

Chapter 1 Raymond, I Am Hurting

"Bang!"

Hilda Parker, who had just finished her heart surgery, was dragged down by Raymond Morris and felt her body was numb. He was still dragging her with angry eyes.

"Hilda Parker, are you so eager to marry me?" Raymond asked coldly and his grip was tighter. He forced her to look up at him.

The pain almost made Hilda faint and her brain went blank at that moment, "What...what are you talking about?"

When he saw her innocent face, the abusive light appeared in Raymond's eyes, which made Hilda tremble in fear.

Before she came back to her senses, Raymond dragged her out of the room and the pain Hilda was experiencing made her not able to say a single word. She had to cry and weep.

"Sir, what are you doing here? She is a patient and has just had the surgery! You can't..."

Seeing this miserable scene in front of her, the nurse was going to step forward to stop Raymond but before she finished her words, she was pulled back by someone next to her.

"Don't get involved! That man is CEO of the Morris Corporation?"

This sentence made those who wanted to help Hilda stop in their tracks.

Who would dare to mess up with the leader of the Morris Corporation!

"Raymond! Let me go! Raymond, I am hurting..." Hilda was dragged from the hospital all the way to his car. Raymond pinched her chin and forced her to look at him.

"You are hurting? By this? Then did you ask Karen if she was hurting when you took her heart? Did you know she was also hurting when you sent someone to hurt him?" After he finished his words, here came a slap that fell heavily on Hilda's face.

The sudden ringing sensation in her ears made Hilda lose energy to think and she could not even understand what Raymond said to her.

"What...what do you mean? What happened to Karen?" Hilda used all her might and endured the pain to speak out a full sentence.

"Don't you know what happened to Karen? Are you still pretending you are innocent at this time? Don't you know Karen is dead now?! Where do you think you can your new heart?"

Now as long as Raymond closed his eyes, he could recall Karen lying in the mortuary.

"I...I didn't know! I..." Hilda shook her head and looked in surprise at Raymond who was bridling his anger. She begged him to believe her with a pale face.

But Raymond ignored her until the car stopped in front of a deserted building.

Then Raymond dragged Hilda out of the car to the building regardless of her struggle.

Bang!

Hilda was thrown on the ground by Raymond whose eyes showed no mercy. He asked her with a cold voice, "Do you know these men?"

Hilda was still overwhelmed by the pain and after a while, she found seven or eight men standing in this building as well. Those men all put on a frightened and anxious faces.

Hilda shook her head. She didn't know those men at all.

Seeing her shaking head, a fat man among them screamed, "Miss Parker, how could you not know us? I have our phone call record and transfer record on my phone! How could you deny this?"

Then the man knelt in front of Raymond and handed over his phone in his trembling hands, saying, "Mr. Morris, you can have a look at this contact record. She gave me money and asked me to deal with another woman whom I didn't know was your girlfriend.

Raymond didn't bother to give a glance to the man kneeling in front of him but he squatted before Hilda and raised her chin, smiling coldly, "Now, it is your turn to explain, Hilda Parker."

Chapter 2 This Woman Is At Your Mercy

Explain?

Explain what?

Hilda was in pain and her head was blank, "I...Raymond... I didn't do that to Karen."

It was true that Hilda loved Raymond deeply but she had never thought of stealing him from other women because she was clear that she had few days left because she had a heart defect. All she prayed for was that Raymond could live a happy life.

Raymond was not surprised by Hilda's answer and he used more strength in his pinch on her chin and said without emotion, "You love me very much, right?"

Hilda was in such great pain that her chin turned numb. She could see a sneer and hate in his eyes.

"Yes, I love you," she still decided to say the truth and show her weakness.

Raymond turned up the corners of his mouth with a sneer and tore the hospital gown off her, "You like me like any man, right?"

His behavior made Hilda tremble in fear!

Hilda's face turned more and more pale while gripping hard her gown. Looking at Raymond with begging eyes, she said brokenly, "No! No! You can't do... this to me! I haven't done that! I...knew nothing about this matter! I...really...really...didn't know! You...CAN'T do this to me!"

For Raymond, Hilda risked her life to do the heart surgery even if she knew it was possible that she might die on the surgery table. With the success of this surgery, Hilda thought happily that she could be with him in the future but why, why would he react so furiously after she woke up?

Raymond had never been so cruel to her before.

He used to be her best friend who cared about her and even spoiled her.

Raymond suddenly squeezed her throat with great force, "I can't do this to you? You didn't know? Hilda Parker, do you know how much I want to kill you right now?"

But he couldn't because Hilda had Karen's heart. If she died, then Karen would literally leave him.

Thinking of this, Raymond loosed his grip on her neck...

The moment he let go of her, Hilda, who almost lost consciousness, gulped in air. An intense pain in her heart made her curl up on the floor.

Raymond frowned and looked at Hilda with disgust, saying to that group of men, "This woman is at your mercy now."

His words were like a verdict, giving her no chance to defend herself.

"Raymond..." Hilda still had the last hope at the bottom of her heart and asked him with all her might, "Do you believe...believe that I did all this to Karen? You think I am guilty, right?"

Raymond's eyes were covered with coldness and if you take a closer look, you can see a touch of irritation in his eyes as well.

Looking at those men who were still huddling in the corner, Raymond said coldly, "If you are not interested in her, I can get other men here."

What Raymond said froze those men who dared not to step forward to Hilda at first. Some men then walked to Hilda and looked at this pale-faced but still beautiful woman.

Raymond's words made the hope in Hilda's heart completely fade.

Physical and mental pain almost made her suffocate. Hilda looked at him in desperation while he was like an indifferent passerby. Finally, she gave up and said, "We are over, Raymond Morris."

For a split second, a part of Raymond's heart ached.

It was an instant pain but made him quite irritated.

Suppressing upset at the bottom of his heart, Raymond looked at those quiet men and said coldly, "You can do anything to her. Just keep her alive."
