella be at ease, she could only answer like this. But her answer made Brian's heart instantly broken. Winnie's calm and decisive answer pierced Brian's cold heart like a sharp sword. The blood flowing from the wound was even cold. Brian did not expect that he would be so heart. He had been wishful thinking, so she had no feeling for him. It turned out that there was no way he would be with her. He was the one who had been tricked, he was the one who had been hurt. Brian said nothing and left angrily. He told himself he could move on and be with Wendy. The conversation in the pavilion continued, and the more they talked, the more Stella knew about Winnie. Stella indeed felt relieved that Winnie did not love Brian. She did not look down upon Winnie, she was afraid that Brian could not let go of her, because it would certainly affect Brian's happiness. In Stella's view, Winnie was pretty, intelligent and had a good character. If there was no Wendy, Winnie was indeed a good candidate. Unfortunately, Winnie appeared too late. If she showed up in Brian's world earlier, Brian need not wait for so many years. Stella's phone rang and she picked it up. "Brian." "Sister, I have to leave in advance. Ask Paul to send them back." Brian said coldly and then directly hung up the phone. Stella was confused and wondered if he got something to do or he heard her conversation with Winnie. "Brian went back in advance. Paul will see you off." Winnie said nothing, but slightly raised the corners of her mouth.

CHAPTER 198 FIND THE EVIDENCE

The police got progress on Daenerysel's case. Daenerysel's killer had been arrested, but the suspect said he wasn't the only one and he wasn't the mastermind, but was paid to kill Daenerysel. "Miss Chambers, we have brought you here because we want you to think hard and see if you have missed any important clues." "The suspect does not know who the mastermind is. If we want to close the case as soon as possible, we have to start from other aspects." The police said to Winnie. Now the case was in a stalemate, the police could ask Winnie for help. "Did you find the computer I asked you to check?" Winnie had tried her best. If computers could not be found, there was nothing she could do. "No, we have traced all the phone numbers in his name, and we have not found a locatable computer." The police said. It surprised Winnie. According to her knowledge of Daenerysel, it should not be like this. Even if he hadn't kept the evidence, the software couldn't have just disappeared. For Daenerysel, the software was more precious than his life. Even if he lost his life, he would not lose the software. "Have you tried using Penny's cell phone to locate it?" Winnie suddenly thought of Penny. It was easy for Daenerysel to secretly install an application when they were together. "No, we haven't tried Penny's phone." The police hurriedly ordered the assistant. "Penny is in hospital. Find a way to get her cell phone." "All right, I'll do it right now." The assistant received the order and carried it out immediately. When he got up, Winnie stopped him. "Don't go now. I'll try." "You can do it without the phone?" Asked the policeman in surprise. "Yes, but I use hacker technology. You stand aside and watch." "All right, we're here." The policeman agreed. Winnie got her computer ready, and before she started, she thought about what the police had just said. "You said that Penny is in the hospital. Is she in the custody of the police?" "Yes." "She told the nurse that she had to pick up her new passport and wanted to go through the discharge formalities. Apparently she wanted to run away. Mr. Bennet accused her of child abuse, and the traffic accident was pending, so we restricted her from leaving the country." Hearing that, Winnie was surprised Brian had sued Penny. What disappointed her was that Penny did not repent and wanted to escape. "Let's start now." Winnie wanted to take care of it as quickly as possible, so that Penny would not make a bigger mistake. Winnie began to operate. Although the police watched her, they were not professional computer personnel do not and they did not understand what Winnie was doing. And Winnie changed the screen quickly, which made the police get sore eyes. Winnie acted quickly and did not let the police down. It took about half an hour. "Here it is." "Have a look." Winnie enlarged the location and showed it to the police. "I am not sure whether it is Daenerys's computer. Get it now. If it is, I can help you crack the password." Winnie thought it must be Daenerys's computer, but she could not confirm with the police, so she had to get the computer first. The police immediately went to the designated place to look for it. Winnie waited at the police station. More than an hour later, the police came back with it. "It's Daenerys's." Winnie was sure because she had seen this computer for many times. Winnie put on gloves and began to operate Daenerys's computer. It was easy to crack the password for her. It took a minute to turn on the computer and she quickly browsed Daenerys's computer, then she successfully found all calls and some videos Penny and Daenerys kidnaped her. Seeing that, Winnie hated Penny most. She treated Penny as a friend, but Penny was ruthless. After the police got strong evidence, they took Winnie directly to the hospital. In the hospital, Penny did not give up. She kept thinking about how to get out as soon as possible. She thought for several days but could not come up with a solution. She had to turn to Richard for help. She called Richard. "Dad, it was my fault. I know I was wrong. From now on I'll do what you want me to do. You can arrange for me to leave now." Penny said eagerly. She put all her hopes on Richard. However, Richard was not a panacea. "It is late. I am unable to send you out if I want to. How can I help you?" Richard said feebly, without scolding Penny or complaining. "I have the money. I'll pay your debts. I'll transfer my money to you." Song was generous at this time, and thought the money she gave away was worth it to save her life. "My bank card has been frozen. I will come to you to get it." Richard's voice was momentarily full of hope and power. "Well, then, come and get it, and you can give me advice." Penny wanted to see her father face to face to discuss countermeasures. Penny felt hopeful. After hanging up the phone, she felt relieved. She must leave here and would come back when she was ready. Half an hour later, the door of the hospital room was pushed open. Penny thought it was Richard. When she looked hopefully at the door, she was stunned. When Penny saw Winnie and the police, a bad presentiment came to her. "Winnie, I don't want to see you, please leave." Penny drove Winnie away and did not want to make a fool of herself in front of her. "I don't want to see you either, but I must see you punished by the law. Otherwise I cannot vent my insult." Winnie said to Penny coldly. She must see with her own eyes Penny was punished, otherwise she would feel sorry that she had treated Penny as a friend. Winnie was good to her, but she got such a return. "It's not up to you whether I get punished or not, Officer..." "Penny, we now suspect that you are related to the kidnapping case of Winnie. You have the obligation to cooperate with the police's investigation. Now you are injured, but when you recovered, we will formally arrest you. But now you have to be in handcuffs and you can't come into contact with anyone." The police interrupted Penny and announced the arrest of Penny. They directly put Penny's hand to the hospital bed with a handcuff and then searched for her belongings. At this time, Penny said in horror. "What are you doing? Don't talk nonsense without proof. I'll get a lawyer to sue you." Penny pulled the handcuffs in panic, but it only made her hand more painful. She prayed anxiously in the heart that her father would soon come to help her. She did not want to be taken away by the police. "Keep your head down, Penny. We don't arrest people without proof. You are injured, or you would be in jail by now." The policeman warned Penny. "What evidence? You're all lying." Cried Penny, not believing that there was any proof. Then Winnie said, looking at the crying Penny. "You and Daenerys planned to kidnap me, and Daenerys kept all the phone calls and videos between you. No more struggle, Penny." "That's a lie. That's not possible." Penny shouted angrily. She did not believe or want to hear such facts in Winnie's mouth. "It seems that you have no idea what kind of person Daenerys is. You want to use him, but he also used you. He didn't want to spare you until the end of his life."Winnie said coldly. She wanted Penny to understand how stupid she was and to recognize the fact."Penny. Don't be so stupid. You have ruined your life, and it is you who must bear the consequences."Winnie said and turned to leave, without a little nostalgia or a little pity. Such a sinister and vicious woman deserved to die.Richard saw that Penny was arrested.After Richard heard all this outside the ward, he knew that Penny's life was ruined.Although Penny was punished, Winnie felt relieved but suddenly felt empty in heart.She had no Brian to rely on and no rivals to push her forward, she felt isolated.Winnie melancholy came to Daenerys's office. At this time only Daenerys could chat with her."It is good that Penny has been arrested."Said Donnie excitedly."We're going out tonight to celebrate. My treat."Daenerys looked much happier than Winnie. Since Penny was finally punished, Winnie's life would not be so difficult."Why, are you not happy that she got arrested?"Daenerys found something wrong with Winnie, who looked so depressed."Yes, but suddenly I feel unmotivated."Winnie whispered."What motive? Without Penny to stimulate you, you felt your life boring?"Daenerys said sarcastically, in fact, she knew that Winnie still cared about their friendship."Well, that's exactly what you said."Winnie gave a self-deprecating smile. She could only make money to support the family."That's easy. I'll betray you once to get you motivated again."Daenerys said jokingly. After experiencing a thing for a long time, it needed time to put down. Winnie was in such a state now."Oh, Why haven't you agreed to have a relationship with Doctor Burns?"Winnie also joked and had a better mood.

CHAPTER 199 SAY GOODBYE TO THE PAST

Winnie was recently busy and was in a bad mood, so she had not considered the matter between Daenerys and Kevin. Now she showed her concern. Daenerys just wanted to find a down-to-earth man who would never abandon her. She did not want to make her relationship complex as Winnie's. "No, it is still in the testing phase. I have to think about it and get it right once. I don't have the energy to be in a relationship all the time." "Don't test him too long. Be careful that another woman shows up during this time. There are many female doctors and nurses in his departments. Don't regret it if there is one." Winnie kindly reminded. In her view, Kevin and Daenerys were right to be together and could have a safe and steady life. "I am not afraid. If he is taken away by others, it proves that we are not meant to be together. It is not a pity." Daenerys had feelings for Kevin, but she was not sure Kevin held love or responsibility for her. "Winwin, your relationship with Mr. Bennet has come to an end. You're still young, you can't be single all the time." Daenerys went back to the old topic. She did not want to see Winnie alone for a lifetime. "Who want to be with me? I have a whole family to support. Besides I have promised Brian never get married again. Never mind, it's good to be alone." Winnie had long been prepared to be single for the rest of her life. Kids were one reason. Another reason was that she could no longer find a man she liked. "Leo wants to be you. Can't you see that he likes you? He knows all about you, and he is still around you knowing that you have two kids. It means he loves you." "Winwin, it is not easy to meet such a man as Leo. If you miss him, you will have nothing." Daenerys said to Winnie. She hoped that Winnie would be happier than she was, because she had suffered too much misfortune, she should have a warm haven. "I have no feelings for Leo, we are impossible to be together. I made it very clear to him that we are just friends now." "Let's not talk about it anymore. Let's have a drink tonight." Winnie stood up. From now on she did not want to talk about the topic of love about men and there would not be a man in her world. "I will choose the place and the time, and I will let you know when I decide. Ask Doctor Burns to come." "You just said you will pay." Winnie turned away with a smile. She wanted to chat with Daenerys and to make her mood better, but Daenerys talked about men and the unreachable love. When talking about these, she would think of Brian and her mood became worse. After Winnie walked, Daenerys' mood got down. Penny once was her bestie and the three of them once crowded in a bed. Although it was different now, the feelings still existed in memory. Penny was in the hospital. Daenerys told the police that she was a hospital staff and then walked into Penny's ward. Seeing Penny's hand handcuffed on the hospital bed, Daenerys was depressed. "What are you doing here?" Penny asked angrily and her eyes were still full of hatred. "Come and see you." Daenerys whispered. "Are you here to laugh at me? Or you come for Winnie?" Penny did not believe that Daenerys would come to see her. Daenerys had a better relationship with Winnie than her. And Penny had been jealous of Daenerys and Winnie. "Whatever. Penny, why are you stubborn till now? Can't you think about it? Think about what you have done wrong." Seeing that Penny was pathetic, Daenerys did not vent her anger out. "There's nothing to think about, and I don't regret it." Penny said. She did not want to admit that she had lost to Winnie. "Daenerys, tell Winnie that my enmity with her would not end as long as I was not dead." Penny said maliciously. "Then you have no chance." "Penny, you still don't know you're wrong. Child abuse, Winwin's first car accident, kidnap.. after all these, do you think the law will let you out of prison?" Daenerys could not help raising her voice. Looking at Penny, she hated her, but thinking of their friendship in the past, she did not say too hurtful words. "It's not up to you to decide. If I didn't kill anyone, I don't believe I'll never get out." Still, Penny argued fearlessly for herself. Daenerys shook her head. She knew Penny was hopeless, her heart was now completely twisted and no one could help her. "Penny, I do not know when you became so. The three of us were so good together when we were in college. If we had kept our friendship, you wouldn't be in such a mess today. You have brought all this on yourself." Daenerys was disappointed. She felt that Penny would never admit that she had done wrong. "I haven't changed, and it's none of your business what I am. Get out of here. We are not good friends." Penny drove Daenerys out. To her, no matter what Daenerys said, Daenerys was laughing at her. She did not want to hear Daenerys and Winnie laughed at her and hated them to treat her like a pathetic person. "That's what I've come to tell you. It's time for us to settle things. Our friendship is broken from now on. Think it over." Daenerys said and turned to leave. At that moment, she realized the mood of Winnie. At night, they came to a busy barbecue restaurant, which was a good place for Winnie, because she wanted to drink. Winnie was the first to arrive, followed by Daenerys and Kevin. "Wow, after all these years, the business is still good here." Daenerys said in praise before she sat down. "I don't expect that. The business has been getting better and better over the years." "Doctor Burns, you haven't been here, have you? This is where we used to come often when we were in college." Winnie greeted Kevin. She chose this place because she wanted to put the past behind. "No, I really don't know there is a shop." Kevin was in a good mood, because Daenerys invited him. "Order food first. I don't know what you like to eat, help yourself." Winnie gave the menu to Kevin, and Kevin began to order food. After a while, the baked foods were gradually placed on the table. Winnie and Daenerys picked it up. "Mmm, the same taste, delicious." Daenerys said and she missed the taste. "Well, it has not changed. No wonder the business is so good." Winnie missed it too. Then she picked up a string of food and handed it to Kevin. "Try it, Doctor Burns." After handing it to Kevin, Winnie helped pour the wine, but was stopped by Kevin. "I don't drink today. You two drink. I'll get you home safely when you are drunk." Kevin said gently. He had heard about Penny from Daenerys before he came here. Kevin understood why they came to here in such a special time. Winnie needed to release herself here and cut off some unnecessary feelings. "Ok, thank you." "Daenerys, let's drink." As she poured the wine, Winnie thought of the past. "I think studying in university is the best time of my life and I don't regret meeting Penny at university, even though she did what she did." Winnie said and drank up a glass of wine. This one was to Penny, thank her for giving her such a rugged road of life. "Yeah, how good we were back then." Daenerys agreed. She only missed Penny at that time. "But who knows things would change." Winnie drank another glass. This one was to Penny too, thank her for giving her friendship and good memories once. "Well, let's forget about her from now on. It's good that such a bad person is put in prison. We should be happy." "Cheers." Daenerys wanted to end this topic, so that their mood would not be influenced by Penny. "After finishing this glass, we don't know Penny. We shall say goodbye to the past." Winnie and Daenerys had another drink together. Winnie never drank so forthright. She was afraid no one to take care of the children and her aunt when she was drunk. Today she wanted to put everything behind and got drunk. She hoped that when she woke up, she would forget not only Penny, but also Brian. The two women drank one glass after another. Kevin ate quietly, listening to them. "Doctor Burns, your progress bar is too slow. It's been a long time and you have not been with Daenerys yet. Let me help you." Winnie finally remembered Kevin. She was drunk now, but she was sober. She did not have a relationship, but she did not want Penny to miss a good man and hoped that Penny could have a loving home and a man who loved her. Of course, Kevin was the best candidate. "I think I have not done enough, or Daenerys would have given me a chance." Kevin said. He was grateful that Winnie mentioned that. "Keep up, and she'll accept you. I think she likes you, or..." "Winwin..."

CHAPTER 200 DRUNKEN WINNIE

Although Daenerys was dizzy, she could hear that Winnie betrayed her. Flushed, Daenerys stopped Winnie, but it seemed that it was of no use. Winnie continued. "Otherwise she would have turned you down straight away." "Winwin, stop, are we friends or not?" Daenerys continued to stop, but she got blushed. "I'm her best friend. I know her. If she hates a man, she will avoid him as much as possible. It is impossible for her to eat at the same table with him." "So you have a chance. Just hang in there." Winnie said. Looking at Daenerys' blushing face, she smiled happily. "Don't worry, I will. I will not give up easily." Looking at Daenerys covering her face with her hands, Kevin felt it cute. "Well, then, I shall be expecting good news from you. Don't forget I'll be your backup in case you failed. I'll help you get her." Winnie could not help laughing heartily. She had not laughed like this for a long time. "Drink." In order to stop Winnie, Daenerys could only let her drink, because she would sleep instead of talking when she got drunk. "Drink." Winnie did not refuse, trying to get drunk, so that she could forget all the troubles. The two women drank more and more, and finally they lied on the desks. When Kevin did not know what to do, Brian called. "Where are you? Drink with me." Brian wanted to drink. He was in a bad mood obviously. Now Kevin did not want to drink, now he had to get the two women home. "I am in XXX, come over." Kevin felt it not right, but the two women were really a big problem for him right now. About 20 minutes later, when Brian reached the table and saw Winnie leaning over it, he realized he had been tricked. "Brian, take Winwin home. She's drunk. I'll take Daenerys home." Kevin treated Brian as a savior without any guilt. "I didn't tell her to drink much. I won't take her home." Brian said coldly. After hearing Winnie's words that day, he told himself he had to forget about her. From that moment on,

Winnie had nothing to do with him. He had always felt in debt to her, but he had paid her back by giving her custody of two children. He did not owe Winnie anything. He should have turned a blind eye to her. Brian mercilessly turned around and walked away. Then Winnie's voice came from behind him, which made him stop unconsciously. "I... I can go back on my own. I can take a taxi." "Take Daenerys home, Doctor Burns. I..... I'll go back myself." Winnie said in a daze, and then got up. Maybe she had been sitting for too long, or got drunk, her legs were numb and she fell down before she could fully stand up. "Winwin..." Kevin shouted out, but he was sitting opposite Winnie and had no time to catch her. Brian heard the cry and directly turned to catch Winnie, so Winnie did not fall to the ground. "Thank you... I'll go back by a taxi." After Winnie said this, she stood up straight with the support of Brian, but she felt that her body was very light and not easy to control. "I'll go first, Doctor Burns. You take care of Daenerys." Winnie walked around Brian to the outside. Although her steps were light, she could still control them. "Brian, why are you just watching her? Send her back." Seeing that Brian stood there motionless, Kevin said anxiously. However, Brian had been glaring at Winnie's back and did not speak or take action. "Fine, I will send her home. You help her into the carriage." Kevin couldn't bear to let a drunken woman go by herself, so he had to send both home. But now Daenerys' head was on his shoulder. If he got up to help Winnie, Daenerys would fall, and he was unable to hold both of them. Brian walked over when he saw Winnie bump into the door. "Don't come. I'll stop a taxi myself." "Shut up." Brian said coldly. How could he let Winnie take a taxi? She had a strong psychological fear on taxis. She would tremble all over. With all this in mind, Brian forgot about his commitment to himself. He could not let the drunk Winnie left alone. "There's a taxi, I..." Winnie moved forward, but as she waved to the taxi, she was picked up. "I..." "I told you to shut up. I will throw you in the middle of the street if you say one more word." Brian was afraid that Winnie was stubborn and insisted on stopping a taxi, so he simply picked her up. In this way he could control her. Winnie covered her mouth in panic like a child. Looking at the face in front of her, she had a familiar feeling. "Brian? Are you Brian? Impossible, how can he appear in front of me? I must have been too drunk." Brian did not say a word. Looking at Winnie, who had drunk so much wine, he felt sad and angry. He quickly walked to the car and put Winnie in the back seat. Winnie was too drunk to sit, and directly lay down. Brian helped her adjust to a comfortable position, and then got in and started the car. Brian drove steadily, trying not to let Winnie have the feeling of turbulence. But before they had gone far, Winnie made a twittering sound in the back seat. "Doctor Burns... Find me a hotel. I can't go home, or my aunt will be worried." Winnie was sober for a while. She knew that her aunt would be worried, but she didn't know that the driver was Brian. Brian frowned more tightly, but he did not speak. He turned around at the traffic lights. Winnie was quiet for a while and seemed to be asleep. Brian was worried and he always looked at the back to make sure that Winnie was all right. The car drove to the mountain road, which was quiet. Only the sound of the tire scratching the ground and the wind blowing could be heard. All of a sudden. "Stop the car. I want to throw up." With a cry from Winnie, Brian slammed on the brakes and pulled over. Winnie supported herself. Just as the door opened, she threw up to the ground, but her clothes got dirty. Brian got out of the car and came to Winnie to pat her on the back. "How much did you drink?" Brian said in dissatisfaction. But Winnie did not answer and got off the car after a while. She came to the roadside, squatted down and vomited again. Brian did not know what he could do to help Winnie. All he could do was to pat her on the back. After a while, Winnie vomited everything out of her stomach, which made her feel better. Seeing this, Brian hurried to the car to get some water. "Rinse your mouth." Winnie felt her stomach better, but her mind was not sober. "Thank you... I'm sorry to trouble you." Winnie began to gargle. She drank a few mouthful of water and her stomach got better. Winnie stood up and looked to the man. "Brian? What are you doing here? Didn't you refuse to send me home?" Winnie remembered what Brian said, which made her sad. "Get in. It's not safe here." Brian did not directly answer Winnie. If it weren't for Winnie's fear on the taxi, he really didn't want to send Winnie home. Winnie was helped to the car by Brian. Winnie lay down. The car was started again. "You shouldn't have come, and you shouldn't have sent me home. I can do anything on my own, I have to get over the fear of the taxi, because no one will pick me up all my life." Winnie said in a low voice, as if she were talking to herself. After a few words, she burst into tears. "No one could imagine what I have gone through. It's not a big deal to have fear on the taxi. It's nothing compared to losing my parents and being despised of our debt." "Brian, you shouldn't send me home. You shouldn't appear in my life... It took me four years to get everything back on track... But then you showed up and everything was messed up again... My heart is confused." "No... It's not your fault... it is my fault... I shouldn't show up in front of you... I'm the one who affected your life... I was wrong... I deserve it... I deserve it." Winnie said incoherently. She did not know what she was saying and only knew she got heartache. Brian learnt that she was crying from her voice. When she cried, his heart ached even more. Whether she ought not to appear, or he ought not to disturb her life, or fate was playing tricks on them. Winnie fell asleep finally and the car soon arrived at the hilltop villa. After parking the car, Brian opened the back door and carried Winnie down and went directly to the bedroom. He took off Winnie's dirty clothes as well as her wet bras. When he looked at her delicate skin, she felt his male hormones rapidly secreting. Enduring that impulse, he helped Winnie wipe her body and then found his shirt to put it on Winnie. Then he helped her cover the quilt. As Brian got up to leave, Winnie suddenly grabbed his wrist. "Brian, now I am not a woman to you?" Winnie was sad, and her self-esteem was hurt. Her clothes were taken off, but he ignored it. "Am I that repulsive?" Winnie suddenly sat up, looking at Brian with tears in eyes. "What do you bring me here if you hate me?" "You are drunk, Winnie." Brian said coldly with a frown.
