

Chapter 24 Changing Memory

"I...I didn't know how she found me... I forgot many details but I remember that this woman came to me that night and gave me a million dollars, asking me to use psychological suggestions on the man I saved during the daytime. I lacked money at that time so I did what she told me. I thought it was just a simple suggestion and it would not hurt him!" Philip said anxiously.

"What type of psychological suggestion?" Mike asked.

"Make the man believe Karen is Kiki," Philip said, "I also remember that that woman was called Karen Miller! She told me she was the man's girlfriend. I was confused at that time and wondered what the relationship between the man and that crying woman was. But I didn't ask much because it was none of my business. I didn't want to anger Karen since she gave me the money," Philip said.

He had been thinking of Karen as Kiki!

For such a long time!

Raymond, sitting in a corner covered by the shadow, didn't say anything but was thinking of Hilda in his mind.

"Except for psychological suggestion, what did you do to that man?" Mike asked.

Philip shook his head, "Nothing...I did nothing more to him. But later, I found out a secret, that is, Karen also went to visit a very famous psychiatrist who was good at hypnosis. Several days ago, I had a meal with him and he told me proudly that he once did a very successful hypnosis."

What kind of hypnosis?"

"Change Memory."

"More details."

Philips's heart beat very fast and he took deep breaths to make himself calm. Then he continued, "He could delete your memory about your loved ones and make you look like having an amnesia. No matter how many times your loved one appears before you, you won't recognize her remember her."

"How could I forget my loved ones?" Mike asked with a confused face.

"Yes, you will, after his hypnosis. Your memory about your loved one will be replaced by that of others," Philips said carefully and asked, "Do you understand this?"

Mike understood what Philips said but he couldn't believe this.

"What you said is true?" Mike asked.

Philips nodded, "I am telling the truth."

Then the whole room fell silent.

Mark looked at Raymond, "Boss, then what should we..."

"When you saved that man, do you remember the woman with him?" Raymond asked hoarsely.

If Philips had been asked this question a few months earlier, he would not have remembered her for the time being. But recently, the news of the crisis of the Parker family was spread so widely that almost everyone had access to this news.

"I remember! The woman is the lady of the Parker family! She is Hilda Parker! When I saved her, she told me her name was Kiki. I still remember the scene where she was holding the man's hand and begging him not to leave her."

The reason why Philips could remember this matter so clearly was that it was because of it that he could be what he was today.

After hearing what Philips said, everything was clear to Raymond now, which was why his heart hurt so badly.

Raymond was willing to do whatever it took to go back to five years ago and slap himself hard.

"Tell me, who is him?" Raymond asked.

Philip didn't know whom Raymond was asking about.

"Who were you asking, Mr. Morris?"

"The person who did the memory deletion. What is his name?" Raymond asked.

"Kevin...Walton! His name is Kevin Walton!"

As his name was spoken, Raymond stood up and said to Mike, "I will leave him to you."

Chapter 25 | Realize My Mistake

As Raymond walked out of the room, he received a call from Lauren Miller.

Hearing the constant ring, Raymond's cold air was spreading around him.

He threw his phone at Mike, letting him answer it.

Mike froze for a while but still answered the phone.

As the phone was picked up, Lauren's voice came, "Raymond, you finally answered my call..."

"Ms. Miller, I am Mike, Mr. Morris's assistant."

Lauren was surprised and asked, "Where is Raymond?"

Mike took a look at Raymond who was wearing a cold face and then said, "Mr. Morris is having a meeting right now. It is inconvenient for him to answer your call. If you have something important to say to him, you can leave a message and I will tell him after the meeting."

"Nothing important. Can you tell him to call me back after the meeting?" Lauren asked.

"Yes. Miss Miller. I will give Mr. Morris your message."

Mike hung up the phone and gave it back to Raymond.

"Boss, since you have known it was the Miller family who was behind all this, why," After getting into the car, Mike asked what he wanted most but was interrupted by Raymond.

"Do you want to know why I didn't deal with them, right?"

Raymond asked.

Mike nodded.

"If I deal with them right now, that's not enough. You know how to make people desperate? Push them down when they are near the top," Raymond said.

Mike now felt sorry for Lauren Miller.

Until now, the Miller family believed Lauren would marry into the Morris family but Raymond had found out the entire truth, Mike was afraid they could not afford the anger from his boss.

When Raymond arrived at the hospital, it was midnight.

He came to the door of Hilda's ward and didn't push it right away but slowly pushed it open little by little. He had thought Hilda had fallen asleep because it was about 11 o'clock in the evening.

But when he opened the door, he saw Hilda standing by the window, staring at the moon outside. For an instant, Raymond held his breath.

He dared not to take a step forward but stood at the door, asking her, "It is so late. Why didn't you sleep? What are you going to do?"

Raymond was worried about her since she had just finished the surgery. It would not be good for her health if she didn't have a good rest.

Raymond thought she would ignore him like she usually did but this time, Hilda turned around and looked into his eyes.

Today, the moonlight was bright. Even if the light was not turned on, Raymond could see Hilda's expression clearly.

Hilda turned around and looked at him with her numb eyes. It seemed to take her a long time to recognize the man at her door, "Raymond Morris, what are you doing here?"

Hilda asked, feeling nothing inside.

Raymond thought about her question and thought, "I want to see your face and make sure that you are still alive. I can leave if you want me to."

Hilda was so weak that she had to place one of her arms on the windowsill and the other behind her. Raymond thought she was holding the window in case she would accidentally fall.

He could feel that Hilda was holding something in her hand.

Before he thought about it carefully, Hilda opened her mouth, "Raymond, I thought...I had thought as long as I love you...keep loving you, I can let everything in the past go... But now I realize I am wrong. I am totally wrong."
