Chapter 12

I will talk to Garry.” While things seemed peaceful in the Benett Residence, it was the opposite elsewhere. At this moment, the president’s office in Wickam Group seemed like a battlefield. Bam! Julia slammed her hands on the table and shouted, “What! You wish to divorce?!” Old Mr. Wickam frowned and looked at her sternly, “Behave yourself! You look like an old hag!” Julia sneered when she heard her husband scolding her. She pointed at her nose and said, “Do I look like an old hag? Well, you must have been blind to marry me all those years ago!” Darren Wickam’s face darkened. “I don’t have time to quarrel with you! Lower your voice. We are in the company, and you should watch your behavior. I should never have brought you here!” Gareth looked stern as he sat at his desk. He felt a wave of headache as he looked at the old couple sitting on the couch. Then, Darren turned to Gareth and said calmly, “You are right to divorce. Elisa is no longer the heiress of the Benett family. Instead, Linda is the real heiress.” Julia gritted her teeth in fury. “Nonsense! Linda is cunning as a fox. How can you both blindly fall for her tricks?” “I don’t care who she is. All I know is she saved Gareth’s life, so Gareth has the duty to marry her! Moreover, even though the Benett family is not the most prominent in Bayswe, they are one of the biggest timber and building material traders in the country. It would be profitable to collaborate with them.” Julia felt heartbroken for Elisa, knowing that
