Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 661 IF I DIE

Brian's sudden words made Winnie's movements pause. Still, Winnie did not speak. Help? She seemed to be helping all the time. She had been doing all kinds of things for others, so she did not mind doing it again. "Won't you talk to me? You are not busy today, but you just don't want to see me, right?" Brian's mood was changing all the time. The last moment, he was not so cold, but not he was cold and angry. "Winnie, I don't understand, you did something wrong and we broke up. Why you made it my mistake and hate me?" Brian looked at Winnie, confused. It was him should hate her and be angry with her. He was the victim of feelings, but he came to her. He did not understand why Winnie ignored him. Looking at Brian's attitude, Winnie thought he would pester her for a night if she did not speak. "I dare not speak to you because I was wrong. I have no grudge against you, I just avoid suspicion." "Mr. Bennet, you said that we should not have any contact and I even only could talk with Stella about the kids. I'm just doing what you want me to do. If I meet you and discuss private matters with you, you might accuse me of having ulterior motives." Winnie finally opened her mouth. Although these words were the meaning of Brian, although she looked indifferent, she really hated Brian. She blamed him for not understanding the situation, not checking the facts. She chose to accept breakup, but it did not mean that she had no grievance. Winnie hated most that others put the unwarranted charges on her, but she did not remember how much blame on her back and how many times she had been ignored by Brian He had said he loved her more than once, but what did he do for his so-called love? What he did for the woman he loved? "Winnie, you... why do you want to see me now? Aren't you afraid I'll say you have ulterior motives?" Brian could not refute, but asked Winnie like a rogue. "You said you had a headache. You insisted on coming in. Why don't you be reasonable, Brian?" Winnie was angry, feeling that Brian was being unreasonable after drinking, but his sharp eyes didn't look like he was in a drunken state. He couldn't control his alcohol even if he yelled at her. Looking at Winnie being angry, Brian was not angry anymore. He wanted her to be like that, rather than who being wronged and was silent. "Yes, I have a headache. Give me a massage." Brian lay down on Winnie's leg. "I don't think you have a headache. You came here to trouble me. Go home, and don't bother me." Winnie said while pushing Brian, but Brian was like a stone which could not be moved. "I have a headache. Massage me. I'll leave you no trouble." Brian said, not because of a headache, but because he did not want to provoke Winnie. Winnie took helpless deep breath. She hated herself that she could not be ruthless in the face of Brian's headache. Winnie continued to help Brian massage, and the living room quieted down. Feeling the strength of Winnie, Brian felt that this was one of the happiest things. Now he could leave everything behind and just enjoy the comfort she gave him. "My sister told me about the kids' school. They can go to which school you want. You have the final say on education. I am only responsible for their safety and they will escorted by bodyguards every day until Richard gets caught." Brian broke the silence. He felt it should be communicated and let Winnie know he had been very respectful to her. "I will teach my kids well. I do not object the protection on the kids, but don't be blatant, or the kids' classmates will treat them differently. I just hope that they can live a low-key and easy-going life and make the most intimate friends." Winnie expressed her own views. She only wants it to be low key, like a normal person. "Ok." "You always say I don't trust you, but I've never questioned you about the kids. I've always trusted you to teach them well." Brian refuted what Winnie said before. Not only in the kids, he believed what she did and said. But this time he could not believe her because he could not accept such a thing happened to Winnie. "Thank you for that, and that's all I can convince you of." Because Winnie was the kids' mother, Brian was sure she would be good to the kids. As for the rest, if he could have believed it, it wouldn't have come to this. "Winwin, actually I..." Brian wanted to correct it and wanted to tell Winnie there were many things he believed her. But Winnie did not give him a chance. "By the way, how is the Liberation Village going? Have you decided to invest it?" Winnie timely changed the topic, if they continued the last topic, she was afraid they would end up quarrelling. "Yes, but there is no reply from the secretary. They may have to work on it for a while." Brian did not continue to last topic. There was no difference between saying and not saying, after all, they had broken up. "The place is so beautiful that it would be a pity to develop it. Tourists go more and more money can be earned, but they disturb the peace." Winnie felt it pity. It was a paradise on earth. As long as she lived there, she would forget all her troubles and calm down. Unfortunately, it was about to be developed, and there was no place to cultivate people's morality and heal wounds. "You like it?" Brian asked Winnie. "Yes, I like it. I like the simple folk customs there, like the clean stone path there, like the clear river there, and like sitting on the hill behind the village to watch the sunset in the evening. It's relaxing just to think about it." Winnie liked everything there. She put her love in words and revealed it in her bright eyes. Brian could see that she really liked it before it was quiet there. "If the secretary agrees to the development, I will ask them to come up with a plan that does not damage the local characteristics." This was the commitment of Brian to the secretary, but also a commitment to Winnie. He would try his best to reduce the damage to the natural environment of Liberation Village. "Must you have to develop it?" Winnie was not satisfied about the commitment of Brian, in her opinion, as long as tourists went in, there was no peace. She knew she was being selfish, but she really wanted the original nature to be preserved. Brian was stunned and did not expect Winnie had unique emotion about it and did not want to destroy it. "No." Although he knew Winnie had a special feeling about it, Brian gave a cruel answer. Business is business, private feelings could not be involved. Winnie was not his woman, he had no reason to change anything for her. "You are cold-blooded. I should learn from you and not open the door for you the next time you have a headache." Winnie said casually, Brian would not give up the opportunity to make money because of her. What was more, she was nothing in the eyes of Brian and not worth of any effort. "These are two different things." Brian prayed that Winnie would not be cold-blooded, otherwise, he had no other excuse to come over. "Brian, I am curious about something. If I leave the city, if I die, what will happen to your headache?" Winnie asked Brian, thinking about the answer to this question. In fact, she did not blame Brian, she was just not cruel enough. If she had refused every time, Brian would not have come. "What do you mean?" Brian was panic and thought it was Winnie hint that she was leaving. "Nothing. Just answer." Winnie showed a bitter smile. Even if she broke up with Brian, she still could not leave this city. Her kids needed her, Vanessa had not finished school, so she could not leave. "How I lived before you came, how I will live after you leave, pretending you have never come..." "Consider me dead and don't come to me again, no matter how badly your head hurts. You and I are not single. Don't let your partner misunderstand." Winnie was afraid that Brian would say pretend she was dead. It could only prove that she was nothing in his life. It would be ironic. She liked her by heart, loved him with life. Even if they could not be together, she did not want to be nothing in his eyes. "If I can pretend you are dead, do you think I..." "Do you think I will come to find you?" Brian did not say it out completely, because it was cruel and would expose that he could not get over Winnie. "Does your aunt know about our breakup?" Brian changed the topic, and did not want to ruin the moment. "Yes, Megan and Luke told her." Winnie answered the every question Brian asked and did not stink to one question. If she talked too much, they might quarrel. "Your aunt has always disapproved of us being together. She must be happy to know we broke up." Brian did not know what Winnie's aunt looked like, but he knew she must give a bright smile when she heard the news.

Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 662 IMPOSSIBLE TO BE BACK TOGETHER

Winnie gave a bitter smile. Her aunt was happy, but it was not at the right time. Breaking up now worried her aunt. But she could not make things under control. "Yes, she is happy, but she is disappointed in you." "I haven't told her why we broke up, and she thinks it's your fault we broke up, so she's disappointed in you. But don't worry, I'll straighten it out for you when she comes back." Winnie had to explain, otherwise Brian must think she duplicity. "Why is she disappointed in me? Brian didn't want to listen to the reason for breaking up, didn't want to listen to Winnie so-called's explanation, he just wanted to know where he disappointed Winnie's aunt. "My aunt said that during her absence, she thought that you could take good care of Vanessa and me. She feels safe with you around us. But you broke up with me during her absence, so she is worried about us being bullied because she is in Africa." There should be nothing to hide. That was her aunt's first thought. Although it was unfair to Brian, he did break up with her during her aunt's absence. "I didn't know your aunt would go abroad. I didn't know she had expectations of me." Brian felt sour to hear that. Did he abandon Winnie and Vanessa needed him the most? "Don't joke, even if you know my aunt have expectations of you, you will still break up with me." Winnie stopped her movement and fixed her eyes on Brian. She wanted to hear what he would say at this point, when everything was over and everyone was calm. Brian saw innocence in her eyes. How could someone who had done something wrong look him in the eye so unscrupulously? For a long time, he gave no answer. He was panic that he misjudged Winnie and that he did not see the truth. "Why, is that so hard to answer?" Winnie did not get an answer, took a self-ironic sigh and then continued to say. "Don't answer then. You don't have to care what my aunt said. Now she is not worried, I told her Stefan will take care of us." Winnie deliberate words made Brian's panic run away and Brian looked away from her. He felt his brain had a problem, so that he saw innocence in her eyes. Since Winnie's aunt knew Stefan, what would be innocent? "Will you marry Stefan?" Brian asked, but after asking it out, he found himself distressed. Not long ago he had thought he and Winnie would get married. It was ironic that now he was asking her if she would marry another man. This question for Winnie was also sudden. She gave a smile. To get married? With whom? Who could marry a woman with another man in her heart? "Maybe, if the kids, my aunt and Vanessa agree, we will get married." In order to play it well, in order to make Brian believe that she got a room with Stefan, Winnie could only give such an answer. "Your aunt doesn't seem to object. If you want to get married, hurry up and don't waste everyone's time." Brian got angry all of a sudden, but he did not show his anger. He could not accept the fact that Winnie would get married, but he had to say so, because they had broken up. Winnie was surprised hearing that. She did want to married, but with whom? What was wrong with her? Why was she wasting everyone's time? Should she disappear to save their time? She wanted to ask Brian how she had wasted everyone's time without disturbing anyone or affecting anyone's life. But just as she was about to ask, Brian got up and stared at her, and then went on talking. "Winnie, let me answer your question. Even if your aunt has hope on he, it doesn't change the fact that we broke up."

Brian stood up and walked away with such determination that he did not even turn his head or slow his steps. Winnie was baffling, but was hurt by his words. She didn't get a comforting answer, at least not one so heartless and cold. But why couldn't he just hold on, but hurt her with those words before he left? After leaving Winnie's house, Brian was agitated. There was no place to go, but he did not want to go home, so he went to the hospital after making sure Kevin was on duty. There were very few patients tonight. Kevin returned to the duty room after finishing his work and saw Brian sitting on his office chair. "Long time no see. There must be something wrong you so you remind of me." Kevin said in a strange manner. They did have not seen each other for a long time. From the fact Winnie was in hospital to now, the two of them just communicated over phone and did not meet. Brian always refused to meet with him on the excuse that he was busy. Even when they were on the phone, he deliberately avoided the name of Winnie, avoided the fact that they broke up. "No." Brian answered coldly. He might have a heart disease, but could not be cured by Kevin. "No? I don't believe it." Kevin walked over to Brian and smelled alcohol on him. "Have you been drinking? Do you have a headache?" "It is useless to come to me. Go to Winwin, she can cure it." Kevin's first reaction when he smelled alcohol was that Brian had a headache. "I came from her." Brian was not in the mood to joke with Kevin, he did not know where to vent his anger. And now he had no headache, the smell of alcohol on his body was sprinkled by him, he did not drink. "You got rejected? She ignored you, right?" "That is right. You have broken up. She doesn't have to care whether you have headache or not. It doesn't matter to her." Kevin said with dissatisfaction. "Can you talk nicely. It is not my fault for our breakup, why everyone is against me?" Brian knew why Kevin was dissatisfied. They thought it was his fault that they had broken up, it was abandoned Winnie ruthlessly. "Not your fault? So it is her fault? I don't believe it." Kevin said directly. Winnie cried in the hospital holding Oscar, he could conclude that Winnie was wronged and the responsibility was not on Winnie. "What do you know? Why are you so sure? Don't jump to conclusions without knowing the facts." Brian couldn't figure it out why no one believed him. Even people who don't know the truth jumped to conclusions. He suspected that these people were bewitched by Winnie, or they would not stand on her side to believe her and defend her. "Well, I don't know, tell me what was going on. I give you a chance to defend yourself and then I will redefine you." Kevin's attitude was tough, he did not believe that Winnie was at fault. "She is getting married to Stefan. Whose fault do you think it is that we broke up?" Brian really could not say they got a room, so he could only say so. "To get married? With Stefan?" Kevin was not shocked but laughed when he heard the shocking news. "Are you kidding me? When did Winwin get together with Stefan?" It was clearly a joke. The people who believed it were fools. Winnie and Stefan were impossible to be together. Winnie had deeply loved Brian, and she would not fall in love with others. Kevin believed that what Brian said was not true. "I've heard from her just now. Do you think I lie? Do you think I could joke about such things?" Brian said seriously that he did not think this was a news that could make people laugh. The woman he loved was going to marry another man, how could he smile when his heart was full of holes? Kevin stopped laughing because Brian was serious, even so, he did not believe that Winnie and Stefan were together. Even if Winnie and Stefan were together, there was a reason, it might be made up by Winnie. With this thought, Kevin did not continue to refute Brian's words. Neither of them said the specific reason, there was no strong evidence to persuade him, Kevin still believed Winnie. "You broke up with her, and it was you brought it up. It's been three months now, so it's normal for her to get married. You and Gloria are also going to get married too, aren't you?" "Why, you feel upset? It doesn't matter, you will feel better if you get married sooner than she does." Kevin did not urge Brian to get married soon, he just expressed his disappointment. "What kind of bad idea is this? What's the solution?" Brian just didn't want to express his heart. In fact, he was not upset but distressed. Even if he married first, the pain could not be cured. "What problem do you want to solve, get back together with Winwin?" Kevin could only give bad advice, because he did not know the cause of the matter. "Impossible, we will never be back together." Brian spoke with certainty. Even if they took a road of death that could not be turned back, even if they knew ahead was hell, they wanted to go forward without hesitation. "That's your problem. Since you can't get back together, don't worry about the things about Winwin. It's none of your business even if she was going to give birth, let alone to get married." Kevin was angry. Seeing that Brian was so tangled, he did not bear to question him. But now, it seemed not work out. "Aren't you talking to Gloria about getting married? What did Gloria say? If she accepts, get married as soon as possible and let go of Winwin." Kevin did not know why he said that, and did not know whether he was comforting or stimulating. He only knew that in these three months that they had broken up, Brian had a hard time, while Winnie had a comfortable life.

CHAPTER 663 EMILY DECIDES TO STAY

One was miserable, one was comfortable. What did that say? It showed that what Winnie brought to Brian was good, so that after breaking up, Brian could not accept the gap before and after. And what Brian brought to Winnie before was painful. Since they broke up, no one tortured her, so she was comfortable. In that case, it didn't matter if they knew why they broke up. "She hasn't replied yet, probably because her boyfriend isn't letting her go. But it is good, I don't want to get married so soon." Brian spat out a breath, as if to empty the turbid gas in his stomach. But thinking of Winnie, he would continue to sigh. "Kevin, although I broke up with her without saying the reason, I feel sorry for her. You know what, grandpa came to her several times, threatened her, intimidated her, and made insulting remarks about her. I just found it out. I don't know how she endured it." Brian felt distressed. Winnie would be helpless when she faced that. "I don't know. Nobody seems to know about it. Daenerys hasn't said anything." Kevin seemed to be more unexpected than Brian, but considering Felix's attitude towards Winnie, it was not strange at all. How could a woman bear so much? He would break down if it was him faced that. "Don't think about it. Maybe you were right to leave her. After that, no one will give her a hard time, which is good. Brian, since you said it is impossible for you to get together again, do not leave room for each other. Tell her to go back to her company and don't meet her again." Kevin's thought was disorderly and he did not know what he was talking about. He did not want Winnie and Brian to apart, but he hoped that Winnie could be happy, not to be tortured. He was in contradiction. If she was with Brian, she would get more and more torture. If they separated, they could live their own life. It was not good if they were together. "Never mind, I will take time." It was not that Brian wanted to go on the topic, it was that he did not want Winnie to go back to her company as Kevin said. Brian sighed and continued. "I've been in a bad mood all this time. My memory hasn't diminished, but I haven't made any progress. The memories are still stagnant." "Am I never going to get better?" He was busy about Winnie's things, and had no extra mind to think about the past. Brian was about to give up the search, so he did not doubt whether Wendy was the woman who saved him or not. "It depends on your own situation, but I think if it does not affect your current life, there is no need to find out the truth. The past is the past and there is no point in knowing it now." Hearing Brian's words, Kevin was relieved. If he remembered something at this critical moment, Brian would be more upset. "In fact, I don't have much expectation for other things, but every time I think of the girl who saved me, my heart inexplicably gets together, I just want to know why." This was probably the only thing that Brian wanted to know. He wanted to know why he had that feeling. "That girl is not Wendy? You will know the feeling when you see her." Kevin once again brought the past to Wendy. He did not mean it, but he had to say so. If not Stella told him to keep it a secret, he really wanted to tell the truth. "That's the point. When I saw Wendy, I have no feeling at all. It wasn't the way I remembered it. That's what I struggle with." If seeing Wendy made him find the feeling at that time, it would be over and memories were not so important. Kevin did not know what to say. It seemed that the deepest memory of Brian was accurate and the feeling in his heart was not wrong. This person was not Wendy, so how could he find that feeling? "Alas..... Stop thinking about it and let it happen. Maybe when your mind relaxes and you stop dwelling on it, the memories come back." Kevin could only be so perfunctory, and could not make trouble for Brian at this juncture. Emily finally made a decision on her study. According to Leo's proposal, and carefully considering her father's opinion, Emily finally decided to stay in B City for study. The next day. After the decision, she had discussion with Leo, after all, he had the ability to let her get into the class anytime. Emily did not go to Leo's company but asked him out for dinner. Leo was happy since it was the first time Emily asked him out. But he could not show it out, or the sensitive Emily would feel she was cheated. "Didn't you volunteer to work at the company today?" Leo asked Emily while eating, not showing he was joyful. "No, the cooperation has been signed, and the company's translator has come back, so I am not needed." "Leo, I want to tell you my decision." Emily put down her chopsticks and was ready to talk seriously about the study. "Go ahead, I'll support whatever you decide." Leo put down the chopsticks, too. "I decided to take your advice and study at home. I tell you because I want you to arrange for me to join the class." Since she had made the decision, Emily wanted to do it as soon as possible. She did not want to waste a little time, so that she could enrich herself and she could consider the relationship between her and Leo. "I'm glad you made that decision, and thank you for trusting me with my opinion. I'll make a call right now to arrange the class for you." Leo immediately made a call. He was so excited at the moment that if he hadn't called this phone to distract himself, he might have been unable to control his jubilation. It was a great opportunity for him. Emily was giving him the opportunity to get back to her. How could he not be happy with such a good omen? "I'll take her there tomorrow." "Okay, okay, okay." After a few words, Leo solved the problem, and then hung up the phone. "OK, I'll take you there tomorrow. Just go there and ask the teacher if you need anything. This teacher is the best and educated the most talent. You can learn a lot with him." Leo confidently told Emily the results, and Emily gave a faint smile. "I didn't expect you have arranged it in a few words. Let's have a toast. Thank you." Emily said so, which made Leo have a sense of alienation. If the word "thank you" was used between them, it was indeed alienation. Leo raised the corner of his mouth to hide his dissatisfaction. "Ok." The two men raised their glasses and drank it up. Although he was not happy, Leo was gratified. There was still a chance, after all, as long as she didn't leave, he kept fighting. Leo was happy and still wearing a smile when she put down the glass. "Emily, tomorrow is Friday. I will take you to meet your teachers and familiarize yourself with the environment. The class is held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings and on weekends. You can ask your father to arrange work for you." "And of course I welcome you to work for my company." Leo arranged the time for Emily. There were many working people in this class, so the class time was arranged in the rest days and evenings. It was helpful to Emily, who could work while studying, and the effect would be obvious. "I'm not coming to your company. There's a job vacant at my own company. But you can advise me from where it's appropriate for me to start." Emily trusted Leo's ability and believed he could give her the most suitable advice. But she did not want to go to his company. Leo looked at Emily thoughtfully for a while, and then gave his opinion. "My advice is to start at the bottom regardless of your major. It doesn't only train you, but also you can learn the most real things from the bottom, so that you can take every step of the ground. But it's harder." Leo knew that starting from the bottom was the hardest work, but he had to give such an advice. He was thinking about the future for the sake of Emily, so that she could have more people recognized her when she was to take over the company. "I am not afraid of hard work, it makes me live fully. I would tell my dad I will start from the bottom. I have time and I want to try everything." Emily agreed Leo's opinion. She knew Leo would not say something hypocritical or flattery like others, and what he said was good for her. "It's good you have this attitude. Emily, it is not as easy as you think, you have to be prepared. Try to get familiar with all the underlying businesses in the shortest time, which will help you a lot in the future. You can ask me if you have something you don't understand, and you must take rest and don't work too hard." Leo began to get serious, because the process was not as easy as expected. Emily was a positive person, Leo was afraid that she would work too hard. "Don't worry, I'll be all right. I'm still in good health. I'll go to bed and get up early when I go to work. I'll get up early and run every day just like Winwin." "How about I buy a house in Winwin's neighborhood and go running with Winwin every morning so I can be completely independent?" Emily suddenly thought of a way to get out of her parental control, and could be with Winnie. "No, it's not safe for a girl to live alone. Sometimes you work overtime and it's not safe to come home late. It'd better you live with your parents." Leo said no directly. He did not want Emily to live alone, because he would be worried about her safety. "It will be fine. Winwin lives alone. The community is safe with 24-hour security patrol." Emily said.

Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 664 VANESSA INSISTS ON GOING TO THE SUBURBS

Emily was not angry because Leo's opposition but felt happy. He objected because he was worried about her safety. "No. It's too hard for you to cook, clean the house, work and study all by yourself." "All right, I'll think about it." Seeing that Leo insisted, Emily did not refute, but it did not mean she compromised. Winnie was harder than her, but she did not say she was tired, Emily thought she had no problem. Hearing that, Leo gave a smile. She had something she wanted to pursue, but only if she was safe and healthy. Only these two points were ensured, he could rest assured and she could pursue what she wanted. But no matter what the conversation was about, no matter Leo said yes or no, Emily's attitude towards him got improved. Leo concluded that Emily could talk freely with him as long as they did not mention their relationship problems. In this way, Emily could know him again, feel his love for her again, and start all over again. Emily began classes at the weekend, and Winnie's work had reached the most critical stage. Winnie promised her leaders to hand in a perfect paper on Monday, so she had to work overtime to try to come up with the best work. Because she was busy, Winnie did not go to the suburbs this week to accompany her kids. "Sis, if you don't go to the kids, I'll go get them. I miss them. I'll bring them home and will not disturb your work." Vanessa came to Winnie's bedroom. She did not want to disturb her sister's work, but she missed the kids. "No. I am worried about you being alone." Winnie denied directly. She also missed the kids, but Vanessa's safety was more important. As long as she was outside the confines of school and home, she could not avoid worry. "No problem. I'll be careful." Vanessa just wanted to meet two kids, without considering her own safety. "Brian won't let you bring the kids out." Winnie tried not to mention his name, but she had to. He was always on the lookout for the safety of the kids, how could he possibly let the kids out of his safety zone." "Yes, the kids' safety is the most important." Vanessa's enthusiasm was suddenly dismissed, after all, the kids were the most important. She was afraid there would be any accident. "Sister, can I go to see them?" Vanessa still wanted to see the kids, or she would not have motivation to study. "Alas..... Go ahead, I'll ask directly Paul to come and pick you up." Winnie had to agree. For the sake of safety, she could only trouble Paul. Vanessa did not refute, if she did not agree with Paul to pick her up, her sister must not let her go. Forty minutes later, Vanessa arrived at the suburbs. Rufus was the happiest to see her. "Vanessa, how is your study recently?" Rufus asked, wanting to know if Vanessa had a good life these days. "Good." Vanessa, while playing with the two kids, answered Rufus' questions. Her life is nothing but study, and study was her pleasure. "Good. Is the school canteen good?" Rufus continued. "Yes, the food in our university's canteen is better than that at home." Although Rufus asked these questions every time they met, Vanessa did not feel nagging, but feel warm in her heart, just like her father was thinking of her. "Good. I don't worry about anything else. I'm worried about your food and shelter, and don't get tired." As for the safety, Rufus was not worried, because he had found a bodyguard to protect Vanessa. Wherever she was, she'll be kept safe outside the school gates. "I am good." Vanessa like Rufus, who was nice to her and put her as his own daughter. This feeling reminded Vanessa of her father. Rufus cared about her and loved her even more than her father did. Vanessa did not know why, did he just like or pity her and her sister? "Why isn't your sister here?" Rufus concerned about Winnie from his heart. "She is busy with work. She only had two days to take a rest and then she will have to work the day after tomorrow. She said she was coming to see the kids next week." Vanessa truthfully answered. In fact, if Brian was good to her sister, she could integrate into the family and avoid Felix. And all of them can live together in love. Unfortunately, Brian could not care for her sister wholeheartedly, and there was no way to avoid Felix. Felix was like a monarch in the period of imperial rule, dominating everything in the Bennet family. In the whole family, only Rufus and Stella accepted them. When Vanessa thought about Felix, Felix actually opened the door and came in. Vanessa did not expect that. Brian followed in. Although Felix went to her home and did not have the evil attitude as he did before, Vanessa was still unhappy with him. She did not want to meet Felix, but she was still polite. Vanessa stood up and greeted Felix first. "Hello, Grandpa." Then she looked at Brian. "Brian." When she saw Brian, she thought of the fact that her sister had broken up with him. She understood their separation, but she still had a grudge against Brian. But now she was in his house, so she had to be polite to him. "Vanessa is here, good." Felix gave a bright smile. She did not know if he was happy to see the kids or her. "Vanessa, you come alone?" Brian was surprised to see Vanessa. He asked while looking around, looking for Winnie's figure. "Well, I came alone. My sister is busy with work and says she will come to see the kids next week." Vanessa knew what Brian was looking for, so she answered him. "Oh." Brian was disappointed, he thought Winnie also came. Brian then hid his disappointment by turning his attention to his two kids. "You two didn't see Great Grandpa? Why don't you say hello to him?" Brian was worried. Grandpa came to see the kids today. But the kids were indifferent, which was different from before. In fact, the two kids had long seen their Great Grandpa, but as soon as they saw him, they thought of the fact that their parents broke up and felt inexplicably depressed. Therefore they did not want to speak, especially to Great Grandpa, who destroyed their parents' feelings. But since their dad spoke, they had to say hello even if they were reluctant. "Hello, Great grandpa." "Hello, Great grandpa." The two kids stood there and greeted Felix with reluctant and unhappy faces. They didn't jump into Great Grandpa's arms for care like before. "Hello, I miss you, do you miss me?" Felix saw the kids' estrangement from him, but he still talked warmly with the two kids. Seeing the kids were depressed, Felix felt distressed. "....." Felix's question put the two kids into a dilemma, and they looked at each other. In fact, they also missed Great Grandpa, but to firm their position, they could not say it out, thinking of the situation of dad and mom. Seeing the two kids did not speak, not only Brian and Rufus were anxious, but also Vanessa felt worried. "Why don't you speak? Don't you miss Great Grandpa?" Standing beside the two kids, Vanessa urged the kids. She knew why the kids did not speak, for they had said they did not want to see Great Grandpa again, because they attributed everything to him. Although her sister tried to persuade them and they agreed, right now they were silent. Since Vanessa urged, the two kids looked up at Felix and said reluctantly. "Yes." Their reluctance could be seen by everyone. "Great Grandpa, you have a rest. Megan and I go out to play, we will not disturb you." With that, Luke, holding the hand of Megan, quickly ran away. Vanessa felt embarrassed and ran out too. "Grandpa, Rufus, Brain, you have a talk, I go out to play with them." With a smile, Vanessa also went out. Looking at the large and small figures quickly left Felix's sight, he felt depressed. "Alas..... I've lived a life and now I know what a failure I am. Even the kids hate me." Felix sat down with emotion. "Don't think so, Grandpa. The kids still can't handle the fact that Winwin and I broke up. It'll be all right later." Brian enlightened Felix, because Felix could not accept the way the kids treated him. He had always been a successful man, and his life had been filled with all kinds of respect for him. It would be a big psychological gap for him to be ignored by the two kids. "Alas..... They have always resented me, and even if they knew why, they thought I had deprived them of their happiness." Felix was an old man, he knew Brian was comforting him. Looking at the two kids being pitiful, he began to doubt his own persistence. "Grandpa, Vanessa still doesn't know the specific reason why we broke up, so be careful." Brain had to remind Felix. Winnie must have her reasons not to tell Vanessa. Let her decide when and how to tell Vanessa. "Doesn't her family know why you broke up?" Felix was surprised, not knowing what Winnie was hiding.

CHAPTER 665 RESENTMENT BUT THANKS

Brian knew grandpa would be confused about this topic. Now his family all knew the reason for his breaking up, and but Winnie's family did not know it. In fact, Brian felt strange, but he did not know what Winnie was thinking. "Yeah, her family and friends know we broke up, but they don't know why." Brian answered again. "Why?" Felix thought Brian should know the reason, so he asked directly. But Brian never asked why. "I don't know. Winwin didn't say it. Maybe she was embarrassed." This possibility was deduced by Brian, but he felt Winnie was not the kind of person who wiggly escaped. In short, he did not understand why Winnie was now hiding. It did not convince Felix, because he knew the truth, knew Winnie did not do anything, so Winnie would not be embarrassed. Since she did not tell Brian, Winnie must have her own reason. "I will watch out. No matter what, I will respect Director Chambers and let her talk to her family and friends." Felix did not ask, because there was no answer, if he really wanted to know, he would ask Winnie. "I'll go out and see the kids. I will explain and apologize to them so they don't feel bad." Felix got up, now his focus was still on the kids. Felix walked in front, followed by Brian. Outside, two kids and Vanessa squatted on the grass, two kids playing with the grass, and Vanessa persuaded them. "How you promised your Mom? And you can't do it now. It is an adult matter, it has nothing to do with you. Great Grandpa is good to you, he likes you, which is not affected by adults. He doesn't like your mom, but he still likes you." Vanessa said a lot of, but two kids were silent. The two kids looked at each other and thought their aunt seemed to be right. But it was still unacceptable to think they were homeless now. "Aunt, we are kids, we can't think of anything complicated." Luke finally gave his answer. But in Vanessa's view, it was perfunctory. "Why do you have that attitude to your Great Grandpa? He came to see you because he misses you. Who can have such treatment? He is good to you, but you shouldn't be cold to him." Vanessa tried to persuade the two kids, if the two kids continued to treat Felix like that, some people would think that her sister had not educated them well or that her sister deliberately used the two kids. Originally, Felix did not have good impression on her sister. She was really afraid that it would bring trouble to her sister. The other point was that out of politeness and worldly wisdom, two kids could not treat adults in this way. "Aunt, do you really think Great Grandpa is good to us?" Megan could not help speaking at last. "Yes, I would appreciate it if an elder did that to me." Vanessa wanted such treatment, but she was not a member of the Bennet family, it was extravagant hope for her. After Vanessa's voice fell, Felix and Brian were standing not far behind them, and their conversation could be clearly heard. Brian was about to interrupt, but Felix raised his hand to stop him. He wanted to listen to Megan's word and wanted to know her true thought. Megan did not agree with her aunt's statement, or she really did not understand the adult's world. She became serious, and then she spoke her thought. "No, I don't think so. I think Great Grandpa is not really good to us. He does not really love us. The person who truly loves us never forgets what we need and never deprives us of what we need most. If he loves us, he will pay for us, just like Mom takes any grievances for use. Even if she broke up with Dad, she does not leave here." Megan said in one breath, because of she was emotionally excited. In Megan's eyes, except her mother, none of them really loved them. Even her dad sad he loved them. But he did nothing for them. Maybe dad made an effort, but she really didn't feel it. She was dissatisfied with her father and Great Grandpa, but no one cared about them because she was too small. No one cared about their feelings, they could change anything, she and her brother could only be sad. "Megan..." "Megan." Vanessa could understand her helpless and sour heart, but she still wanted to persuade the kids, so as not to distort their thoughts, so as not to change their attitude towards the world. But as she spoke, another voice called Megan. Vanessa looked back and saw Felix and Brian standing not far away. She was just disappointed to see them without surprise. If they did not come, she could persuade the kids, but now they would be more resistant and her words would be meaningless. "Grandpa, you're here." Vanessa greeted and stood up, then took the two kids to stand up. "Vanessa, can I talk with the kids alone?" Hearing those piercing words, Felix remained calm. He wanted to try his best to persuade the kids. But the presence of Vanessa and Brian could affect the effectiveness of their talks. "No problem. It's time I go home." This was his house, so she could not say no. Vanessa had the idea of going home at that moment she saw Brian and Felix, but she did not put forward. Now Felix was offering her a chance. "Vanessa, I am not driving you away. You can play with the kids and have lunch together before leaving." Felix asked Vanessa to stay, he just wanted to talk to the kids alone, and did not drive Vanessa away. "Grandpa, I know. My sister is busy at home with her work. I have to make her something to eat or she will be hungry." Vanessa insisted and could only find an excuse. "Grandpa, you talk to the kids, and I'll talk to Rufus. Grandpa, my sister and I welcome you to visit our home. Goodbye, grandpa, goodbye, Brian!" Vanessa then turned and walked toward the house. The last word was against her heart, but Vanessa had to say so, to prevent Felix from having any other thoughts about her sister. When Vanessa came out of the house, Brian was waiting for her at the door. "I send you back, Paul went out." Brian was afraid that it was not safe for Vanessa to go home alone, so he wanted to send her back. "No, Brian, I'll take the bus home." Vanessa rejected the kindness of Brian. She did not want to bother anyone like Winnie. However, Brian insisted. "Come on, it's not safe to take the bus." Brian went to the car, Vanessa had to follow him. On the way home. "Vanessa, do you blame be for breaking up with your sister?" Brian broke the silence of the car. He saw Vanessa was polite to him on surface, she did not mean it at all. Vanessa saw that Brian could see through her mind, there was no need to disguise. She sighed, as if pretending was tired. "Yes, but I am grateful too. You were so determined to say you loved my sister, but in the end you abandoned her and made her a joke to everyone." Vanessa did not beat around the bush but directly pointed out her resentment. "If you hate me, why thank me?" Brian listened carefully and felt distressed. He wanted to protect Winnie for a lifetime, to love her for a lifetime, but she overstepped the rules. "Thank you for letting go of my sister, otherwise she would still be discriminated against in your family. And you know better than I how many wrongs and wounds she had suffered." "My sister used to be so bitter, I couldn't even see a smile on her face. Now though she does not mention you in front of anyone, though I do not know whether her heart is still bitter, at least she has a strong, sunny, positive heart." What Vanessa said was true, although it made Brian uncomfortable, in this way, Brian never bothered her sister again. "Brian, I used to believe that you were the person who loved my sister the most in the world, not only the warm harbor for my sister, but also the person that my family depended on for a lifetime. But I was too simple, I thought your position is simple, and out the position of my sister too high. She doesn't really matter to you." "Well, it's over. No matter what happened before, the road in the future is smooth." Vanessa did not know if it was right to say so. She felt that the gap between Brian and her sister was clear. Only Brian saw it clearly, and only he knew that even without the hindrance of Felix, he did not love Winnie deeply as he said. When he figured it out, her sister would have a smooth life. However, Brian did not agree with what Vanessa said. Winnie's position in his heart was higher than that Vanessa thought. Brian frowned, but he did not retort. Even no one could replace Winnie in his heart, the fact Winnie had a lot of suffering when she was with him could not be changed. Winnie suffered a lot of discrimination, he did not refute the fact. At that time, Winnie was unhappy and even faked a smile. She looked better now. At least she was with the man she liked. "Did your sister ever tell you why we broke up?" Brian asked. But it seemed that Vanessa did not know it, or she would not speak so justly. "No, she did not my aunt either. She just said that it was her fault, that she had done something wrong." Vanessa thought about it and was determined that Winnie had not told her the reason. She had been curious, but she respected her sister, so she never asked.

CHAPTER 666 SELFISH PEOPLE DO SELFISH THINGS

Vanessa continued. "My sister said she was wrong, but I don't believe her. You've been dating her for a long time, and you should know that she has boundaries. She would never do anything against her conscience or her will in any way." "Especially about you, her principles are much more rigid. Because she knows her low status, she tries to compensate in other ways. She could not do anything that make you break up with her." Vanessa in any case did not believe that her sister could do anything wrong, because of this, she said these words. When she was free, she analyzed why her sister broke up with Brian. Her sister must mean she was wrong about the relationship, otherwise they would not break up so easily. In the respect of relationship, Vanessa believed more her sister. For so many years she had never had an ambiguous relationship with anyone, she would not casually like another man. But once she fell in love, it would be a lifetime. Another unconditional believer, Brian was not sure what his eyes saw was true now. But how to explain the video about her and Stefan. "Vanessa, your sister might fall in love with someone else. No one can..." "Impossible. Who does she like? In all the time since she parted with you, she only worked, and I've never heard her take a phone call from a strange man. Can you tell me who she likes?" Vanessa interrupted the words of Brian with indignation, defending her sister. So far, her sister had been focusing on Brian. Anyone could say that her sister liked other people, but he could not. Brian did not immediately answer, but thought of Vanessa's words. She said Winnie never received a man's phone, and Calvin said the same. He also said he never saw her and Stefan being together. What was going on? Were they not getting together? Were they not getting married? Others did not know about it, but Vanessa should know it. What was the reason? What Winnie was hiding? "She told me the other day she was going to get married..." Brian wanted to know more, so that he could give better analysis of Winnie. But as he opened his mouth, he was interrupted by Vanessa. "To get married? You're kidding, Brian. Can I ask who she's married to? You're the only one in the world she could..." Vanessa suddenly stopped, because of her own words. If she continued, she would have revealed that her sister still loved Brian. "Well, I'm out of your business. Now that you've broken up, don't have any contact." Vanessa shut up in time, too much words were not good. It confused Brian. He wondered if she suddenly thought of who Winnie was going to get married, or another secret? In the suburbs. After saying goodbye to Vanessa, the two kids squatted on the grass pulling grass one by one, looking very lonely and helpless. Felix was more than 90 years old and could not squat down. He could only get a small chair and sat beside two kids. "Have a chat with me." He said firmly. The kids would have refused if he had asked their opinion. So he needed to be tough. "I have heard everything you said to your aunt. I think you are right. I did not do a good job. I apologize to you." This seemed to be the first time in Felix's life to apologize. He had done all things in his life, nothing was wrong, and he only felt sorry for the two kids. "Will you change? Will you accept my Mom?" Megan thought it was an opportunity, thought Great grandpa's attitude would change, so she asked Felix. "Well....." Felix could not answer, because he did not intend to accept Winnie. "Great Grandpa, if you can't accept mom, you didn't do anything bad, and you don't have to apologize to us." As Felix hesitated, Luke knew his attitude. The apology was just perfunctory. He still couldn't accept mom. "Luke, Megan, you don't understand adults. There are so many things we can't do. We can't just think about ourselves and could not be tied down by love." "When you are older, when you come into contact with all kinds of people, you will understand me." Facing the kids' discontent, Felix could only persuade them patiently. He wondered how much the kids would understand. But he hoped they would not be depressed, hoped to see innocent smile back to their faces. However, Felix's words aroused the dissatisfaction of the kids. "But you understand us, but you don't think for us. But there was one thing you said that I liked to hear. We can't be selfish, we can't just think about ourselves. Have you ever asked yourself if you are selfish?" Megan asked Felix sharply. She thought Great Grandpa chatted with them was because he was going to accept their mother, to tell them the good news. However, Great grandpa still only cared about himself and did not consider anyone's ideas, which made Megan very disappointed. Her mom told her to be polite and respectful to the elderly, but she really couldn't do what mom wanted today. Felix was stunned by the question of Megan. "Great Grandpa, I actually think you are the most selfish person in the world. You made grandpa and Dad your slaves for what you wanted. Selfish people do selfish things." "Great Grandpa, what else do you want? What can you do with all the money and power in the world?" Megan was disdainful to everything Great Grandpa had and what he wanted to have. At a young age, she looked innocent and lovely, but she had a discerning heart and a quick tongue. But that wasn't all she wanted to say. She hadn't gone as far as she wanted. "Great Grandpa, please admit that you are the most selfish man in the world. What you're doing is unfeeling, you're tearing our family apart, you're tearing us apart from our Mom. You're doing a great job. Please keep doing it. But it is your power to make sure that my brother and I do not hate you." After that, Megan turned around to continue to pull weeds. She did not want to see Great Grandpa. Grandpa's world and thinking were too complicated for her to accept. What Megan said was what Luke wanted to say, but Luke felt that he would not have such a sharp effect. So he had not spoken but let Megan say it. Now that Megan finished, he needed to add something. "Great Grandpa, all your dreams of riches can be done by Dad. Dad is willing to do it for you, and he likes your strong attitude towards things and people. You have trained him so successfully that he has left me and my sister alone to fulfill your dream." "He's a great dad and you're a great grandpa. Your partnership is perfect, please continue." "But I want to tell you, I will not be controlled by you like my Dad, who has no ego. If you push me and my sister again, we'll ask our Mom to take us away, and never come back to the Bennet's and never see Dad or you again." Luke said ruthlessly and angrily. He let out all that he had held up for so long. He knew he shouldn't have said it, because it didn't change anything. But his and Megan's attitude must be known to adults. Luke got up, and then took his sister to the side. Felix was shocked by the words. He could not believe that such words could come from such young kids. Was he selfish? Was he unfeeling? Did he break up their home? Such small kids said he was selfish, said he was wrong, had he done wrong all his life? What did he want? What if he had all the money and power in the world? The two kids questioned one after another, beating Felix's heart heavily. Should he ask himself, from an outsider's point of view, what he had done all these years? The conversation between kids and Felix not only made Felix shocked, but also made Rufus ashamed. He could hear the conversation between the kids and the old man from a distance, and his father was not the only one to be blamed for the situation. If at the beginning all oppression was on him, he could resist like Luke and Megan, If when his father put all the burden on Brian, he could have stood up for his son, none of this would have happened today. The kids hated not only the old man but also Brian, maybe hated more their grandpa, for he had not protected everyone, for he had dealt with all the relationships. The kids were right. No one thought for the sake of the two kids, no one cared they were sad. Vanessa went home and saw her sister was still busy, so she did not disturb her sister, but went straight to the kitchen to cook. And she told her sister about the Bennet family when they were having lunch together. "You said Chairman went to see the kids?" Winnie looked up and asked Vanessa. "Yes, he said he missed them, so he went to see them. Brian said they refused to go to the old house and said they would never go to the old house again. It seems that our persuasion had no effect at all." Vanessa told her sister the reason Felix went to see the kids. "Alas, they grew up and have more ideas. They were not perfunctory to me. They cannot do that to their elders, they were not respectful and it will make their hearts distorted. It's not good for their growth at all." Winnie was worried but helpless. Growing up in such an environment, the kids were heard to be free and to have a healthy mind.

CHAPTER 667 NEW SOFTWARE TESTING

At the same time, Vanessa was also aware of the problem. "I can't help it. I think the kids are trying very hard to control themselves. If you and I had been brought up under such oppression and compulsion, we would not have lived as we do now." "Sister, I noticed that the Bennet family doesn't get along the same way as us ordinary people. It is a very strange family environment. They put profit and money first, and they didn't care about family that I couldn't understand." Vanessa elaborated her own idea, although she did not fully describe the situation of the Bennet family, but she felt the disacquaintance. "Every family had their way of getting along. We can't change that. If you don't like it, don't get involved." Winnie agreed with Vanessa's conclusion of the Bennet family. She had seen it out, so she felt she was attached to family and she could not stand it. "Some time ago, I had an idea that after one or two years, if the kids get used to living with their grandfather, I will take you and aunt to go abroad or go to another city." "But it doesn't seem to work anymore. If they're exposed to the Bennet family when they're young, they'll grow up to be paranoid." "What I want most now is for Richard to be caught soon so that I can bring them back and take care of them myself, no matter how hard it is." No matter how to plan in her heart, finally Winnie thought about the kids. The way the Bennet family got along would affect the kids forever. For the kids, she would continue to endure and was unable to retreat, from time to time, she had to meet Brian. "Sister, I'm all right. You don't have to think about me. It's all about the kids. I can go anywhere as long as I'm with you and aunt." Vanessa didn't care, no matter how difficult things were now or later, it was not as difficult as her sister suffered when losing her parents. Her concept was different from the Bennet family. She could lose anything but not family. "Alas..... It always backfires." Winnie signed helplessly. She always felt that no matter how hard she tried, she could not change the fate. Maybe she could not live her life according to her own ideas, and could not stay away from Brian. Life was not easy, but she had to go on. Sunday morning, Winnie came to the police station with her results of months, and gave a satisfactory answer to the leadership. At first, she explained the running track and basic principle of the software with her leaders and technical backbones, and then she and her colleagues began to enter the testing stage. It was noon after everything had been arranged. In the police canteen. "When did you get here, and you don't have a weekend off?" She was surprised to see Officer Lee eating in the canteen. She then sat down opposite Officer Lee for lunch. The two talked while eating. "You're my colleague now, so you should know that we're always on call. We don't have set days off." "Right, forgot to tell you, I was transferred to the general bureau, we will work together." Officer Lee remembered to tell Winnie his work transfer. "Really, that's good, we'll have more opportunities to cooperate." "Congratulations!" Winnie said with a smile. She felt she would learn a lot working with Officer Lee who was so responsible. "There's no reason to congratulate. It's much more tiring here. And you have to be careful when you're under the noses of your leaders." Officer Lee lowered his voice and joked, his superiors would have kicked him into a remote mountain area if he was heard. "I like to talk with leaders, but our leaders are not as mean as you said." Winnie spoke for her leaders, at the same time, she remembered a problem. "Now that you've been transferred to the general bureau, what about Richard's case?" "I have applied with the leadership that I will follow up this case. I am running on both sides now, and I will come to work officially when the case of Richard is settled." "Is there anything unusual about Penny recently?" Officer Lee asked about Penny's situation. "I've been so busy these days that I haven't had time to see her. But it shouldn't be anything special. If it was, Oscar would have contacted me." With Officer Lee's reminder, Winnie found that she had not gone to see Penny for several days. "Richard is very cunning and has strong anti-detection ability. I don't know when he'll be exposed again. Officer Lee was upset as he talked about the case, which was the longest since he'd been on the force. It was an insult to his investigative skills. "Don't worry. Justice has long arms. Sooner or later he will be caught." In fact, Winnie was also worried, but seeing that Officer Lee had been working on this case, she could not urge but comfort Officer Lee. "Right, show me the conversation between Gloria and Penny when you have time, I want to see what they actually said." Winnie was curious, wanting to confirm who was lying. But from Penny's words, from Gloria's attitude, Winnie would determine that Gloria was not a kind person. Winnie could not help but felt the women around Brian had selfish thoughts. She felt sorry for Brian and wondered why he could not meet a nice woman. "Ok, I'll give it to you as soon as possible. And, the leader has assigned you to work with me." Officer Lee said, but Winnie did not understand. "I only know how to do things on the Internet, and I can't be involved in this case, can I?" "It is nominal. You can exercise your rights when you meet Richard." This was an order and Officer Lee just conveyed it. "Oh, I must thank the leader." Winnie had dinner and was going to go off work. She was going to see Penny, but before she had taken off her police uniform, she was called back by the leadership. "What's wrong? Is it about the software?" Winnie ran to the leadership and colleagues, after all, when the leadership called her, his voice was eager. She thought there was something wrong with her software. "No." The big leader answered her, and smiled. "Then why am I called back?" Winnie was confused. "I just want to let you know that your software has received preliminary approval." Winnie was not silly and she understood what was going on. Then she was surprised. "Really, so soon?" Winnie felt it unreal. If it really caught the criminal, that software was the fastest in all her experiment. "Yes, the location is locked, and detectives are on their way. If the detectives find the suspect and verify his identity, your software wins." The leader was also excited, and now everyone in the lab was waiting with bated breath for the final result. "It must be done, it must be done." At the moment, Winnie dare not be excited. Before the success, she could not be proud. "Wait, we'll all wait." The leadership patted Winnie's shoulder, knowing that she was the most nervous person. There was a lot of discussion going on in the lab, and it was about the ongoing capture. "Leader, if I don't succeed, I will continue to improve it. If it works, can we do it nationally?" Winnie discussed with the leadership. "Of course, if it works, it will help a lot in solving the case, and we have to go nationwide. Officer Chamber, if you do succeed, you will have made a great contribution." Speaking, the leadership was excited. Although the experiment had not been completely successful, he particularly believed in Winnie's talent. He didn't find this treasure directly, but he would polish it to make it more shiny. "This is my job. As long as it can benefit more people and punish criminals, it is enough." Winnie said modestly. From the beginning she entered the industry, she never thought of credit. She just wanted to forge ahead with fearless spirit. "Officer Chamber, if this software is successful, you are our big leader's treasure and you will be under protection." Another colleague joked, so that Winnie's tense mood could be relieved. "We are all leaders' treasure." "Right, Officer Chamber is right, you are all my treasure." The leader joined in the joke, as his voice fell, there was a news from the computer system. "Leader, Officer Chamber, come and see, the suspect is under control." A policeman excitedly called Winnie and the leader, who hurriedly went to the computer for comparison of the data. "Yes, yes, it is him. Leader, Director Chambers, we made it!" The policeman who controlled the computer was excited and happy as a child. "Good, good, I declare the software experiment a success!" The leader was excited beyond words. He had not been in such a good mood for a long time. This was a major breakthrough in the police department. At this moment, Winnie was happy and determined her software development success. She smiled, brightly. This software had a special meaning for her. It witnessed the breakup with her and Brian and it supported her spirit after she lost Brian. Without this software to support Winnie, without her position as a policewoman, she might not make it through. At this moment she was laughing, but her heart was crying, for she left Brian, how she loved the most. "Leader, we have another suspect located in the south suburb of the city." "Immediately contact the police station in the south suburb of the city to catch the suspect." ... Another suspect was locked, which made everyone into a busy state. They did not have time to celebrate and began to do their duty and put all the energy into the suspect. That was what police did. A little rest and frolic was luxury. But Winnie liked it, she enjoyed the success that came from hard work.

CHAPTER 668 BRIAN SHOWED UP

Winnie wanted to go to see Penny in the afternoon, but Felix called and asked her out. This time Felix chose meeting place to be a coffee shop, which deliberately catered to Winnie. That surprised Winnie. Winnie hurried to the coffee shop. "Chairman, am I late? I am sorry, there was a traffic jam." Winnie said apolitically, even if it was a very bad excuse. But there was indeed a car accident. "No, you are on time. I am early." Felix's manner was neither genial nor aloof. Since he knew that Winnie took the blame and she did not make scene, Felix's attitude Winnie had changed a lot. Although he still could not accept her to become his granddaughter-in-law, he liked to get along with her. "I'll be punctual next time." Winnie knew Felix hate the people who were late, even if she was late, but Felix came earlier than her. She was equally uncomfortable keeping others waiting for her. Speaking, Winnie saw Felix had coffee, she could not help but remind. "Chairman, you'd better not drink coffee at your old age. It's bad for your health. Get something else." Winnie was to say to the waiter, but Felix stopped her. "It is ok, I'll just have a little." "Director Chambers, I have a question I can't figure out. Why didn't you tell your family why you broke up with Brian?" Felix then asked the question. He had been puzzling over the question since he knew it yesterday. Why didn't she tell her family and friends? Winnie was stunned and did not expect that Felix cared about such things. "The kids told you?" Winnie asked Felix, thinking that it must be mentioned by the kids when they had chat. "Brian told me." Felix gave a simple answer. It did not matter who told him, the reason why Winnie did not tell mattered. "I see." Winnie gave a bitter smile. "Now I'm as disgusting as I can possibly be in his eyes. He must have said nothing good about me. It doesn't matter, we broke up anyway." Winnie sighed and released the feeling of bitter. If Felix wanted to know, she had nothing to hide. "I didn't tell my family and friends, because I didn't want to get Mr. Bennet in trouble. If my friends and family find out I've been wronged, they will go to Brian. Even Vanessa will go to him for explanation. They all agree that Mr. Bennet and I break up, but they won't accept it this way." Speaking of this, Winnie could not help but sigh, depressed. If she did not sigh, she was afraid that she could not bear it. "You are afraid that Brian would be questioned by your family." Felix understood that the reason Winnie did not tell her family was that she did not cause trouble to Brian, rather than being embarrassed like Brian said. "No, I was afraid my family and friends would question him and he would know the truth, and then we wouldn't be completely apart." Winnie did not admit that she did it for the good of Brian, but gave Felix an answer like she was selfish. They had broken up, and no one should know that she did it for his good. It was like going back to the time of the first crush, everything was silent. "After Mr. Bennet and Gloria get married, I will tell my friends. Then it won't change anything." "By the way, Chairman, Vanessa came home yesterday and told me that the two kids were rude to you. I did not educate them well, please do not get angry. I apologize on behalf of the kids." Winnie got up, and then bowed to Felix. "There's no need to apologize." Felix frowned. It was not that he was not dissatisfied with Winnie's apology. The more sensible Winnie was, the more uncomfortable he was. "They are my kids, and I wouldn't be angry even if they were rude to me. Don't worry about the kids. It's only natural that they didn't accept the fact you broke up." Felix explained. Since Winnie made an apology, he could not tell her what the kids said. Although the topic shifted to the kids and Felix did not pursue the previous topic, Felix knew, no matter how Winnie hid, her starting point was for the sake of Brian. In fact, from a personal point of view, Brian really needed a woman who paid for him wholeheartedly. But business was bigger than heaven, how could a man be held back by love? Winnie sat down again, even if Felix did not care, she thought she did not educate the kids well. "As a matter of fact, the two kids said something against you in front of me, but I criticized and persuaded them in person. They agreed to do it, and I thought they could do it. But I did not expect that they refused to go to the old house and were rude to you." "Even though they're the kids of the Bennet family, I'm not doing a good job as a mother for they being rude." Winnie blame herself, during this period of them, she did neglect the kids' discipline and communication. "The kids are good and need no further education. An old friend of mine has a spoiled great-grandson who has no manners, yells at grown-ups and makes no sense if he doesn't get what he wants." "Such kids can hardly be compared with Luke and Megan. Every time I mention my great grandkids to my old friends, I always show off. I am proud of the two kids." "Don't blame the kids. It's normal for them to have their own ideas when they are older." Felix recalled the scene he talked about his great grandkids with his old friend. He said it deliberately to Winnie, lest Winnie blame kids. He was also touched by the memory. Other people's kids were spoiled. His kids were sensible and excellent, why couldn't he give them what they want. "I will not scold them, but they must not resent you. My break up with Brian has nothing to do with you." Winnie felt it far-fetched. Although he was not directly related to it, he was one of the standards that Winnie measured love. Without Felix in the middle, Brian's love would not be so difficult, and she would not lose confidence in Brian. Felix and several women completely cut off Winnie's fantasies to love and to Brian. "The kids are right. It's my fault. If I hadn't objected to your being together, nothing so unpleasant would have happened between you, and you wouldn't have broken up." For the first time, Felix admitted his fault in front of Winnie, which surprised Winnie and Butler Lowe. How could he say such things? No matter what he did in his life, he never admitted that he was wrong. Everything he did, everything he said was the truth without a flaw. But he did admit he was wrong now. Winnie looked at Felix, feeling incredible. She didn't know what to say next. "Director Chambers, I know I made a mistake, but I hope you can understand my intention. What I do is for everyone's good, not my own." "So I'm sorry, but I still can't accept you." Felix said indifferently and insisted his thought. However, before Winnie made any reaction, Brian's voice suddenly was heard. "Grandpa, Winwin and I have broken up, why do you still bother her?" Brian appeared in front of them with an angry face. He questioned Felix coldly, because he heard the last words of Felix. He and Winnie did not work and Winnie would not entwine him. But Felix still asked Winnie out, clearly he was giving her a hard time. Brian had been very guilty to Winnie, and he did not want to increase his guilt. "What are you doing here?" Felix asked with a frown. He was dissatisfied with Brian's sudden appearance and tantrum. "I passed by and saw your car and Winnie's car parked here. I knew you were making trouble for her." Brian told a lie, in fact, the bodyguard told him that Winnie and Felix were together. However, Brian continued to talk angrily without giving anyone a chance to explain. "Grandpa, she and I broke up, and now we have nothing to do with each other. You seek her out alone, aren't you afraid she'll stick to us? Grandpa, don't ever see her again. She has no effect on me, on our family, on the Bennet Group. I will not want her anymore." Brian said so because he did not want his grandpa to bother Winnie again, he did it for the sake of Winnie, but he ignored Winnie's feelings. "You..." "I assure you that I will not stick to your family for a single meeting. I am not that shameless." "Brian, there is a surveillance video here, you can keep my words. If I disobey my words, you can show it to me." "Remember, I will not be with you even if you want me." Winnie angrily rebuked Brian and then walked away. She did not expect that Brian would humiliate her so in public, did not expect that he would hit her self-esteem so hard in front of his grandfather. Felix originally did not like her and looked down upon her from the bottom of his heart. Well, now she was worth nothing. "How can you talk like that? You don't even know why I asked Director Chambers out! You made Director Chambers embarrassed." Felix reproached Brian, but he knew why Brian said those irrational words. He was afraid that Grandpa would give a hard time to Winnie. He was protecting Winnie, but his method was wrong. "Grandpa, I don't know what you're talking about. No matter what you said, don't find her again. I have promised you to marry Gloria and she will not bother me again. Why you still want to meet her? "

CHAPTER 669 ANGRY DRIVING

Brian realized that he hurt Winnie, but he did not know the intention of the meeting between grandpa and Winnie. He didn't believe his grandfather's attitude toward Winnie could change. When Brian received the phone call, he thought his grandpa was worried Winnie and he was in entanglement, so once again he wanted to warm Winnie. He had that thought, so he could not understand it for a moment. "So what we meet? Did I embarrass Director Chambers? Never mind, go and see her. angry driving is very dangerous." Felix did not continue to entwine. Seeing that Winnie angrily left, he inevitably was worried. "Okay, I'll come back to you." Brian turned around and chased out, until now he did not realize that grandpa was concerned about Winnie, did not notice the change in grandpa's attitude. "Alas..... He is not as calm as he used to be. He spoke before knowing what was going on. How hurtful that is, Director Chambers must be sad." After Brian went out, Butler Lowe could not help but say. Winnie was for the sake of Brian. She was sad, but she said nothing but had to bear the attack of Brian's words. As an outsider, he felt Winnie was pitiful, how could Brian say those words? "As long as it is related to Winnie, he will not calm down. He came to rescue Winnie. He used radical method, but he did not know it." Felix was clear Brian did so for the sake of Winnie. He still loved her, still protected her. Although he knew it was Winnie's fault, he still could not get her over. Just like Rufus could not get over Isobel. Would Brian also want to wait for Winnie for a lifetime? At the thought of these, Felix's heart trembled violently. Did he really destroy two generations of people? How would he face it if Brian waited for a lifetime for a woman just like his father did? "Butler Lowe, I always think of Isobel recently. Rufus was single for a lifetime for her, will Brian..." Felix asked Butler Lowe uncertainly. He wanted to ask if Brian would be single for a lifetime as Rufus. Butler Lowe gave a direct answer before he could finish, because he had already what he wanted to ask. "Yes, of course. Winnie is a good woman. Brian will not meet such a good girl again and he will be lonely for the rest of his life." Butler Lowe saw Felix's attitude. He began to think about everything Rufus experienced and where it was wrong Brian and Winnie separated. Felix stared at Butler Lowe, not wanting to admit Butler Lowe's answer, but he did not have other reason to convince himself. When Brian was out, Winnie had driven the car out of the parking lot. When she saw Brian approaching her, she stepped on the accelerator. What a damn man. They had broken up, why defamed her like that, damage her dignity like that? She didn't want to see him, she wanted to gouge him out of her heart, even if she died in pain, she didn't want to see this bastard again. Brian heard the sound of stepping on the accelerator. Afraid Winnie passed by him, he directly stood in the middle of the road. Winnie was unprepared and did not expect Brian would stand in the middle of the road. She stepped on the brake, immediately it issued the sound of tires' friction with the ground. Fortunately, the car stopped in front of Brian. Winnie was scared and got cold sweat. "Are you crazy?" Winnie lowered the window and shouted loudly. If she was late stepping on the brake, Brian would have been under the car, which made her scared to death. Brian did not say anything, but quickly went around to the passenger seat, opened the door and got in the car. "What do you want? Is it funny? Haven't you finished insulting me? Okay, I'll find a place with more people, and you can talk as much as you want. You can say it harshly, as long as you're happy." Winnie was angry and directly stepped on the accelerator. She couldn't figure out why he still went against her. Even if she did something wrong, it wouldn't go on forever. Winnie drove so angrily and so fast for the first time. She even felt the urge to kill herself. "Drive slowly." Brian reminded. He was afraid Winnie had an accident. Driving with anger was dangerous, especially in crowded areas. "Are you scared? If so, get off." Winnie parked the car on the side of the road even without turning on the light. "Get out of the car and say what you want here. I'm sure the crowd will soon grow." Winnie unlocked the seat belt and was to get off, but was pulled by Brian. "Can you calm down? It's not a good place to park. You're affecting others." Brian reminded her again. He was afraid that once he got off, she would suddenly drive away. In that situation, Brian would be more worried if he wasn't in her car. "Name a good place to park." Winnie was still angry. If those words came from a strange man, Winnie would not put it in her heart, but this man was Brian, her favorite person. It was hard for her to accept to be insulted by the one she loved most. Winnie started the car again, stepped on the accelerator and drove away. "Can you drive slowly? Do you want to risk your life for what I said?" Brian had to remind her again, because Winnie drove faster. "Don't worry, I won't let you die. I don't want to die with you." Winnie got more and more angry, but Brian did not take his words seriously and his attitude was so indifferent. Maybe it was fun for him to hurt her. As Winnie's voice fell, the car came to the crossroads. When she stepped on the accelerator, a red light suddenly was on. The car in front of stopped and she had to step on the brake. The car speed was fast, coupled with the slam on brake, Brian leaned forward out of control. Winnie use her arm to protect Brian, while her head hit on the steering wheel. At this time, the car stopped, and Winnie got blood on her head. "Are you okay?" Brian stretched out his hand to touch Winnie's head, but was blocked by Winnie's hand. "Don't, it's none of your business." Winnie was dizzy, but she pretended to be ok. "Go to a hospital." How could it be all right? Brian knew the impact force was huge. If it were not for Winnie protected him, his head would be injured. Everyone had an instinctive reaction, in the face of danger, no matter how close the people sit next to you, the first thing was to protect yourself. Winnie, on the contrary, protected Brian. A lot of things seem to be reversed, as if Winnie had been protecting him. He said he would protect her, but he was the one got protection. "No, even if I am dead, it has nothing to do with you. Why bother?" As Winnie spoke, it was green light, then she started the car. Winnie felt less angry after she was hit. By this moment, she felt it was no of use even if she was angry. If no one loved her even if she died, there was no point in getting angry. Winnie did not say a word when she was driving. Headache occupied all her thoughts, and she clearly felt tight on her forehead, very uncomfortable. Winnie endured the pain and drove the car to the seaside. "I want to be alone for a while. You go home." She said, but did not look at Brian. She opened the door and got out. Brian saw Winnie's forehead was red and he felt distressed, but did not dare to speak, for fear of stirring up Winnie's anger again. Looking at Winnie get off, looking at her angry face, he could not be relieved to leave her alone here. Brian got off the car and then caught up with Winnie. "Let's have a cup of coffee. I need to explain what happened." Brian said, so that it could release Winnie's anger. "No, just say it right here." Winnie did not refuse, because he would insist. Winnie walked a few steps down and sat on the steps, waiting for the so-called explanation of Brian. Brian did not force Winnie, also came to the steps to sit down. "Winwin, I didn't mean what I just said. I said it because I was afraid grandpa would keep pestering you. I know it was hurtful, but I couldn't think of anything else in that case." Brian sat down and began to explain, hoping Winnie's mood could get better. "I ought to thank you? No matter what you do or say, you always have your reasons and your excuses. You don't know for sure what your grandfather said, so how do you know he must have hurt me?" Winnie could not accept such an explanation, and did not want to believe in any explanation of Brian. "I know my grandfather. He asked you out..." "You don't know. You don't know anyone." Winnie interrupted Brian loudly. Brian's hurtful words had already been said, and whether explained or not, it had achieved the desired effect. Winnie felt there was no need to listen. "Brian, don't lie to me. You hate me, you want me to be scolded by your grandfather, and your sudden appearance today is premeditated." "You spoke from your heart. You are afraid that I make demands on you. The women broke up with you got money from you, but I don't want your money, and you always feel I will bring your troubles." "If my conduct disturbs you, give me the money then. You can give as much as you want. After that, I will not pester you. If you do not believe that, we go to notarization, let the law protect you. Then you can be at ease." Winnie stretched her hand out. If Brian could be at ease, she would rather bear the blame and would rather let Brian look down upon her.

CHAPTER 670 BUTLER LOWE'S ADVICE

Brian's consistent style was to use money to settle the problem. And she and he started the relationship because of money, which could explain why Brian said she would stick to him. "That's not what I meant. You are always misinterpreting my meaning." Brian was helpless. He had never thought of solving the problem with money. He threw money at her when they broke up because he was angry, not because he wanted to. Even if he gave her money, he hoped that she would live a better life in the future and that she would not struggle to make money. But Winnie thought it was his means. Brian was unconvinced but helpless. "Am I misinterpreting you? Did I hear you wrong? Didn't you say those words?" Brian must be joking, must be playing with her, otherwise he would not say such boring words. "Brian, do you know that your grandfather has always been contemptuous of me? Even if you do it for me, you can't humiliate me in front of him like that." "When I was with you, I tried to be perfect. I tried to do everything to the best of my ability, because I just wanted your grandfather to look at me differently." "But you, we broke up and you won't let me go. Belittling me like that in front of your grandfather." "Brian, I just want to ask you, am I that bad? Can you change the way to revenge me? Will you let me hold my head up in front of your grandfather?" Winnie said a lot. Felix's attitude towards her finally had a little change, although it was not the right time, although she could not be with Brian, Winnie still wanted to get Felix's recognition. However, Brian's words destroyed all her efforts of a long period of time. "Don't say anything. We have nothing to say. You can scold me all you want, belittle me all you want. It was me did something wrong." "If you want to feel secure, give me the money. I won't refuse this time." Winnie did not give Brian the opportunity to speak. After speaking, she got up and left. No matter what Brian's intention was today, it hurt Winnie. Winnie could not forgive Brian and could not accept his so-called explanation. They could be enemies, he could revenge on her and she would not avoid it. Brian looked at Winnie's back and saw her disappear in his line of sight. This time he really had no malice, he just wanted to help her out, did not want his grandpa continue to embarrass her, and did not want to continue to owe her. But things went against his will, Winnie could not accept it and she was hurt. She asked for money, at last, but to reassure him. He knew better than anyone how much she hated the money deal and how much she resisted it. Now in order to draw a line in the sand with him, she was willing to cross her own line. She was heartbroken and hated his presence. Brian sighed helplessly. She did not explain her things and did not listen to his explanation. Brian was back to the old house and wanted to ask what grandpa said, but grandpa was resting, and Butler Lowe did not allow Brian to disturb. "Come out and I'll talk to you." The so-called chat of Butler Lowe was a mission of Felix. Two people came to the pavilion in the courtyard. Butler Lowe opened his mouth calmly. "Chairman asked Director Chambers out was to ask Director Chambers why she didn't tell the reason you broke up. They had a good conversation and Chairman didn't say a word of threat or warning." "Why did he want to know it? I explained to him. I broke up with Winnie, Winnie is not grandfather's enemy, why did he come to her?" Brian was puzzled, it seemed to have nothing to do with grandpa. "Because you broke up, because Chairman no longer dislikes Director Chambers, he occasionally chats with Winnie. In the words of Chairman, he feels better after chatting with Director Chambers, and things will suddenly become clear." These words were not all said by Felix, but Butler Lowe felt it from Felix. "Chat with her? He said many harsh words to her before, who will believe that he would not do that again?" Brian insisted his thought in the dispute over this matter. His grandpa had repeatedly stated his position in front of him that he would not accept Winnie. So Brian would not believe it was just a simple chat. "Chairman did make a hard time for Director and his attitude was very bad. To be honest, I really don't know how Director Chambers can endure it." "But it is different now. Even though Chairman said he still can't accept Director Chambers, his tough and cruel attitude is gone." Butler Lowe did not hide, and he wanted Brian to know it was not easy for Winnie to endure it. Butler Lowe continued. "Don't you see, Brian, that your grandfather is changing? From the beginning, he was strongly resistant and disgusted, but now he can sit down and talk peacefully." "Your grandfather was stubborn all his life, and it takes a lifetime to hate someone. But Winnie has changed it, what do you think is the reason?" It was Butler Lowe's own opinions. Other rarely talked with Felix, so they could not see the change in his attitude. And Butler Lowe was not the same. He was with Felix for twenty-four hours and he knew the change in Felix's attitude towards Winnie. "Why?" Brian didn't know much and didn't know it for long. His time to contact his grandpa was limited, he knew that he did not understand his grandpa well as Butler Lowe, and did not why his attitude changed. "Although your grandfather did not say it, I know began to like Winwin, otherwise he would not go to her home for a meal." Butler Lowe said carefully, hoping it would not make misunderstanding between Brian and Winnie continue to increase. Winnie held grievance, if Brian hurt her again, their relationship would get worse. "Brian, your grandfather called Director Chambers out again and again, which really hurt Director Chambers. But look at it from another point of view, without so many contacts, how could your grandfather know Director Chambers, how could he change his attitude bit by bit, and how could he like this stubborn and considerate woman?" Butler Lowe began to talk in detail about what he had seen, heard and realized. "I've been around him so long that I can say I know him well. He says he can't take it, but inside he's struggling." "You've had a lot of women come and go, but your grandfather hasn't found anyone he's really satisfied with. Other girls in addition to family pedigree did not satisfy him, but Director Chambers satisfies him in addition to family pedigree." "Don't you feel that?" Butler Lowe asked Brian, telling him Felix was changing and Winnie was a good girl. Butler Lowe said a lot and what to do next depended on Brian. "So what? We broke up. It doesn't matter if he changes or not." Brian believed Butler Lowe's words, and he believed Winnie could change his grandpa. But now it was too late, and even if grandpa agreed him to be with Winnie, it would not work. "Grandpa wants a family to grow the Bennet Group. I tried my best to satisfy him. I will marry Gloria just as he wants. Butler Lowe, please tell grandpa, no matter what reason is, no matter what relationship I and Winnie have, don't make it hard for her." Brian said. He did not have the ability to change everything. He just hoped that Winnie would not be tortured and would not be looked down upon by the Bennet family. "I'll tell him, but you have to get to know Gloria well. If you choose to marry Gloria, it will be a lifetime thing. You should be prepared to live with her all your life." To tell the truth, Butler Lowe was disappointed in Brian. He could not violate the meaning of Felix and tell Brian to continue to be with Winnie, and he respected Winnie and did not say her grievance. But what he said was obvious. Felix absolutely would not like a girl with a bad history, if Winnie really did something against morality, Felix would not see Winnie again. Butler Lowe almost told Brian to re-investigate the matter. Alas..... let him see for himself. One day he would figure it out. "Gloria was chosen by my grandfather and favored by him. I don't care, as long as he's happy." Brian said angry words because he could not change anything. Grandpa could do what he wanted, if grandpa was satisfied, it was okay for him to sacrifice his own happiness. "You are so stubborn. Listen to me, get to know Gloria." Butler Lowe could not talk about Gloria's character, and could only give a hint. "But grandpa has been urging me. He is in a hurry, and doesn't give me time. How should I get to know her?" Brian did not want to get to know Gloria. In this life, in addition to Winnie, it did not matter who he married to. "Your grandfather has been pushing you, but he's been pushing you for six or seven years, what has he done to you for you have not been married? What's he gonna do to you if you don't get married for another ten years? He is in a hurry, but he didn't force you." Butler Lowe said, helping Brian to buy more time, so that Brian could think about the relationship between him and Winnie.
