Never Late, Never Away Chapter 2067 - 2068

Never Late, Never Away Chapter 2067

"Don't worry, Joan. I'll find a way to get you home safely." Caiden smiled.

"And how exactly are you planning to do that? There's no way for us to escape under their surveillance," Jaden chimed in.

He's right. Gabriella had sent more backup to guard and inspect the rooms.

"I guess you'll just have to trust me," Caiden said to Joan and Nancy.

Though Jaden didn't know what tricks Caiden had up his sleeves, he believed that Caiden would have come up with a decent escape plan.

"Here, Joan. I bought some disguises for the two of you. We're leaving right after you've changed. There are fewer people around since it's mealtime." Caiden tossed the clothes to the ladies and pulled Jaden out of the room.

Nancy picked up the clothes in a hurry. She was stunned when she realized what they were. I've never worn clothes like this before! I can't imagine how it's going to feel like.

"Nancy, it's just for a while, ok?" Joan coaxed.

She knew wearing men's clothes would be difficult for Nancy. Nancy paid a lot of attention to her image. Though she behaved somewhat carelessly, she was oddly repulsed by the idea of wearing men's clothes.

"It's fine, Joan. Let's just change. We shouldn't keep them waiting for long." Nancy started undressing without a further word.

To complete their disguise, both women changed their hairstyles and put on glasses. They also muddied their skin. Only a close acquaintance would be able to recognize them.

"We're done. Let's go," Nancy announced as she left the room.

"Pffft!" Forgetting to control his reaction, Jaden burst out laughing at the sight of the two ladies.

"Don't you think you've gone a little overboard with the disguises?"

I have to take every precaution. Gabriella knows us too well, and I'm sure she has our faces imprinted in her memory. She's going to be even more careful after my last escape.

"That's good then. Time to go," Joan whispered.

"Jaden, we won't forget you're here if you stop speaking for two seconds, you know," Caiden said abruptly.

This shut Jaden up.

The two men left the room first. A few minutes later, they beckoned the women forward.

"Just act natural. Or they'll notice that something's amiss." Caiden's eyes kept darting around his surroundings.

"Ok." Joan rubbed her hands together nervously. There was a hint of fear in her eyes.

"Joan, I-I'm scared," Nancy blurted.

"Don't say anything, and don't worry. You'll be fine with us here." Jaden patted her comfortingly on her shoulder.

They walked in pairs, passing through numerous corridors. They avoided the elevators. They were more easily recognizable in close quarters, and there were also surveillance cameras in elevators. Gabriella had also arranged for guards in all the elevators so she could track them down quickly.

"Stop there!" A cold, unfamiliar voice rang out.

"What rooms are you from?" A fierce man walked toward them.

"We're from the top floor. What's going on?" Caiden straightened to his full height and replied the man coolly.

The guard hesitated at Caiden's answer.

Isn't the presidential suite located on the top floor? He thought better of invoking their ire. Why are those two chaps wearing hats indoors though? And they're wrapped in layers like burritos.

"Hey, you two. Aren't you sweating from wearing those hats in this sort of weather? You should take them off."

Caiden looked at the two women before casting a hostile gaze toward the guard.

"What's wrong with wearing hats?" he retorted.

"Nothing's wrong, sir. We're under orders to look for some people in the hotel. So we need your friends here to take off their hats before we can let you pass."

The guard answered Caiden meekly, apparently surprised by his imposing aura.

"Take the hats off, then." Caiden eyed the two women.

They took their hats off but didn't turn around.

Short hair. And they're both dressed in men's clothes.

"I'm sorry for disturbing you, sir. You may leave." The four of them left in a hurry.

Nancy and Joan let out identical sighs of relief. The tension had also left their gaze. Luckily I thought of putting on some wigs, or we'd have given ourselves away!

"Joan, thank god you thought about the wigs." Nancy's praise was effusive.

Of course! We need to stay one step ahead if we want to escape from her clutches.

“Who knew the two of you could pass off so easily as men, eh?” Jaden commented nonchalantly.

“You jerk, we almost fainted from the nerves. How do you look so carefree right now?” Nancy pinched his elbow.

“Well, it’s not like I can walk around with a frown on my face. What a poor omen. Plus, don’t you find this rather exciting? Ok, ok, I’ll zip my lips. Won’t you let me off the hook, ma’am?” Jaden teased.

Joan’s lips curved up in humor as she watched their interaction.

I don’t know how the two of them are still in the mood to mess around!

“What a pity,” Caiden sighed.

Joan turned to face him confusedly.

“If your friend isn’t married or pregnant, they would’ve made a good pair,” he explained.

“You can drop the idea. She and her husband are a pair of disgusting lovebirds,” Joan added.

They would make a pair of good buddies, though.

Nancy and Jaden were both loud and colorful characters, so they got along exceptionally well. Perhaps they were a bit too caught up in their teasings and had thrown the escape to the back of their minds.

“Nancy, shush,” Joan whispered.

The two of them were lost in their own world. They were still playing around noisily.

Soon, they arrived at the doors of the hotel.

Joan visibly sagged in relief at the sight.

"We're free!" Suddenly, Nancy had stretched out both arms and shouted at the sky.

All eyes in the lobby turned to her at that moment.

Damn it! "Run!" Caiden yelled.

"Get them! Quick!" One of Gabriella's head lackeys barked out orders at his men.

A few people began running toward Joan and Nancy.

"Why are you still standing around? Run!" Jaden pulled Nancy with him as they ran.

"Oh god, am I going to die here?" Nancy screamed.

"Just shut up and save your energy for running! I can't carry you since your stomach's so heavy!" Jaden retorted.

"Damn it, Jaden. How can you joke at a time like this?"

Nancy was panicking like mad. She had never expected to foil her own plans of escape with some carelessly uttered words.

In reality, the head lackey had already noticed her and Jaden. They were making such a ruckus that it was almost impossible not to notice them. Though her disguise as a man was believable, she gave herself away the moment she shouted at the sky.

"Get in!" The two women were shoved into the car.

A black sedan sped along the highway, followed closely by a fleet of at least ten cars.

"Oh god, they're on our tail! What are we going to do?" Nancy's fear was palpable.
