

Night Stand 38

Falling in Love With A One-Night Stand

Chapter 38

Wayne looked at Matthew's pale face and realized that Matthew was looking at him with bitterness. Regretted, he secretly drew a sigh and asked Matthew carefully, "Do you blame me for not taking care of you?"

Wayne didn't respond to him and leaned into Anna's arms, with his left hand tightly gripping Anna's clothes.

Anna found that Wayne looked a little frustrated. She was kind of sorry for him and had to console him reluctantly, "Maybe he was scared last night. Give him some time to calm down and he'll be alright." You don't even care about your son. It's reasonable that he is closer to other people than to you. What a normal thing!

As they stayed silent in awkwardness, Tammy suddenly rolled her eyes and pulled Wayne's sleeve. She said in a cute way, "Uncle Wright, I can't pass this level. Can you help me?"

Wayne slowly stopped frowning when he was distracted by Tammy. He turned to her, "Which level?"

"Here. Here. I can't beat the boss."

The situation was lightened up. Anna rubbed Matthew's fluffy head and said in a low voice, "Matthew, are you blaming your father because you fell down the stairs?"

The little boy shook his head and looked up at Anna with sadness in his eyes. "Then why?" Anna was confused.

Matthew's dislocated arm couldn't move flexibly. He tried to gesticulate but still couldn't raise his arm, tears in his eyes.

"Do you want to write?" Anna asked him. Matthew quickly nodded.

"Hold on." She took out a notebook and a pen from her purse and gave them to Matthew. He held the pen with his left hand. Anna recognized the words from his crooked handwriting, which said, "I don't want daddy to marry another woman."
