

Chapter 29 The Ending

When Susan woke up, she found herself in a room at the seaside.

It was an early morning when the sun hadn't come out.

The whole sea was filled with a layer of fog.

Susan looked at the sleeping child in his arms and leaned against Albert's arms, "Why do we come here?"

"As you said before, you want to see the rising sun by the sea."

Well, when did she say that? She didn't even remember.....

"Susan, why didn't you tell me earlier?"

If he had known earlier, he would not have left her alone in the past three years.

Susan looked at the sea level blandly, "If I told you, then?"

"No..." he hugged her. "It's different, Susan. If I knew it, I wouldn't make trouble with you like that, I would admit I love you early..."

Susan looked at him. At the moment, he was like a helpless child.

"Hmm? Admit it early?"

When she asked, he felt his eyes sour and buried his face in her hair. "I love you far earlier than I knew."

"You didn't tell me, but you told Aaron. You've been in the same city with him for the past three years..."

His jealous tone was very light for fear of frightening her.

Susan smiled. "I never saw him, and he didn't know we were in the same city. He thought I left when I got off the plane, but I stayed here all the time."

Was this an explanation.....

They had never been so gentle. She didn't expect it to be so sinking.

If only it had been earlier.

"I'm sorry....."

He finally cried out, sadly.

When he cried, Susan's eyes suddenly turned red, "Don't cry, I'll want to cry as soon as you cry."

He had always been the king. Tears shouldn't belong to him.

"I'm sorry, Susan..... I'm sorry....."

"Don't leave me, I don't want you to leave me alone..."

Susan's tears fell silently. She wanted to promise him.

But how did she fight death? After fighting for three years, she lost finally.....

Even he said he didn't want her to leave.....

At this time, the sun rose from sea level, and the red and warm light gradually spreads all over the world.

The sea was as red as fire.

"Albert, when I die, bury me with my parents..."

He was silent and seemed unwilling to admit that she would die.

Susan looked up and smiled at him, "Don't be sad, people will die."

"Susan, say you love me, okay..."

She looked at him gently. "I love you, always."

He hugged her tightly and tears fell again, "Then don't leave me..."

She touched his face gently and was satisfied to remember his appearance at the end of her life.

Her consciousness seemed to be slowly fading, and she slowly closed her eyes.

She wanted to bow her head and kiss the child's forehead, but it was in vain.

"Take... good... care... of..."

"Him", she didn't finish, her hands fell softly.

Albert grabbed her hand and put it on his lips.

Tears surged in.

"Please, don't leave me... Susan..."

At that moment, only the child who suddenly sensed his mother's departure cried loudly.

The light of the sun was so clear and soft on her face.

The world was waking up.

And she was leaving.....

From then on, there was no Susan in his life.
She fell asleep in his arms forever.

—End of the full text—

FROM THE AUTHOR:

Thank you so much for reading my book. I do appreciate all the reads and votes. Please continue to tell your friends about this story and vote on the chapters if you haven't already. Let's take this book to another level

—
The second book: My Ex-Wife with Multiple Identities

"Go check it, what is the true identity of my wife?"

"Sir, Madam is a genius doctor, a genius racer, and a super composer!"