Never Late, Never Away Chapter 2405 - 2407

Never Late, Never Away Chapter 2405

"Ms. Young, why are you doing this?" Joan hissed.

Gabriella was not just anyone. She was vicious, sly and did everything she could to reach her goal. Joan could not be bothered to waste her time on someone like that. Furthermore, they had nothing to do with each other anymore.

"Well, this could be the chance to patch up your relationship with her. Who knows, she might never make your life difficult again in the future after getting along with you now," Delilah reasoned.

However, Joan was sure that such an outcome was too idealistic.

Gabriella was not like them. Even if someone managed to touch her heart for a split second, she would forget about it as soon as there were better offerings elsewhere.

At least Caiden had not come to look for Joan, and Jake had been lying low. Therefore, Joan felt more at ease. Yet, she did not know that complications would occur later on.

Days had passed since. "Ms. Young, I'll head to the mall now!" Joan informed the older lady.

"Sure. Please be careful on the way there," Delilah acknowledged.

Since Larry had been rather busy at Norton Corporation, and Nancy had been occupied with her babysitting duties, Joan chose to head to the mall alone.

The streets were as lively as ever and were bustling with people.

As she headed there, she saw many office workers among the crowd. It seemed like they were rushing elsewhere, but there was a hint of joy on their faces. Is that happiness from the thought of heading home? Otherwise, do they have plans to go for a sweet date after work?

How nice. It seems like nothing has changed. Soon, Joan reached the mall.

"Mrs. Norton, it's been a while. What do you need? Do you want to get a tie for Mr. Norton? We have a new design that just came in today," the staff at the shop pointed to a shelf.

Hearing the staff's suggestion, Joan slowly walked towards the shelves filled with branded goods.

Hmm, Larry does need a new tie. Holding up a blue tie, she studied it.

Nope. I think black will be more suitable for him.

"Excuse me, could you bring me a shirt?" Joan requested.

Although she was no longer married to Larry, she was already used to shopping for his clothes.

After a long time at the mall, she finally left.

It was dark outside, and she felt a light breeze against her skin, but she did not feel cold.

"Joan!" As she was about to leave for home, she heard a familiar voice calling her name.

Instantly, everyone turned their attention towards her.

She saw several balloons before her and petals falling from the sky, emitting a fragrant floral scent. A toy airplane flew towards her and circled her head.

Next, Caiden emerged from the crowd and walked towards her. With a tap on his phone screen, the toy hovering in the air landed on his hand.

Then, he knelt on one knee and pulled out a ring from the toy airplane. He held it up towards the woman standing in front of him.

Joan softly gasped. What is he doing? Is he trying to propose to me? How is this acceptable?

Embarrassed, Joan fussed, "Caiden, get up quickly!"

"Joan, will you marry me?" Ignoring her complaints, he proposed.

"Caiden, you'd better get up this instant! There are so many people here. Aren't you embarrassed?" Joan grumbled as she tugged on the man's arm.

"I'll only stand up if you say 'yes' and allow me to put this ring on your finger. Otherwise, I will kneel here forever," Caiden insisted.

Is he crazy? I've already rejected him, yet he doesn't want to let me go! She felt so anxious that tears were forming in her eyes in desperation.

"Caiden, if you don't stand up, I will leave first. I don't care how long you'll have to kneel here." With that, Joan turned to leave.

"Joan! Marry me!" The man yelled relentlessly.

"Marry him! Accept him!" the passersby cheered passionately around them.

Who the hell are these people? Can't they tell how uncomfortable and embarrassed I feel?

"Are you not going to leave?" she glared at the man on his knees before she spat, "Fine! I'll leave then!"

"What is going on? The lady doesn't seem happy," someone from the crowd commented.

Another one responded, "I don't know why she's acting like that. That guy is so romantic, and she should feel blessed."

"Women these days have a problem. They don't know how to cherish good men."

"Joan!" Caiden grabbed her arm, unwilling to let her go.

"Can't you please give me a chance? I really like you," he pleaded.

"Say 'yes' to him!" The crowd chanted repeatedly.

"Caiden, how many times do I have to repeat myself? Why can't it get through to you? You and I are merely friends and we can never be lovers, much less a married couple. Why are you so insistent? Are you trying to drive me insane?" Joan did not hold back and roared at him.

However, the man was not going to give up easily. "But you won't even give me a chance, so how do you know we are not compatible with each other? We can try it out by spending more time together. I'm sure there will be a day where you'll fall in love with me. After all, we can nurture feeling for each other over time."

He might be right, but she could no longer make space in her heart for any men other than Larry anymore. If not because of that, why would she fall out with Dustin?

"Forget it. I don't want to reason with you. I'll get going."

Without hesitation, she flung his arm away and walked off.

"Ah!" She heard a sharp scream from behind her, and she stopped in her tracks immediately.

"Hey, wake up! What happened?"

"Mister, are you alright?"

"Send him to the hospital now!" Hearing the commotion, Joan quickly turned on her heels and ran back to the man who was now unconscious.

"Caiden, wake up! Please don't scare me!" she hollered while slapping Caiden's face.

"Please call the ambulance!"

In the hospital, Caiden was lying on the bed with his eyes closed. Connected to an IV drip, he looked dishevelled and haggard.

"Doctor, how is he? Is he okay?" Joan anxiously asked.

"Everything seems fine. He is just worn out and needs a good rest," the doctor reported.

"Uh..." The patient turned on his side and watched the woman standing by the door.

She hasn't left. Turning his head towards the window, Caiden looked lost.

Joan did not accept him even after he begged her earlier. It seemed like he really had no place in her heart.

"Alright, I got it. Thank you, doctor," said Joan while heading into the room.

"You're awake. Are you thirsty or hungry?" a woman worriedly asked.

"What are you doing here?" he coldly retorted.

"Caiden, can you be more mature? You are already an adult, yet you went around acting like a three-year-old child," Noelle chided as she moved closer to him.

This stupid girl is always mocking me! Annoyed, Caiden turned his back on her so he did not have to face her.

"What? Did you really think that she would accept your proposal? What a joke!" Noelle taunted.

"Get out!" the patient coldly demanded as he raised his voice.

He sure has a bad temper. Noelle looked at him helplessly.

"Caiden, we have been together for so many years. Even if you dislike me, do you have to be so fierce?" she complained.

Indeed, he was always rude towards her because he did not want her to pester him.

"Leave now. I don't want to see you," Caiden sighed while waving his hand at her.

Is he openly shooing me away? Can't he even show me any sympathy?

"If I leave, what will you do? Joan has already left," Noelle stated.

In fact, she forced Joan to leave. She had countless reasons to humiliate Joan, but the latter could not care less.

"Has she left?" Caiden looked around in bewilderment.

"What's wrong? Do you want her to accompany you? Don't you remember that she has a lover?" Noelle sneered.

Yes, she has Larry! The expression on Caiden's face darkened, and he did not seem as hopeful as before.

He used to dream about living a blissful life with Joan, yet that unsuccessful proposal changed everything. In the end, she couldn't see things from his perspective and there was no way she would end up together with him.

Meanwhile, Lucius was in the living room, calling out to Delilah, "Grandma, isn't that Mom?"

The older woman hurried out from the kitchen and sat beside the little boy, with her eyes fixated on the television screen.

Sure enough, it was an image of Caiden proposing to Joan. There were many people there, and everyone was cheering. Even the atmosphere seemed romantic.

"Grandma, why would Caiden propose to Mom?" Lucius sternly grumbled while turning to face Delilah. Clearly, he was unhappy.

"Well, perhaps Caiden was playing a joke on your mom," Delilah tried to find an excuse.

The question had put her in the spot because the little boy was still in the dark about Larry and Joan's divorce.

"Grandma, did Mom and Dad argue?" Lucius continued.

"Silly boy, what are you saying? Why would they get into an argument?" Delilah comforted the child while patting his head.

Unfortunately, Lucius was not satisfied with her answer and did not think that Caiden was just pulling a prank.

That was the truth anyway.

At that time, Larry was analyzing several things on his computer, with his face scrunched up in concentration.

"Larry!" Suddenly, Jessica ran towards him. She was panting.

Confused, Larry questioned, "What happened?"

"How are you doing? Are you okay?" She blurted out.

What is she going on about? What would happen to me? I'm just going through an ordinary day of my life.

"Tell me what is going on. If not, please leave," Larry ordered.

He knew that she rushed into his office for a reason. There must be something important that had occurred.

It looks like he is unaware of the incident. Sighing, Jessica looked at the man sitting at the desk.

"Nothing. I only wanted to see you. Are you hungry? Do you want to get something to eat? I will get it for you," she hurriedly covered up.

Suspicious of her behaviour, Larry raised his gaze towards Jessica.

She is not acting like herself. Why is she being so weird?

"I'm not hungry," he stated before turning back to his computer screen.

Meanwhile, the atmosphere was a little odd in the office outside.

"Look at this. Isn't that Joan?"

"Oh, it is! Isn't that Mrs. Norton?"

"I can't believe the young master of the Owens family proposed to Mrs. Norton. He even did it in front of a crowd!"

Several women were gossiping about the most recent news in a corner, with disbelief written across their faces.

On the other end, Jessica frowned. She hesitated to tell Larry about the public proposal that Caiden organized. Sitting on the sofa, she tightly clasped her hands together. Nervous, she did not dare to speak to Larry.

"What on earth happened?" the man asked.

As Jessica deliberated over whether to tell him about the matter, she heard a crash.

Crash! She saw the mess before her.

Larry's eyes were glued onto the screen, and he looked murderous.

"Larry, are you okay?" Jessica whimpered.

"Are you here to tell me about this?" Larry turned his laptop to her and hissed.

The screen showed the scene where Caiden got down on one knee.
