

Chapter 15 Looking For Her For Many Years

On the way to the hospital, Susan passed out again.
But Aaron thought she was just asleep.

Outside the emergency room, he waited for a woman anxiously for the first time.

Soon the door of the emergency room opened. The doctor took off his mask and looked at Aaron. "She has been here several times before. She was all alone. Now someone has finally come with her."

Aaron frowned all the time, "How's she?"

The doctor said, "Aren't you her husband? Don't you even know her physical condition? Why do you still make her pregnant?"

Pregnant?

Looking at Aaron, the doctor was very angry.

"You don't even know that she has gastric cancer? She is in urgent need of medication, but you make her pregnant. Now we can't make a decision. We can only wait until the patient wakes up and decide whether to keep the baby or not."

Gastric Cancer.....

Aaron seemed to only hear the two words.

How could such a young woman get this disease?

"Doctor, it must be a mistake. How could she get cancer?"

The doctor was impatient, "How couldn't? Do you think young people won't get cancer? Eating irregularly, feeling depressed every day, and getting sick are very normal. There are younger patients in the hospital than her."

With that, the doctor seemed unwilling to talk more and asked the nurse to push Susan to the ward.

After that, the doctor looked at Aaron, "No wonder she doesn't want her family to know she is sick. You don't care about her at all as a husband!"

Aaron didn't explain much but followed the nurse into the ward.

She was still in a coma.

Seeing her beautiful face, Aaron's heart ached.

She must have forgotten that she saved him before.

He had been looking for her for many years, and finally found her this year, but she was in this situation now.

When Susan woke up, it was dark again.

She didn't know what happened for a moment. She wanted to take her mobile phone to see what time it was, but she didn't know where her mobile phone was.

Aaron saw that she woke up and whispered to her, "What are you looking for?"

Susan found him in the room, "Why don't you turn on the light? You scared me."

Aaron got up and turned on the light, "You sleep too heavily. The light is dazzling."

"Where is my phone?"

"Your mobile phone is left in the hotel. I'll have it sent to you."

Susan nodded. For a moment, the atmosphere got embarrassing again. After all, they were not familiar with each other. "I'm okay. You must have something else to do."

Aaron stared at her with dark eyes for a long time before he said, "You... are sick..."

It turned out that he knew she was ill. She bowed her head, "Well, don't tell others. I don't want anyone to pity me."

She was a princess. She had been wearing a crown since childhood. Even if her life was coming to an end, she also wanted to be a princess.

"You are pregnant. You know traditional Chinese medicine well. You should understand that this child can't be....."

Her brain blows up, what.....

"What are you talking about?" Pregnant? How could she be pregnant? She hadn't been pregnant for the past three years, but she suddenly got pregnant at this time?

It must have been the time that Albert forced her that night.

She hadn't been pregnant for three years. She tried to recuperate herself, but it didn't work. She thought she couldn't give birth to a child.

Unexpectedly, on the edge of such despair, her baby came.

Susan didn't understand. What the hell is God kidding her?

At this time, what should she do? She could keep the baby, but what should she do after giving birth to her?

But how could she give up the child? She looked forward to having a baby for so long.

Suddenly the expectation came true. How could she get rid of her child?

It had nothing to do with Albert. Susan liked children. Maybe this was a gift from God. At the end of her life, God made her a complete woman and a mother.....

Thinking of this, all her entanglements were repelled by joy.

Her hands rubbed her belly slightly. She had a baby now. So difficult.

These days, she abandoned herself and didn't even take the medicine. Fortunately, she didn't take it... Maybe this was her destiny.

Tears of excitement fell. She happily said to Aaron, "I have a baby! Do I have a baby?"

Looking at Susan, Aaron's heart was complex. He couldn't continue to say that she should give up the baby.

Susan took his hand, and the light in her eyes was even stronger than the sun.

"Tell me I have a baby."

Aaron didn't reply. Susan got off the bed, "I'll check it myself."

Susan pressed her hand. "It's true. Don't move."

Susan was even more excited when she heard it.

Aaron held her trembling hand, "You are also good at pharmacology, you..."

"I know. Don't worry. I'll try to live longer. I'll protect myself and my baby."

"Life is yours, and so is the child. I can't make decisions for you. I respect your ideas."

Susan let go of his hand and suddenly felt she was too excited. She held a stranger's hand and said so much to him.

Aaron didn't let her take back her hand but clinched it. "Don't you remember me? You saved an injured person in a foreign country, just by the side of the road."

At that time, he was shot and nearly died by the side of the road because of a family struggle. She treated her wound urgently and sent him to the hospital.

He was in a coma at that time, his eyes were blurred, and he only remembered that her eyebrows and eyes were very beautiful.

When he woke up, she had left. He had been looking for her for a long time.

Susan's memory slowly recovered and remembered that scene.

"Is that you?"

No wonder his side face was so familiar. It was him. When he was lying on the ground, the first thing she saw was his side face.

She still remembered that she even compared him with Albert at that time.

"You saved me before. Now I'll save you."

"Susan, your company won't be destroyed, and I won't let you die."

She was a bit moved. Since her parents died, the Laura family gradually went to the bottom in her hand. No one helped her and no one understood her.

Although Albert was operating the company behind if she had the ability, why should she need him?

Now the Karl family was the only big company. How could Albert want to revive Laura's family?

"A..... Aaron, we don't know each other very well... You..."
