Never Late, Never Away Chapter 2135 - 2136

Never Late, Never Away Chapter 2135

Things weren't supposed to turn out this way. I merely wanted to find that manufacturing company's boss through his daughter, then communicate with him about our collaboration. How did the situation escalate to this point instead?

"Larry, are you okay?" Caspian barged in right then, concern written on his face.

"I'm fine. Just a little tired. Do you have any news for me?" Larry raised his head, slightly bleary-eyed.

"Yes. It's about that foreign manufacturing company. The boss is currently on vacation. I haven't been able to find out where exactly, but they did mention something about the sea..."

Larry bolted up from his seat.

Good. As long as there's news, there's hope. Be it on sea or land, every vacation has an itinerary. Someone definitely has access to it. They're only unwilling to disclose that information. It looks like I'll have to take matters into my own hands.

"Got it. Book a flight for me," Larry ordered.

I'll get an audience with that foreign manufacturer, no matter what it takes.

"By the way, I saw Ms. Zimmer earlier," Caspian began, fishing for information.

"Yes, she came and left," came Larry's nonchalant answer, which got Caspian frowning slightly.

And? What did she say and do? That was Caspian's real concern.

"Larry, don't you plan to give up on the Zimmer manufacturing company?"

In truth, Larry had long since wanted to do so, but before successfully forming a partnership with the foreign manufacturer, he couldn't cut off all ties with the Zimmer manufacturing company. Even though he knew it was pointless of him to hold on.

"It's fine. Leave it for now. Our focus should be on that foreign manufacturer," Larry answered.

Caspian finally breathed a sigh of relief. It was too late to salvage his relationship with Nancy, so he didn't wish for anything to come in between Larry and Joan again.

"Have you looked into it?" Tucked in a corner, a woman exuded a dangerous aura as she glowered at the man across her.

The man handed a paper bag to Jessica, saying, "Don't worry, miss. All the information is here. You know you can trust me."

"Good. This is your reward. Don't breathe a word about this to anyone." The man shuddered slightly at her menacing tone.

"So... This is Joan Watts. I have to admit, she's really pretty." In the living room, Jessica flipped through the documents in her hands, mumbling to herself.

Meanwhile, the woman she had investigated was trimming some branches in Delilah's garden.

"You must be tired, Joan. Why don't you take a break?" Delilah wiped the sweat off her brow and urged the woman not far away.

"It's fine. I'm not tired at all. I can't believe they suggested offering potted plants as gifts to the customers in conjunction with the event at the supermarket. What were they thinking?" Joan grumbled under her breath.

It was the same every year, so Delilah had already grown accustomed to it. Everyone in the village liked plants very much. Meanwhile, Delilah treated her garden as a sacred land, forbidding outsiders from trespassing.

Hence, they took advantage of the supermarket's event to put in a request to the department leaders, proposing to give small potted plants as gifts. Such a proposal would surely increase the supermarket's profits. Being people-oriented, the department leaders naturally approved their request.

"How's it going? Almost done with the trimming?" Dustin asked loudly just as he pushed the door open.

At the sight of this man, a trace of discontent surged in Joan's heart.

"It's all your fault. If you didn't give your consent, Ms. Young wouldn't have to sacrifice so many plants of hers."

Dustin froze for a moment but swiftly regained his composure.

"It's not like I had much of a choice. The customers put in a request. I couldn't refuse them, could I?" Dustin shrugged his shoulders, displaying a helpless look.

"It's alright. I'm already used to this anyway. Besides, these potted plants were meant to be given away. I never allowed the others to come into the garden because I was afraid they didn't know how to appreciate the plants. Seeing as they're so eager now, I'm sure they'll take good care of these potted plants. Don't worry, Joan," Delilah waved a hand and reassured.

Suddenly, a knock on the door came before someone called out from outside, "Excuse me, is Joan Watts here?"

Joan furrowed her brows at the unfamiliar voice before making her way to the door.

"You are?" She peered suspiciously at the well-dressed woman in front of her.

"Hi, my name is Jessica Zimmer. I'm a close friend of Larry's."

Is it really that simple? Joan scrutinized the woman as doubt crept into her heart. If she's really just a friend of his, why would she come all the way here?

Something doesn't seem right. There must be something going on between this woman and Larry.

"How may I help you?" Joan tilted her head curiously at the woman, a trace of wariness gleaming in her eyes.

A cautious woman, I see. Jessica sneered. Too bad for her because one way or another, I'm going to make Larry mine! So what if she's his wife? I always get what I want.

Jessica forced her tone to stay polite as she asked, "Well, I actually want to talk to you about something. Is that alright?"

There was basically nothing to talk about between two women who didn't know each other unless it was about a man. Besides this, Joan couldn't think of anything else.

"Sorry, but I'm quite busy now. I don't have time for a chat," she rejected bluntly.

She didn't want to waste time on insignificant people, nor did she want to hear unpleasant news regarding Larry.

"Really? Aren't you the least bit concerned about your husband's matters? I heard Norton Corporation has been facing a huge crisis recently. If it's not resolved, the company will shut down soon." Jessica casually picked her nails, feigning disdain.

She was actually a little bit nervous on the inside. After all, this was the first time she had gone as far as approaching a man's family.

"Fine. Give me a moment while I get changed." With that, Joan went over to Delilah.

Leaning down, she whispered to Delilah, "Ms. Young, I'm going out for a while. I have some matters to handle."

Delilah looked at Joan, then at Jessica who was just a distance away. For some reason, the woman felt slightly unsettled.

"What's wrong? Is she causing you trouble? Is it because of Larry? Joan, no matter what happens, you will always have our support. You just need to follow your heart," Delilah replied firmly while patting Joan's shoulder.

At present, everything was uncertain. Hence, before she verified the relationship between Larry and Jessica, she would refrain from acting rashly. However, she had a feeling that this woman wouldn't give up on Larry without a fight.

"Alright, I know. I'm leaving now. Dustin, help Ms. Young trim the plants." Joan passed the tool in her hand to the man standing nearby.

The restaurant was relatively quiet. Perhaps due to the rainy day, there were very few patrons. Even the music lost its former elegance and turned somber instead.

"Ms. Zimmer, did my husband upset you in any way?" Joan went straight to the point.

Though, I have a feeling that she's the one who's been clinging to him and not the other way around. Joan clenched her fists under the table in an attempt to remain calm.

How can this woman be so calm? Shouldn't she be afraid? Jessica sipped on her coffee to hide her surprise. It seems like she has quite a strong mentality. I guess I shouldn't be surprised. This is the woman Larry fell for after all.

"Well, you see. My father is Norton Corporation's biggest manufacturer. He's been working with Mr. Norton for many years. A while ago, my father terminated their contract for some reason. No one knows where he is now, and Mr. Norton seems to be very desperate to continue collaborating with my father." Jessica paused abruptly after that sentence.

Joan raised an eyebrow. And? What's she trying to say? Is she trying to imply that Norton Corporation won't be able to continue operating without her family?

How absurd. There are so many manufacturing companies in the world. I doubt her father's manufacturing company is the best. As far as I know, Larry has only been keeping in touch with the Zimmer family as a precaution, when in fact, he's been searching for a bigger business partner at the same time.
