

Chapter 3 Raymond, Get Off

Soon Hilda was surrounded by those men and then she huddled, still staring at Raymond who kept the distance from her in his indifference.

Even when Raymond misunderstood her, Hilda didn't cry but when she was pushed into such a desperate situation by him, Hilda was finally disappointed and heartbroken.

She started to doubt whether this man in front of her was worthy of her love.

She believed that she made a mistake because she had fallen in love with a cold-blooded man.

"Get off..." Hilda was so weak now that she couldn't say more words. Heartache made it possible for her to resist. All the strength left was used by Hilda to curl up her body.

She felt sick from the bottom of her heart and her stomach was twisting. With a dizzy head, Hilda hid in the corner and repeated her words over and over again, "Get off...Get off..."

She knew it was useless to say it loudly because no one was going to save her...The man who was so gentle and soft to her had already disappeared.

That group of men looked at each other and then took a glance at Raymond. The men knew that if they didn't do something to this woman, Raymond wouldn't let them leave.

So the fat man again came to grab Hilda's hair and slapped her hard.

"Behave yourself, otherwise, we will be really tough!"

At this moment, Raymond frowned and his breath became heavy.

His driver showed a little sympathy and pursed his lips, saying carefully to Raymond, "Mr. Morris, should we ask them to stop..."

Before he finished his words, the driver closed his mouth because of Raymond's stern face.

"Get out..." Hilda was hurting all over her body but her heart was numb. She started at Raymond and said, "Raymond, let them get out of me."

"If you can't handle a single woman, then I am afraid you are useless for me," Raymond said this he left, and his words made those men make up their mind.

The only tiny hope in her heart was gone because of his cold words and his slamming of the door.

Hilda's clothes were torn up by those men immediately!

Hilda was shocked by what these vulgar men did. The next second, she suffered an intense pain in her heart and breathed heavily. Her face was as white as paper when the man was approaching...

Hilda used her last bit of strength to shout at the door before losing her consciousness, "Raymond, I will never forgive you in my life! Never!"
