

Night Stand 67

Falling in Love With A One-Night Stand

Chapter 67

"By the way, you've known each other, right?" Anna asked as she looked at Wayne and then at Scott.

"Do you want me to introduce you to each other again?"

"No, thanks," Wayne said with a hint of jealousy in his tone while looking at Scott with a meaningful look. "Your future boyfriend has introduced himself to me just now."

Anna was stunned. She turned around, glared at Scott, and asked, "What did you say to him? Don't talk nonsense anymore."

Frowning, Scott was dissatisfied when hearing her words but only dared to mutter under his breath, "It was not nonsense. I was telling the truth."

"This is my younger brother," Anna explained to Wayne, "He is a violinist. But now he is jobless."

"So you have to support him now," Wayne said and cast a scornful glance at Scott.

"I don't need Anna to support me. I just live here temporarily, and I will get a job soon," Scott retorted and glared back.

"I hope so," Anna glanced at him and said helplessly. "I'm going to the kitchen to prepare lunch. You guys feel free to talk."

When Scott was about to explain that he was not penniless and could earn his living, Wayne had gone into the kitchen with the food bags on the ground.

"What are you doing?" Anna caught up with him. "I'll help you with cooking," Wayne said naturally. Then the two of them entered the kitchen one after the other.

Scott stood there in a daze for a few seconds before he came to himself. Then he frowned and walked quickly toward the kitchen too. "I'll help you too."

"The kitchen is not big enough. You don't have to help me here. Go play with Tammy," Anna said and then closed the glass door of the kitchen.

Scott was a little annoyed. "Don't always treat me as a child."

After he knocked at the door for a long time, Anna finally opened the door and stuffed a bag of bean sprouts into his arms. "Okay. Then as an adult, you may help me trim them."
