

N. Machine 81

Chapter: 81

He didn't realize it when he just glossed over it, but the marks had various depths and angles on the stone. Was this done on purpose to hide something else?

'Maybe it erased someone's realization of the truth?'

Yeowun felt a chill down his spine. If the person who left the poem in the stone was founding father Chun Ma, then it was easy to guess who left the original sword marks. And if those were left by Chun Ma also, it was likely that the sword marks represented the trace of Chun Ma's founding of the truth.

Chapter: 82

Yeowun then felt his heart pounding and his legs shaking. The movement was perfect. He then swallowed his throat and asked, 'Is there any other formation?'

[After careful analysis, it was found to be only one formation.]

Yeowun asked this because his Butterfly Blade Dance was created with twenty-four basic movements. Three movements were connected to each other to create a single formation. The last formation of the skill was the ultimate formation that consisted of eight basic movements and even Submeng needed half a year to learn it. Yeowun was able to learn it easily with the help from Nano, but even he felt the muscle strain from the last formation.

Chapter: 83

[Activating battle mode.]

Two avatars appeared in front of him. They looked at each other and they each began using their different sword skills. The battle instantly ended, and the outcome was beyond belief. Yeowun mumbled with disbelief, "It's... countered..."

The latter forty-fifth sword skill easily countered the former that Yeowun considered to be perfect and chopped the opponent avatar's neck.

Chapter: 84

The books here had the basics of all martial arts and the origins. What caught Yeowun's eye was the book called 'Origin of Internal Energy'.

'Nano, scan the book.'

Yeowun then began skimming through the book and realized that the information it contained seemed useful. It was a book that explained the basis of internal energy that might help Nano analyze and help with the breathing skill. Yeowun then used all his remaining time to scan the books on the shelf. He didn't realize it now, but this would later help him in creating his own martial arts.

Chapter: 85

It seems that the person who covered the original marks had gone on with further training. Yeowun wanted to see how the fifty-six formations were able to counter the original formations, but he could only do it later since there were too many people around.

'Nano, scan and save the sword movements and formations.'

[Understood.]

Chapter: 86

'Yes, Teacher.'

'Even if you have the skill, you need to train hundreds and thousands of times.'

Training was the hardest parts of martial arts. Luckily, Chun Yeowun was able to skip the hart part with Nano's help.

Chapter: 87

'He's not weak though. Do I need to fight him?'

Yeowun then thought there was no other way around it and decided to taunt him so he that he would lose his calm.

Yeowun smiled, "Oh, I didn't tell you to leave the room that night though."

Chapter: 88

Ha Ilming frowned as he nodded. He couldn't dare to go on. Yuchan then pulled his hand back from Ilming's neck.

“Wait there. It won’t take long.”

“...Whatever. I’ll get going. You take your time or whatever.”

Chapter: 89

“Of course! You know how shocking it was when I saw you cut the arms of that Lust Clan girl with your blade skill?”

Yuchan began talking about what he saw and that he couldn’t forget the moment. When everyone else became wary of Chun Yeowun, it seemed like Yuchan thought otherwise.

“I’m your number one fan now, brother.”

Chapter: 90

“Don’t stand in my way and I will let you live.”

At that moment, Chun Yuchan’s face scrunched up into terrible scowl. White lines began snaking around Yuchan’s right hand and arm, and numbers began to rise in Yeowun’s sight.

[The enemy is focusing strong energy in his right arm. Take a half step to the left and activate the second formation of the Butterfly Blade Dance.]
