Chapter 151

Anna didn't keep thinking about that news. She knew that those were all made up by the paparazzi, and maybe everyone would stop talking about it after a while.

Although the paparazzi said nothing nice about her in their articles, the story they made up was just about love affairs. She knew that even if the fans were irrational, they would only complain about it for a few days.

Anna didn't think it was a big deal. She knew she should be sensible like Wayne but not uptight like John.

At the end of the afternoon, Anna went out of the office after packing her things. At that moment, she noticed that none of the people in the office had left yet.

She glanced at her watch, looked up and said, "Why haven't you all left? It's time to get off work. We're not busy recently, so you can leave in time."

Everyone let out a sigh of relief after hearing her words and then smiled as if they were relieved.

"Hey, don't be afraid. I won't make you guys work overtime." Anna said to them with a smile.

Everyone laughed. They had worked overtime last week when they were doing the quarterly statistics. So, they started to worry every time they were about to get off work, fearing that their bosses would make them work overtime again.

Anna had just left the elevator when she was stopped by Wendy, who was sitting at the front desk

"Miss Gabriel, are you leaving?" Wendy asked.

Anna stopped and looked back. When she saw how nervous Wendy was, she was surprised and asked, "Yeah. What's wrong?"

"I just texted John, and he probably forgot to tell you."

Wendy walked over to Anna in a panic. She was working the night shift on that day, so she arrived at the hotel only a few minutes ago. She had just sat at the front desk in her beige suit and hadn't even had a chance to pin on her work tag.

Anna walked out of the building alone, got into the car, and said, "Sorry, Ryan, the housekeeper has already picked them up. So, could you give me a ride back to the West Side?"

Surprised and irritated, Ryan asked, "The West Side?"

Anna was putting on her seat belt. Hearing his words, she stopped. She then said, "Ah, maybe I should take a cab. I don't want to bring you trouble."

Ryan smiled, his expression immediately returning to normal. He said, "That's okay, I don't have anything to do anyway. I'll drop you off right now."

He looked naive and innocent. After seeing his expression, no one would doubt his words, let alone Anna, who trusted him.

Anna smiled along with him and said, "Thank you. It's my fault, I went out too late. Wayne's grandfather was worried about the two kids, so he had the housekeeper wait for them earlier. He picked up the kids when he found out I hadn't arrived."

By the time they got to the West Side, it was already dark.

The security guard standing at the front door saw Anna. Then, he immediately stood up and greeted her by the passenger window, saying, "Good evening, young master, Miss Gabriel. Please wait a moment. The electronic system of the door is not working, so I'll open it for you."

Anna froze for a moment and laughed, "Young master? Oh, no, he's not Wayne."

The guard was stunned, then looked closer at the man in the car. He then smiled and said, "Sorry. It was so dark that I didn't see him clearly. I thought this gentleman was the young master. I was confused just now because I remembered that he was away on business. So, who is this one?"

"He's a friend of mine." Anna replied.

After they entered the gate, Ryan drove into the yard. He drove for five minutes down that long driveway before pulling up to the door.

"I'll wait for you right here, Anna." "Okay, thanks I'll be out soon after I pick up the kids." Anna said.

After she entered the mansion, Ryan looked out the window. His gaze became complicated as he saw the steps and the beautiful windows at the mansion's front entrance.

The thing that worried Pete the most was that Matthew couldn’t talk. Wayne had asked him to take care of Matthew, but then the incident happened to Matthew. Therefore, Pete felt guilty for so many years.
He always thought that he was the one who did not take care of the child.

After hearing Anna’s words, he also realized that what happened back then was probably not an accident

After dinner, Henry walked them out at the door of the mansion. Through the car door, he said to Anna, “Miss Gabriel, don’t worry. Although we had fired the nanny, we recorded her cell phone number. I’ll check it out later and let you know.”

“OK, thanks.” Anna nodded to him and thanked him.

The two kids sitting in the back seat were asleep on the way back.

Through the rearview mirror, Ryan saw how preoccupied Anna looked. He asked, “What are you thinking about? Are you worried that even if you find a clue, you won’t have time to check it out?”

Anna looked back, nodded and said, “Hey! How do you know what I’m thinking?”

“Oh, I just wanted to tell you that I can do it for you. I have all the time in the world. If you trust me, then leave it to me.” Ryan said calmly.

Anna froze and asked, “Huh? How are you going to do that?”

“First, I need to get information on those nannies. That way, I can find the people who were involved in that accident. I need to find out what they’re doing now and if there’s a huge hit in their bank account.
You should be clear about what I will do after that.”

Realizing that his approach was coherent and logical, Anna asked, “Ryan, did you remember something?”

Ryan laughed and said teasingly, "Yeah, I remembered a little bit. I think maybe I used to do things like this all the time. Perhaps I used to be a cop."

Anna bristled and said, "No way! You're twenty years old, and you must not have graduated yet."

Ryan didn't say anything. In the darkness, Anna couldn't see the somber expression on his face.

Ryan, sitting on the table, looked at his laptop and said, “Done.” He then looked up, turned the laptop around towards them and said, “It’s very clear.”

The monitor was facing the couch, and the bedroom behind it. The bedroom door was half-open, allowing them to see what was on the bed.

Peace immediately exclaimed, “Oh, my God! What’s all this? Whips and handcuffs? Oh my God, and the nurse’s uniform...”

As soon as Anna sat down on the couch, she couldn’t help but complain, “Gosh, you should be happy that you didn’t just go to that room. Or you would definitely throw up. That man had pungent perfume, and I almost passed out. How did Allie meet this man?”

Peace brought a chair and sat down in front of the laptop, even though she thought they were disgusting. She then took out a bag of popcorn as if she was ready for a movie.

They saw that Allie was hugged by the man when she entered the room. The man gasped and pressed his lower body against Allie’s waist. He said, “Hey, honey, you’re finally here. I haven’t seen you in days.”

Allie frowned and didn’t seem to want to make physical contact with him. She pushed him away and asked, “What’s wrong? Why are you calling me? I’ve told you not to call me these days. I’m busy.”

The man looked a little upset when she pushed him away. He said, “What have you been doing the last few days? Are you too busy flirting with Scott? I know all about it. Everyone’s been talking about you going to Scott’s office every day.”

Allie said calmly, “I was there for the news. Oh, are you jealous? You know I have a fiancé, and there’s nothing between Scott and me.”

“Ah, I don’t mind that you have a fiancé. I know that I’m the only lover you want.”

The man sat down on the couch and bragged, “If you hadn’t been my sugar mommy at the time, I would have been an actor and film movies. You know, I would have been more famous than Scott. But I didn’t because I wanted to be there for you.”

Allie then glanced at him. When she looked at him from the side, she saw that he looked almost identical to Scott, who she loved. Allie then thought of the unpleasant experiences she had had in Scott’s company that morning. Then, she had mixed feelings.

Seeming to be in a better mood, Allie sat next to him and softly coaxed him, “Come on, stop it. Don’t be angry. If I don’t care about you, I wouldn’t stay with you. Stop thinking about it. Hey. I just bought you a watch! You wanna see it?”

“Hmph! No! Allie, you buy me gifts every time you flirt with another man.” The man looked down at his fingers and refused to pay attention to her.

None of them said anything. Allie was holding onto the table tightly and shaking as if she was going to fall down in the next moment.

She was so angry and ashamed that she wanted to kill Anna.

Allie thought to herself, Anna, you b***h! How dare you film it and show them to Scott! Not only did you threaten me, but you got in the way of me getting back to Scott. God knows this is my last chance!

"Tell me, will you read it or not?" Allie gritted her teeth in silence for a long time before answering, "Yes, I will."

Anna nodded and put her flash drive into her bag. Before leaving the conference room, she said calmly, "By the way. Allie, there's one more thing you need to do. Tell Wind Media and those people you hired on the Internet to delete the posts. Otherwise, you know what I'll do to you."

Allie stood in the doorway of the conference room with her back to Anna. She was extremely angry, so she clenched her teeth very hard. After a long time, she squeezed a few words through her gritted teeth, "OK, got it."

But, Anna, I'll get back at you, Allie thought to herself.

The press conference ended well in the afternoon. Most of the netizens were so sympathetic to Allie that they were willing to take her word for it. She did what Anna wanted and explained that both she and Anna were just Scott's sisters. She thus proved that all the rumors were nonsense.

The reporters left in disappointment. They thought that the incident was a misunderstanding and not at all worthy of gossip

Scott handed Anna a glass of water and asked, "I really didn't expect this to have anything to do with her, Anna. Why would she do that?"

Anna looked at him and said, "Scott, do you really have no idea? She doesn't like me because she likes you. You only talk to me in the family, so of course she hates me."

Scott asked innocently, "She likes me? Gosh, I really didn't know that at all." "Oh, well. Besides, that toyboy of hers kinda looks like you." Anna said.

She thought, if Allie hadn't gone too far, I wouldn't have threatened her with this video. I knew that if there was a grudge between her and me, we would always be enemies. I didn't originally want to do this, but since she did this to me. I had to treat her the same way. It seems that she and I will always hate each other.

Shortly after the press conference, Wind Media released a statement. They said they would apologize to Scott and the two people involved and compensate them. Also, they said they had fired both the reporter and the editor who published the story

Anna's heart skipped a beat when she heard Wayne say the word "insignificant passers-by".

She realized that she had been "a insignificant passer-by" to him just a few months before Also, six years earlier, Matthew had been "a insignificant passer-by" to him. So maybe for Wayne, it did not make a difference whether they were around him or not.

Anna couldn't help but feel a chill down her spine and an uncontrollable shiver running down her spine at the thought.

The following day, just as Anna arrived at the hotel door, the receptionist said to her, "Miss Gabriel, a gentleman came here to see you."

Anna then saw a familiar person in the public lounge area in the lobby. She nodded at the receptionist to thank her and then walked over to him.

The man was Henry, the butler of the Wright family. Henry was dressed in a nice suit. Although he was in his sixties, he still looked energetic, just like Peter.

"Henry, hello. What brings you here?" Seeing Anna, Henry smiled and said, "Hello, ma'am. I've brought the files you asked for."

Henry then gave Anna the paper bag in his hand and lowered his voice, "We dismissed quite a few babysitters that time. You may need some time to identify who she is."

Anna took it and said, "Thank you. It's okay. I should be able to find her. Henry, why don't you have a sit in my office?"

"No, thanks. I'm leaving now. Peter just asked me to deliver something." With those words, Henry patted his suit and left the hotel.

Just as Anna was walking to the elevator, Wendy stood up from the front desk and asked curiously, "Miss Gabriel, that's housekeeper of the Wrights, right? What did he say to you?"

Anna raised the paper bag in her hand and said simply, "Oh, nothing, he's just here to drop off a few things. Focus on your work, Wendy. Oh, and you might want to fix your collar."

Karl looked at the sales clerks around him, and he could tell from their eyes that the diamond was costly. The manager remained calm because she was experienced and knew she should be professional

She asked, "What do you want that ring to look like? If you have a design in mind, you can tell us."

"Oh, I don't have too many requests. I just want it to be special and to fit her vibe." "What kind of vibe?" The clerk asked cautiously. Karl closed his eyes and thought for a moment, then said, "Hot and sexy."

The manager blinked in surprise, and then looked to Wayne, who was sitting on the side. She hoped he would say something to make her understand what Karl was talking about.

Wayne frowned and moved away, saying indifferently, "Oh, I don't know him."

Karl acted as if he hadn't heard Wayne's words. He said to the store manager, "Hey, you know what, I can give you a few pictures of her. The designer can design according to her vibe. It will be fine as long as your design can satisfy me."

The store manager was relieved and glad that Karl had given her the photos. Otherwise, she really had no idea how to describe such words to the designer. She said, "Yes, we'll do our best. Do you have any other requests?"

Karl glanced at Wayne and said, "No, I'm good. I remember that you said that you wanted them to see something." on Wayne handed the manager a picture and said, "Can you make a necklace like this?" It was a silver chain with an emerald pendant on it, and it was gleaming and shimmering. "This one?" The manager froze when she saw it.

Karl went over and took a look at the photo. Then, he said in surprise, "Hey! That's the necklace you wanted to give to Charlotte Wilson six years ago! I remember that you lost it. You want to make a new one, huh? For whom?"

Wayne looked at him meaningfully. Karl shut up sharply and whispered, "I'm sorry, I'll stop talking. I know who is this for." Karl thought to himself, Wayne and Anna are so in love, so it must be for Anna.

Karl thought for a moment and then couldn't help but say again, "Oh my God, you want to give the same two necklaces to two people? Even though you didn't give it to her, it's a little weird."

Before Wayne could say anything, the manager said, "Ah, I've seen this necklace before."

Peace deliberately acted shy and said, "You're welcome, dear." Karl thought their intimate interaction was an eyesore. However, he didn't say anything and just kept holding back. But, after a while, he finally couldn't help himself.

He asked with hostility, "Hey, Ryan, is it true that you've lost your memory? Well, even if it's true, do you think it's appropriate for you to do this? You are not working, and you're also being a freeloader all the time."

Peace rolled her eyes at Karl and said, "It's none of your business, for God's sake! Obviously, you're the one who came here to eat for free! Why are you saying that about Ryan?"

"Peace, why..."

Peace raised her hand and roared, "Shh, stop it. I don't want to argue with you today, Karl. So, shut up."

Karl was outraged.

When Anna saw that he wanted to continue arguing, she immediately interrupted and said, "All right, all right. I think you guys misunderstood something. You are all my guests, and none of you are freeloaders. I invited Ryan to dinner. He helped me out of the trouble, so I'm very grateful to him. I also invited Karl here. When I called Wayne, he happened to be there. So, I invited him to come along for dinner."

Anna's words reminded Karl of the fact. An hour ago, he had been at the jewelry store and picked out a wedding ring for Peace. He didn't expect to be here watching Peace flirting with another man. Therefore, he immediately became angrier when he realized that Peace didn't care that he was there.

"The chicken wings should be ready. Excuse me, I'll go check on them." Ryan said abruptly and then walked away. He acted as if he didn't even notice that they were fighting over him.

"I'll go with you." Peace immediately put down her fork and followed him.

Karl sat for a few seconds, and then slammed the spoon in his hand down hard on the table. After that, he walked to the kitchen as well Anna and Wayne were the only ones left at the table. Then, they looked at each other in surprise.

"Nothing's going to happen, is it?" Anna asked nervously. "Huh? Who are you worried about?"

"The boss of England branch of SG Travel Group is coming in the afternoon. She is going to personally examine the qualifications of our hotel. So, no one can make a single mistake, including the cleaning ladies and the chefs. Understand? Great! Let's go for it!"

Anna just finished a meeting in the conference room of the Carousel Hotel. Previously, the headquarters had negotiated long-term cooperation with SG, a well-known foreign tourism group. The preliminary work had been completed, and all that was left was the on-site examination. Coincidentally, the SG group had selected Anna's hotel in the draw.

Therefore, as long as the team thought the hotel was qualified, they could sign up for a long-term partnership. After that, all SG's England branch travelers would stay at the Carousel Hotel.

It was a scorching afternoon, and the hotel managers were waiting for the group to come to the entrance.

After a while, a black Bentley pulled up at the front door. Then, an assistant got off from the passenger side and opened the back seat door.

The first thing everyone saw was a pair of four-inch shiny high heels. Then, it was followed by a pair of long, slender legs.

The woman held the door and stepped out of the car. The black jumpsuit she was wearing made her look particularly tall. Her hair was delicately pinned up, with curly bangs on one side of her face. She was wearing diamond earrings from Bulgari and red lipstick, looking like a mighty and domineering woman.

Everyone looked at each other suspiciously. SG was a well-known international travel group, and Birmingham was a famous tourist city. So, no one expected that the manager of their England branch looked just in her mid-twenties. The woman was not only young, but also very pretty. So, of course, people were puzzled.

The hotel's general manager was the first to come forward and ask, "Hello. Are you Charlotte Wilson, the president of SG England?"

"Yes, it's me." The woman took off her sunglasses and smiled gracefully

"Hello, I'm Vincent Jones. We're ready for the examination. So, come on in."

Charlotte nodded and said, "Ah, that would be great. I've just been transferred back to England. I know that the Carousel Group is well known and classy. But, this is my first contract since I took over this position. So, I want to make sure my clients can get the best service. Please don't mind if I'm being picky."

"No, we won't. Please come in." Vincent said.

"All right. Thank you. You're the best!" Charlotte said with a smile.

After taking her shoes off, Charlotte leaned back on the couch. She was giggling the whole time when she was talking. But when she thought of something, she suddenly stopped laughing.

She immediately asked earnestly, "Hey, Karl, I remember that you told me earlier that Wayne has a girlfriend. Is she the lobby manager named Anna Gabriel?"

"Oh, nothing. I happened to see her at the hotel today. She's pretty gorgeous, I thought. Well, I have to hang up now, sorry. I'll take you to dinner in a few days, okay?"

After Charlotte hung up the phone, she put the phone aside. Then, she sat down on the sofa and wrapped her hands around her legs. She leaned back on the cushion and then began to ponder.

She thought to herself, the woman I saw this morning is Wayne's girlfriend. I think she is young and pretty. But she's not as beautiful as me. Also, I feel that she is a push-over and has nothing special. I thought Wayne did not like that kind of woman. Did Wayne make a random woman his girlfriend because he thought that he had to get married? Well, I don't care what kind of woman she is. As long as she is Wayne's girlfriend, she is my rival in love.

Charlotte laughed contemptuously. She came back to England for one purpose only, to win back Wayne and get back together with him.

Anna was working as usual at noon the next day. As she cruised through the lobby, she saw a familiar car pull up in front of the hotel. And her eyes immediately lit up, and then she quickly walked over to the door. However, she had barely taken a few steps when she saw two people step out of the car.

They were Wayne and Charlotte.

"I think you need to buy me lunch, Wayne. You see, I got you such a big order! You know, I did it just for you. There will be a lot of guests staying in your hotel, whether it's low or high season for tourism."

"Oh, thank you. What do you want to eat?"

"I really want to eat the local food. I've been in France for so long, and I've never had British food."

Just as they were talking, they both saw Anna, who was in front of them looking at them.
