Never Late, Never Away Chapter 2069

They were so close to escaping unnoticed. Her disappointment at being discovered was indescribable.

"It's ok, we'll figure something out," Joan comforted Nancy gently while stroking her hair.

"Well, we wouldn't be in this situation if you didn't announce it to the whole world," Jaden complained.

"Shut it. If you weren't playing around with her, she wouldn't have let down her guard either," Caiden cut in.

Jaden fell silent as the guilt began creeping up his spine.

The cars behind showed no signs of giving up on their chase. The four of them were beginning to lose hope.

"Caiden, we're going to run out of fuel at some point. Think of something," Jaden said worriedly.

They would never be able to outlast the fleet of cars behind them. They would eventually run out of fuel and get caught.

"Joan, is there anyone you can call for help? We need some backup," Caiden pleaded.

"He's right. Joan, you should call Larry. I'll call Jory. We can get them to send some help and at least block off the cars," Nancy voiced anxiously.

"Ok," Joan answered determinedly.

Caiden passed Jaden's and his phone to them.

At this very moment, Larry was going through the surveillance tapes feverishly in an attempt to piece together what had happened. He didn't know what she was going through and had never expected to receive a call from her.

His phone lay abandoned on the sofa. He had ignored it though it rang multiple times. All his attention was on the screens before him.

"Mr. Norton, your phone's ringing." One of his assistants entered the room.

"Who is it?" Larry asked disinterestedly.

"It's your wife." The assistant paused in confusion.

Joan? Larry stood up in an instant and grabbed the phone in his assistant's hand.

"Hello? Joan? Where are you? Are you ok? Are you injured? Tell me where you are, and I'll come for you right away!" Larry almost stumbled over his questions.

"Larry." Joan tried hard to rein in her emotions.

She almost burst out crying at the sound of his voice.

"Can you come and get me? There are a lot of cars behind us. They're all chasing us. Please come quickly," Joan said shakily.

"Ok, don't panic. Send me your coordinates, and I'll bring help ASAP."

Joan hung up soon after.

Caiden saw that hope had begun to creep into her features. I guess that man she called is a really important person in her life.

Nancy began sobbing when Jory picked up her call.

Jory's heart broke into pieces when he heard her cries.

"Jory, I'm almost dead! Please save me!" Nancy wailed into the receiver.

"I-I'm in the c-car now, and there are s-so many cars behind us. Jory, what are we going to do? I don't want to die."

Jaden burst into laughter at her simpers.

Nancy was drying her tears after ending her call with Jory.

"F*ck you, Jaden. What's so funny about our situation? I'm scared to death here. Are you planning to laugh yourself to death instead?" Nancy mumbled.

"Aren't you being a drama queen? Going on and on about how you're about to die. Just look at how calm Joan is." Jaden scoffed.

Well, Joan's not an ordinary person to begin with!

"Stop talking, Jaden. Keep our eyes on the road," Caiden chided.

There were close to twenty cars on the highway. Each car was now driving at its maximum speed.

Meanwhile, Jory had called Larry about the situation. "Hey, Larry, did Joan call you? Nancy called me too." Jory left his office in a hurry.

"Yes, I've got it. Let's send out more men to stop those cars..." Larry blurted anxiously.

That was the first time the two men had ever reached a consensus.

Boom!

All of a sudden, a peal of thunder split the air, followed immediately by a downpour.

Flashes of lightning lit up the sky, and thunder boomed. On the whole, everything seemed terrifying.

“Oh God, this is bad! In such weather, I can’t accelerate, or we might crash!” Jaden exclaimed loudly.

Truth be told, he didn’t dare drive too fast since he was afraid that he would lose control of the car.

“Joan, when is backup arriving?” Caiden asked as he twisted to the back.

“Soon. They’ve already set out,” Nancy swiftly chimed in.

“Jaden, just hang in there for a bit more. Focus...”

“They’re here! They’re here!” Nancy suddenly shrieked excitedly.

Upon hearing that, Joan’s eyes instantly widened, and she gazed out the window.

“You’re sure they’re on your side?” Caiden questioned while staring at them dubiously.

“Yup! One of them is my husband, and the other is hers,” Nancy quickly explained.

All at once, Jaden let out a sigh of relief at the front.

In no time, a dozen cars cut off Caiden’s car from the cars that were pursuing them at the back.

Having done so, the people in the cars promptly scrambled out.

“Are you okay, Joan?” Larry knocked on the car window, his heart that had been lodged in his throat finally settling back into his chest.

“Caiden, this is my husband. We’re safe!” Joan hurriedly asserted.

“Hubby!” Nancy threw herself into Jory’s arms as soon as she climbed out of the car. “I thought I would never see you again! I thought I was going to die with our child...” she sobbed.

“Okay, you’re fine now. Everything’s fine,” Jory comforted as he patted her shoulder lightly.

“Are you hurt anywhere? Did Gabriella do anything to you?” Larry checked Joan, who was standing before him, all over.

“I’m fine. Fortunately, they saved us, or we would’ve really died in there.” Joan pointed at Caiden and Jaden some distance away.

“Thank you.” Larry slowly walked over to them.

Hmm... he must be the person whom Joan holds in high regard, huh? His curiosity piqued, Caiden studied Larry skeptically.

“Nice to meet you. I’m Larry Norton, Joan’s husband. Thank you for saving my wife.” Larry extended a hand courteously.

However, Caiden didn’t plan on shaking his hand since he found it superfluous. Besides, they might even be enemies in the future.

“Who are you all? Get out of my way!” the leader of the ruffians on Gabriella’s side bellowed.

“Who was that? How dare you make such a racket in front of me? Do you not want to live anymore?” Jory threatened as he sauntered over.

In an instant, those men backed away several steps.

“Boss, that’s Mr. Synder. We can’t afford to cross him, so let’s retreat. Our lives are more important,” a young man whispered after scurrying over.

At that, the lead ruffian wavered.

He had once heard that Jory and Larry were ruthless and pitiless characters in the business world who never showed their enemies an ounce of mercy.

But what am I supposed to say to Gabriella Ward? No, I’ve got to make a decision and sacrifice either one. Ugh! No matter what, life is the most important!

“Uh... Mr. Synder, I’m sorry, but we’ve got the wrong person,” the lead ruffian murmured with a smile.

"B*llshit! It was them! They were the ones who had been pursuing us! They're all Gabriella Ward's men!" Nancy thundered out of the blue.

Hearing that, Jory's eyes immediately radiated murder. How dare they make a move against my woman? They must all have a death wish!

"Men, attack!" The moment Jory's order fell, the men behind them charged forward with wooden sticks.

With that, a battle raged on.

The highway had long since been barricaded, for Larry had already made a call to prohibit anyone else from accessing the highway before coming over.

Very quickly, Gabriella's men could no longer hold out and all collapsed on the ground.

As rain and blood blended together, the stench of blood permeated the air.

"Don't take things too far, Jory. It'll be troublesome if anyone dies," Larry reminded.
