

Chapter 36 Hilda, I Am Coming

Tracy shuddered.

Very soon, she started laughing, "I didn't expect you Raymond to beg me someday!"

Tracy would never forget the scene where Hilda was lying on the table without breath. So how could she let Raymond do what he wanted?

"She didn't owe you anything! Hilda gave back the heart to you but in fact, it was not from Karen! Do you know why? Because she didn't want to have anything with you! She hated you! I won't let you disturb her! Raymond, you'd better give up! You won't even see her body anymore!"

Tracy's eyes turned red and she asked, "You are regretting and now you want comfort. But have you ever thought of if Hilda would feel cold after she died without a heart in her chest?"

"Raymond, there was no such good thing that everyone would forgive you when you regret it. You want to repent in front of Hilda's grave but have you ever thought that you are the one who made her family end up in a terrible result? How could you make up for her?" Tracy couldn't control her emotions and when she finished her words, her tears fell as her voice trembled.

Tracy called her butler and asked him to send Raymond out. She ignored Raymond and left with big strides toward her bedroom.

After the butler sent Raymond out, he went to knock on Tracy's door.

At this moment, Tracy was still sitting in her room, crying sadly.
What a pity.

"Ms. Theresa, even though you didn't tell Raymond, he will find Ms. Parker's grave one day. Why did you..." The butler asked.

"I know."

How did Tracy not know how capable Raymond was? But she just didn't want him to find Hilda so soon.

The butler didn't say anything more but put a glass of water on the table and then left.

Like what the butler said, Raymond finally found Hilda's grave.

When he stood in front of the grave and looked at the woman in the picture on the gravestone, he found himself lost in his thoughts.

Hilda in the picture smiled brightly when he met her.

There were some colors in his eyes finally and Raymond slightly touched Hilda's picture smiling, "I came to see you, Hilda."

Then Raymond sat down before her grave and leaned on it, murmuring, "I know you hate me very much and I know you don't want to see you. I am...sorry. But I really miss you and really want to see you. After I finish my talking, I won't come to bother you anymore...If you would like not to listen to me, you can just ignore me like before. Is that okay? Hilda?"

Would she listen to him?

She hated him so much that she even ended her relationship with him by death. It was impossible for her to forgive him like she did before.

Raymond's throat was tight and he felt he might die of heartache.

Before he found Hilda's grave, Raymond had been telling himself that everything was not real and all this was because Hilda wanted to escape from him.

He told himself that Hilda didn't die and the body on the operating table was not real!

He told himself that that heart was not real and everything that had happened was fake!

But now he was in front of Hilda's grave and he had to face the reality...

Hilda really died and she used this decisive way to say goodbye to him!
