Chapter 181

181 Did You Treat Him Fairly? 181 Did You Treat Him Fairly?

“I know how the hotel treated you this time. So, are you going to work for them?” Randal asked playfully.

Anna frowned and felt there was a deep void in her heart.

She knew that the Carousel Hotel had really treated her badly in handling the fire. It was the employees of the security department that should have been responsible for the fire, not Anna, the lobby manager. However, Anna was the only one who was suspended.

However, Anna knew who told them to do this.

Wayne did this because he didn't want me to leave. He was using his power to get back our personal grudge. So, if Randal invited me to work at his company, I could certainly agree. And, I have the right to do so.

Anna thought to herself.

“Well, then what kind of job would you ask me to do? Are you doing this because you value my ability to work? If you are sympathizing with me, or because you like Scott, then I'm sorry, I won't accept your favor.”

Scott looked extremely embarrassed when he heard the last word.

“Oh, I certainly think you're capable. Anna, I think you are qualified for a better position. I have no idea why Wayne only made you a lobby manager.” Randal said firmly, as if he had already decided to let Anna work in his company.

“Well, like what?”

“How about being my executive secretary?”

Before Anna could say anything, Scott said reluctantly, “No way! Randal, she can't be your secretary. Forget it! Anna, don't say yes to him. You know, he's not a nice guy.”

When Anna saw how anxious Scott was, she felt helpless. She then looked at Randal and said, “Oh, thank you for your kind proposal, Randal. But, I don't think I can work for you. You see, Scott knew you long before I did. But, he told me that you're not a nice person.”

Randal didn't seem to want to argue any more. He raised his eyebrows slightly and said, "Well, it looks like you don't want to leave the Carousel Group. So, I'm not going to persuade you anymore. If you change your mind, you can call me."

"Oh no, it's not like that. I can certainly leave Carousel. But, I just think that your company may not be the one for me. So, I'll find

Anna had mixed feelings when she realized that Peace had just been sarcastic. She felt that Peace meant that she was a scheming woman and was getting a lot of benefits from hiding the secret from Wayne. However, she was the only one that knew she was doing it because she wanted her kids to get along well with each other.

Then, Anna also began to doubt herself. She even felt a little uneasy when she met the two children at the Wrights’ house in the afternoon. When she heard Peter compliment her on how well she treated Matthew, she even blushed.

Matthew is my own son, so surely, /’ll be good to him. Anna thought to herself.

After lunch, Tammy and Matthew rested in Anna's arms. Tammy couldn't stop talking and looked like she enjoyed the environment of the house.

"Mommy, you haven't come here with Mr. Wright for a long time. What happened?" Tammy suddenly said.

"Oh, he's very busy. An accident happened in the hotel, so he's got a lot to deal with."

"But why aren't you going to work?"

"Because I've been on vacation lately, honey. Then, I can spend more time with you two. Are you glad about this?"

"Of course!"

Speaking of that fire, Anna turned her head and rested her chin against Matthew's head.

She said, "Matthew, honey, I'm so sorry. You were in the freezer that day, so I didn't see you. I'm really sorry."

Matthew had been quietly listening to the two of them. After Anna said this, Matthew immediately stood up and took his drawing board. He then wrote, "it's okay! I know that if you saw me, you would definitely take me out."

Seeing how cute and sensible Matthew was, Anna couldn't help but gently rub his head with relief and said, "Matthew, you're a good boy. You know, I'll never leave you behind."

Matthew immediately wrote on the drawing board again, "Really???"

He showed a nervous expression and had written three question marks. He looked as if he really didn't believe that Anna would

"Madam, please watch your step. There's a threshold here." The maid said.

After hearing her words, Anna immediately put her hand on the door frame. She asked, "By the way, where are the kids? It's too crowded here, and I think you should take care of them."

"Don't worry, I've sent them back to their rooms. Besides, there are nannies to take care of them. It's cold now, you need to go back to your room to warm yourself up."

"I'm fine, thanks. I'll stay here to clear my head."

Anna pulled her hand out of the maid's hand, waved it casually, and asked her to leave.

Afterwards, she stood alone under the porch. The cool evening breeze blew on her and made her smell the roses. In the breeze, Anna felt that she was sober a little.

Then, she sat down by the beautiful stone table in the courtyard.

"Anna, are you all right?" A man asked.

Hearing that, Anna froze and then looked at the man.

The man was in a grey suit and he was at about the same age as Wayne.

At that moment, Anna remembered that this man was the first one to stand up and congratulate her during dinner. Anna remembered that Henry had introduced him to her as Wayne's cousin.

"I'm fine, thanks." She replied. She then did her best to pretend she was sober. Knowing that the Wrights were a decent family, Anna decided that she couldn't act rude.

Anna noticed that the man was very handsome and cute. When the man heard her answer, he immediately came out from the porch.

Then, he put a plastic bottle on the table and said, "Hi, I'm Wayne's cousin. Here are some pills. You must have drunk a lot of wine just now, right? if you take one, you won't feel dizzy. I noticed that you were walking a little wobbly when you left just now. I was afraid something would happen to you, so I followed you. I hope that I didn't scare you."

Gee! But you did scare me! If you don't want to be abrupt, then why don't you just leave me alone?
Anna thought to herself.

She then nodded politely but

Anna had been very aloof towards him in the last few days. Finally, Wayne couldn't keep his cool for much longer.

It was the first time that he found himself totally out of control.

Instead of remaining calm and composed, he grew enraged and made rough love to her. Even though he knew it would make Anna disappointed and harm their relationship.

Wayne panicked after they had sex because he noticed how upset and desperate Anna looked.

Just as he was pulling the quilt over her, he heard her say dully, "is that what you want? Wayne, are you happy now?"

Wayne's hand trembled as he held the corner of the quilt. He hung his hand in the air for a long time before attempting to place it on her shoulder.

"Don't touch me! Go away!" she snarled as Wayne's palm touched her face.

Anna said it with her teeth clenched. Her face was pale, as if she was exhausted. She trusted Wayne so much that she believed he was her soul mate and the love of her life. So, she never imagined that Wayne would do something like this to her.

Hearing that, Wayne looked a little chagrined. He remained silent for a long time before leaving the room without saying anything,

But he realized that there was nothing he could do about it since it had already happened. There were a lot of problems between them, and explanations alone would not solve them. Wayne realized that he had done an awful and terribly wrong thing. However, he was unable to say anything to apologize to Anna.

The room fell silent as soon as he walked out the door.

The light in the living room was dim. And the bedroom door was half-open. Anna could see the light coming in from outside, which

His soft sobs came from under heartbroken.

"Matthew is your brother."

The dim streetlight shone on Anna as she cried aloud while holding Tammy tightly.

Three days later, Anna went to the HR office again to turn in her resignation letter.

The employee looked at Anna in surprise and said, "I'm sorry, Miss Gabriel. But we can't let you resign. As you know, you are now suspended from work. So, you have to wait for the hotel..."

"I'll sue the company if they won't let me go."

Anna simply cut her off. The employee couldn't help but be frightened by Anna's expressionless face.

"No matter what you will say, this is my resignation letter. Since I have given it to you, I am resigning, whether you allow it or not."

As soon as she finished, Anna walked out of the room without saying a word.

The employee could do nothing but stare blankly at her back.

“Anna, Is this the end? You really don’t want to work here anymore?” Peace asked Anna after she got into the car.

Anna buckled her seat belt and raised her eyebrows. She replied, “I sent out my resume to a few companies last night, and I already have two interviews for next week. Let’s go, Peace. Oh, you know what we should do? We should celebrate it! I will be free for a whole month before I get my next job. So, I can have dinner and hang out with you these days.”

Peace asked with concern, “Really? Are you sure you can find a new job that quickly? Anna, don’t get me wrong, but you just quit without Wayne’s approval. So, I’m worried that other companies won’t dare to hire you.”

“Don’t worry, honey. It’s not like he owns all the hotels in Birmingham. Even if I can’t get a job, I can still make a living. Anyway, I’ve got it all figured out.”

Peace slowed the car down a bit and asked, “Oh? Anna, what are you going to do?”

“Oh, I’m sorry, I can’t tell you right now. But I’ll let you know when I’m ready.”

Peace smiled and looked relieved. She said, “Really? Oh, that’s great! So, you have a plan for your future. If I had known, I wouldn’t have felt worried about you.”

But, in fact, Anna was from a wealthy family. So, it didn’t matter if she had a job or not. All she had to do was get her father to give her money. Besides, since she had made up with her relatives on her mother’s side, they would also support her. So, she could definitely “Only Anna can change you”, echoed in Wayne’s head.

Karl gradually calmed down and then sat back on his chair. He glared coldly at Wayne and said, “Only Anna broke all your boundaries and changed your principles, and she even made you doubt yourself. She's the first gray area you've encountered in your life. Just admit it, Wayne, you can't live without her anymore."

Wayne frowned. Karl had just said exactly what he was thinking, making him feel uncomfortable. So he glared at Karl and said coldly, "Stop staying in my company and get your ass back to yours."

Then, he left the conference room straight away.

Karl rubbed his chin and smiled teasingly, thinking, Wayne is so stubborn!

Wayne had too much of a smooth life over the past thirty years. Even though his parents hadn't gotten along, it hadn't done him much harm. He was always the coolest kid in school. However, After his father's death, he lost the only tenderness and joy he had.

At Wayne's father's funeral, Wayne's mother finally made a change. She decided to never leave home again and stop chasing her so-called dreams and freedom, and to just take care of him.

However, Wayne was calmer than anyone else at that point. He told her in front of the entire Wright family, "How much money do you want? Go to the finance department and get your money. After that, don't ever show up in front of me again in your life."

Wayne was such a ruthless man. But, he had compromised with Anna many times.

Karl, as a bystander, knew better than even Wayne what he had done.

Afterward, he called Peace. He said to her gently, "Hey, baby. When are you available? Let's go camping! I've got everything ready, I saw the weather forecast, and it will be nice lately."

Peace stayed as calm as she could and said, "Oh, let's just wait a little longer. Anna's not in the mood these days, I'm afraid."

"What's wrong?" Karl asked and sat up straight. At that moment, his instincts told him that something was wrong.

After a brief period of silence, Peace said, "Something's happened to Anna's father."

Anna's father, Frank, suddenly fell seriously ill in the morning and was taken to the hospital. He still hadn't come out of the operating room at that time.

Allie froze as Anna hit her, and it took her a long time to come back to her senses. When she looked up, everyone saw a clear red fingerprint on the left side of her face.

She trembled and covered her face, staring at Anna as if she couldn't believe that she would do that. She said, “How dare you hit me, Anna!”

“I slapped you for Dad! Dad is still in the operating room, for God's sake! When Dad wakes up, I hope you'll apologize to him.”

Allie's heart thudded, and she bit her lower lip. She remembered that she had just gotten so angry that she had accidentally said that Dad was going to die.

She didn't expect Anna to remember that and won't let it go.

“We're in a hospital now, and the operating room is right here! If you want to cry and make a scene, get out and fool yourself wherever you want. But, if you want to stay, just shut the fackup!” Anna said. Her voice was low, but her every word was very firm and assertive.

Allie looked furious. She tried to break free of Shirley's grip and argue with Anna.

At that moment, Peace, who had been silent, said indifferently, ‘Allie, didn't Anna's slap wake you up? You'd better shut the hell up before security comes. If you keep shouting and disturbing the operation, I might hit you. But even if that happens, the police won't blame me.”

“You...”

“Allie, it's okay, stop it.”

Shirley immediately shielded her daughter behind her. Although she looked embarrassed, she apologized, “I'm sorry, Allie was so upset just now. So, she said what she shouldn't have said. Well, we certainly hope that Frank will wake up soon. We're going to take a seat over there, and we won't say anything anymore.”

Shirley was aware that this was a critical moment in determining her and her daughter's fate later. So, they couldn't leave there no matter what. She had to stay here with her daughter even if Anna would humiliate them.

Anna glanced at them indifferently. She just sat down again without saying anything.

A while later, the doctors and nurses had dispersed the onlookers.

And the hallway was quiet again.

Everyone in the hallway could hear the clock ticking, as if it slowed their heartbeat.

"She didn't even call us once. You know, at that time, Anna didn't graduate from college and didn't have a job. But, she was living very comfortably there. So, you can imagine why." Allie said viciously.

Wayne became discontent. He asked, "So, why should I believe you?"

"Oh, of course you may not believe me. But you can absolutely check this thing out yourself. She was a medical student at a good university, so she could have had a perfect job and a promising future. But why did she leave in such a hurry? Yet, if she was doing so well in America, why did she come back? Well, I guess it was because the person who gave her money there broke up with her. She didn't have any money, so she came back here to ask us for money. Wayne, she's not as perfect and noble as you think."

Wayne stood up, straightened his cuffs, and said coldly, "What do you mean by that? I get it. Maybe, you don't want me to help her. So, you can get all the money of your family. I know what you want to do, and I won't listen to your bullshit anymore. You've already wasted ten minutes of my life, and that's enough."

He then walked away.

Looking at Wayne's back, Allie's expression was extremely embarrassed. After a while, she finally came back to her senses. She sneered and thought, Wayne would definitely look into that after listening to my words. Then, he would find out that I was telling the truth.

It was true that Anna was pregnant at that time, and the proof was Tammy, a five-year girl. It was also true that she went to America without telling anyone why, and the whole Gabriel family knew about it. Allie checked whether Anna depended on any man in America, but she couldn't find anything because Anna's profile had been revised. However, she knew she could solve everything with money and know everything through the Internet.

Allie thought, As soon as Wayne finds out about Jasper Thomas, he would know everything. Although it's a little difficult for me to get my dad's money, I will definitely get it all.

Frank was in a coma for a week before he woke up. At that time, the hospital had moved him to a general ward.

Since Anna had quit her job, she had nothing to do. So, she visited Frank every day at the hospital. Whenever Tammy didn't need to go to swimming lessons on weekends, she would bring her there, too.

"Come here, honey, let me see you." Frank waved toward Tammy, looking very amiable.

Anna was peeling an apple at that moment. She handed Tammy a slice of apple and said, "Honey, give this to your grandpa."

Tammy smiled and nodded. She walked to Frank with that slice of apple, and said in a sweet voice, "Grandpa, have some apple. It's

There was a resume attached, and it belonged to a man called Jasper Thomas.

He graduated from Yale University and became a famous designer. Also, it only took him three years to take his startup clothing company public. Later, he was the head of a Fortune 500 listed group. It was an impressive resume.

Even Wayne had to admit that this man was very outstanding. But, what upset Wayne was that Anna and Jasper were together before Jasper became successful. They married in the United States on Valentine's Day four years ago.

Wayne couldn't find any other reason why she married this man except the fact that they loved each other.

And, to this day, they hadn't divorced.

The room was terribly quiet, and Wayne could hear the water dripping from the bathroom faucet.

After a long time, there was a loud "bang" in the room. The large computer smashed on the floor with a huge noise.

Immediately afterwards, the computer was covered by various dark-coloured folders and thick books. The red wine glass was smashed on the wall, leaving a blood-red mark there. The broken pieces of the glass fell in the corner and shone a cold, saint light.

The whole study turned into ruin in just a few seconds.

A maid came immediately after hearing the sound. When she stood in the doorway and saw the scene, her face turned pale with fear.

She said, "Sir, you..."

"Get out."

"But, sir, your hand..."

"Get out!!!"

190 Say It again, If You Dare

It had been raining heavily for several days in a row, and the rain washed the whole city clean. So, in the morning after the rain, even the air was refreshing and light. Unfortunately, it only lasted a short time. It was noon soon after the sun rose. After that, the city was immersed once more in the endless slumber of summer.

Karl locked himself in his house for several days. Every day, the maid would go to his house to clean it. By the fifth day, she finally couldn't stand the foul smell coming from the bedroom anymore. So, she called Madison Xavier, Karl's sister.

"Karl, hey!" Madison walked straight inside the house after she opened the door.

Karl lived in a two-flat apartment. The door on the second floor was sealed to make it an open bedroom, while the first floor was the living room. Madison was there when the house was in construction. As she hoped, the apartment was elegant and pretty in a refreshing way.

When Madison saw the neat doorway, she praised in her heart that the maid had really worked hard. She'd just gotten downstairs and caught a whiff of something foul. She covered her nose and shouted downstairs, "Karl, don't you tell me you s't the room! It f*g stinks! Do you have monkeys in your house?"

However, no one responded to her.

Madison hesitated for a moment. She finally overcame the discomfort and nausea she felt and took the first step downstairs. The first floor seemed like a dump to her, with drinks, snacks, and other things strewn about on a coffee table covered in takeout boxes.

"St! Are you fg playing dead? I already know you can call for takeout."

Madison then got angry. She pulled the quilt with one hand and picked up a take-out box on the table with the other and then said,

"Damn, do you believe I'll put this on your head? I'm so damn busy..."

Before Madison could finish her sentence, she saw that the box had not been unpacked. Then, her expression immediately changed.

She asked, "Karl, you haven't eaten these days?"

She found that none of the takeaway boxes piled up on the coffee table had been opened.

what alarmed her even more was that the person under the covers hadn't moved at all, lifted the entire cover. Then, she froze in surprise, staring at the toy out in anger and threw it on the
