

Chapter 24 She Was Not That Rich

But they two were tit for tat from the beginning and ignored each other.

He also got married for the first time and understood the love for the first time. He didn't know how to bow his head. He felt that the one who bowed his head was the loser.

So he tried to force her to bow her head and force her to be soft.....

But she didn't.....

She said we could divorce.

Now, she said, she wanted nothing, just wanted to leave him.

But now he was so helpless that he didn't even know what to say to let Susan stay.

Tell her that he loves her?

It's funny and pathetic. Would she forgive him if he said he loved her?

No, no, the flames in her eyes had become ashes.

Letting her go? It seemed to be his only choice now.

Susan had been waiting for his answer. Seeing that he didn't speak for a long time, she was disappointed and said, "Albert, it turns out that you want me to die."

Albert then regained his consciousness, and the pain in his eyes showed up.

"I'll let you go."

Susan felt that the whole nerve was loose, and there were shallow blood marks on her neck.

It made Aaron worried, "Susan, get on the plane."

Susan didn't dare to put down the knife, retreated step by step, turned around, and got on the plane from the ladder.

Aaron looked at her back, "Susan, take good care of yourself."

Susan stopped, "Don't worry, I hope I'm better than anyone now."

Aaron knew that she would be fine for her children. He can be assured.

But no matter how worried he was, what could he do?

At the moment, even Albert, whom she loved, had nothing to do with her, not to mention him.....

The door of the plane closed.

There was no one in the cabin. Susan was a little confused.

The stewardess explained, "This is Mr. Aaron's plane."

This was Aaron's plane. It seemed that Aaron was ready for everything.

But he didn't expect that Albert would show up and expose everything about him. He didn't expect that she would be so determined to go alone.

No one in the world can control the unknown.

Albert couldn't, Aaron couldn't.

Her future, she controls by herself. Her child, she protects by herself.

From now on, all her faith is to live.

So Aaron, although I am grateful, I can't be with you.

As for Albert, I will disappear from your life.

Susan sat on the seat, gently stroked her belly, and silently said to the child, "Thanks for your coming, so I'm no longer alone."

The plane glided across the sky.

The two men looked at the plane simultaneously, in different moods.

Albert laughed mockingly. How ironic. When he confessed that he loved her, it was such an irreparable moment.

A policeman came, "Mr. Aaron, please come with us."

Aaron was disheartened. Without saying a word, he followed the police directly.

On his way back, Albert received a call from his mother.

She was awake. Her life was no longer in danger. Tell him not to worry.

Then he planned to go to the hospital, and at this time, the phone rang again.

"Mr, Lacey wants to meet you."

Albert looked at the street lights ahead. "There's no need... Let's handle it according to the process."

"She seems to have some mental problems."

"Tell her family directly. If she needs medical treatment, I will pay for it and contact my assistant directly."

Then, he hangs up directly.

When he wanted to drive the car again, he suddenly remembered what Albert had said.

"Albert, I always know your heartlessness."

Heartless... Maybe

He never felt he was a man full of emotions.

Lacey, even though she was hateful. If it wasn't for him, how could she become like this?

But this was her choice. Everyone had a choice.

She could choose to stay away from him, but she didn't. So she should pay for it.

At this point in life, it seemed that a new track had been opened. There was neither Susan nor Lacey.

Only himself.

It started to rain.

Like her tears.

From now on, he would never see her tears, nor know who she was crying for.

Endless depression hovered around his heart.

He admitted that he was very depressed and his heart ached, but what could he do.....

He was the one to blame.

When he arrived at the hospital, he was drenched in the heavy rain for half an hour and didn't move a little.

Grandpa saw Albert in the rain by the window and hurriedly went down with an umbrella.

Albert was like a sculpture. Grandpa asked, "Albert, why are you standing in the rain? No one blames you for your mother's accident. Just be more careful in the future."

Albert seemed to have found a reason to be sad, and his tears were covered in the rain.

The thing he was most contemptuous about burst now.

Grandpa sighed, "Come on, your mother and father are waiting for you."

He didn't mention Susan. Also, when he came to the ward, no one mentioned Susan.

She was like a stranger at home, never being mentioned.

At the moment, Albert was worried again. It turned out that she was not that rich. She had nothing, not even a family.

Seeing that his mother was all right, he stayed for a while and found an excuse to leave.

After he left, Albert's mother was very worried, "What's the matter with him? I think he's in a bad mood."

Grandpa sighed, "I don't know. When I just went downstairs to pick him up, he was not only standing in the rain but crying. I don't know if it's because of Lacey. I think it's better to bail Lacey out."

Although his mother hated Lacey very much, she was also distressed to see her son like this, "What about Susan....."

"Since this marriage was determined by you, you can make them divorced. I'm afraid something will happen to Albert."

Albert's father nodded. Although Albert would confront them, he had never been like this before.
