

Night Stand 27

Chapter 27

"Who is Tammy Gabriel?" Ada blurted out the question.

Wayne glanced at her and answered indifferently, "The daughter of one of the employees."

"Why do you need to read the medical record of an employee's daughter? Which employee?"

On hearing Ada's words, Wayne closed the documents he was reading and put it on that medical record. He asked in a tone that brooked no argument, "Do I need to tell you each and every thing that I do?"

Ada looked stunned, "No, I didn't mean that. It's just a casual question."

"You have too many questions." Wayne said impatiently, "I still have a lot of things to do. We will have dinner with grandpa. We can directly go there. I'll arrive on time."

He was suggesting that she should leave now.

Ada immediately regretted that she had asked too many questions without thinking. She wanted to say something to make Wayne feel better, but he still looked very impatient, so she found an excuse and left the office. However, before she left, she somehow repeated "Tammy Gabriel" in her heart.

"Wayne took the initiative to help you get into the kindergarten?"

In the house of the Wright family, the old man was holding the phone and said energetically, "He has already tried to help your mom. It's faster than I expected. It seems that our plan works well."

The voice on the end of the phone was very childish, "Grandpa, thank you for telling me Uncle Wright's location. Otherwise, I couldn't let mommy and Uncle Wright run into each other in the restaurant."

"I think that's because your mommy is really outstanding and special. There are few women that Wayne is concerned for."

"So you mean that mommy stands a chance of marrying Uncle Wright?" "Not a chance. Many chances."
