Chapter 301 The D*mn Woman!

Will sighed in exasperation. He could only say in a soft voice, "Liz, sometimes I don't want to pressure you too much, but if I don't say or do anything, I won't have the opportunity to fight for it."

Elisa pursed her lips. She regretted it a little because this man wouldn't be honest with her. Asking him was as good as not asking.

As her lips curved to say something, Will spoke up again.

"The days are long and time passes slowly. You can slowly see if I'm your... Mr. Right."

He said the last two words very softly, but it was piercing. Elisa's expression dulled.

The next moment, she laughed. "You love to joke around, Mr. Darcey."

At the same time, Gareth had been working overtime in the office, and he had just signed his last document.

He massaged the bridge of his nose as he leaned back in his chair. Seeing his cell phone on the table, he slowly picked it up and logged into Twitter which he rarely used.

When he saw the first trending topic, his face immediately darkened!

Elisa turned to look at Will, a little puzzled. "What..."

Will's lips curved slightly. He didn't ask her what she was going to do but instead said with an unaffected expression, "It's not very convenient to get a cab. I'll send you."

Elisa's expression dulled a little. If Gareth knew that it was Will who had sent her to Wickam Group, she would blow this assignment completely. She shook her head at once. "It's fine. The cab has stopped. I can just go on my own."

She got into the cab as soon as she said it.

She closed the door and said indifferently, "The entrance of Wickam Group, please."

"Alright."

The cab drove off.

Elisa was still scrolling on her cell phone.

Gareth was just done with a document when he suddenly remembered that Elisa was there. He raised his eyes and looked over when he noticed that Elisa wasn't being diligent about the partnership as she should have been. Instead, she was recklessly on her cell phone. Gareth's face darkened in an instant.

He looked away and continued dealing with his documents.

He had an endless pile of work, so he wanted to see how long she could use her cell phone and how long her cell phone battery would last!

One hour passed.

Elisa didn't raise her head at all. Gareth's face became even darker.

Two hours passed.

His brows actually loosened a little.

If Thomas was in the office, he would definitely be able to tell that Gareth was very pleased with the proposal.

Elisa only looked at Gareth once she had finished explaining everything. "Mr. Darcey, these are the specifics of the proposal. Let me know what you think."

Gareth looked at Elisa coldly. He didn't say a word.

In the moment, he didn't intend to speak to Elisa sarcastically, unlike before.

Work was work, and personal matters were personal matters.

He had wanted Elisa to come over because he felt that she was being despicable, and he didn't want to help her succeed in winning Will's favor.

But now, he was pleased with Elisa's proposal.

He was also feeling shock and anger.

"Garry, it's me."

The voice was still as gentle as before.

There was a trace of a smile on Elisa's lips as she looked at Gareth. "Look, Mr. Wickam. You owe my sister a huge favor. She's worried about me, and she was afraid that I couldn't close the deal, so she came over personally. Do you still want to bring up such a request in front of her? It won't look good for anyone, would it? Linda would be sad."

"She's your cousin, and she treats you like a sister. You would go so far as to make use of her?" Gareth's cold face was spiteful, and his voice icy.

But Elisa didn't care at all. She smiled cheerfully and said, "Don't you know that I am a vain person who wants to reach her goals at all costs? Everything I'm doing right now is considered nothing. I think you better restrain yourself for my sister's sake, Mr. Wickam."

Gareth's gaze was so sharp as if he wanted to send her to the gallows.

Elisa chuckled and stepped back a little, keeping a distance between the two of them.

It looked like the both of them were discussing the partnership in an ordinary manner. Nothing more than that.

Gareth could clearly see the provocation in Elisa's eyes. Rage rose up within him.

If Linda wasn't here, he would have flared up!

After a moment, he pursed his lips and said indifferently, "No."

It was as though Linda breathed a sigh of relief. She smiled as she said, "That's great."

The smile on Elisa's lips deepened. At this moment, Linda was blinded by love, and she had no idea that Elisa was digging a hole for her to jump into. She smiled and looked at Gareth. "Garry, what do you think of this project with Liz?"

There was a gentle smile in the corner of her mouth and she was feeling relaxed and at ease. It was as if she had already understood the proposal previously and was filled with natural confidence.

Gareth glanced at her indifferently and finally said in a soft voice, "It's alright."

Linda was a little surprised. It wasn't that she didn't know about the project. She was surprised that she could get such a straightforward answer from Gareth.

Linda took a slight breath in. It was fine. So what if Elisa could finish this assignment? She had five assignments this month.

And according to regulations, she couldn't leave the company this month.

After thinking about it, Linda looked at Gareth. "Garry, since you have work to do, I'll leave with Liz."

Gareth frowned and finally said in a low voice, "You still haven't recovered completely. Don't always think on behalf of others. Even if you spend a lot of effort, other people might not appreciate it."

Elisa had walked to the door when she heard what Gareth said.

The corners of her mouth twitched and she continued to walk out.

A sliver of a smile streaked across Linda's face. She liked it when the two of them were clashing. She was more certain that Gareth only agreed to Elisa's proposal for her sake.

What a catch for Elisa.

After all, Wickam Group was massive, and this project would help Benett Corporation. It was nothing for Gareth to invest in this for her sake.

Yara was a little surprised. She glanced at Linda at once through the rearview mirror.

Without Linda's orders, she couldn't just obey Elisa. Otherwise, she didn't know how she was going to be punished by Linda when they got back.

Linda turned to look at her, puzzled. "Where are you going?"

Elisa's expression was indifferent. "You wanted to send me home just to put on an act. It's meaningless for us to be in the same car anymore, Linda. I have some matters to deal with, so I won't play your little word games with you anymore, Linda."

Linda's brows furrowed. Was Garry looking for her?

Were the two of them meeting again?

She immediately said, "Where are you going? I can get Yara to send you."

Elisa said with a half-smile, "Don't worry. I'm not going to meet Gareth."

Linda's brows furrowed tightly. She immediately said in a low voice, "Stop the car!"

"Alright."

Elisa and Charli talked for a while more before they left together.

Charli sent Elisa home.

Elisa kept pondering on the way home.

The other party was slightly bewildered. "Ms. Elisa Benett?"

"Yes."

The assistant paused for a moment before saying, "Alright. He's in a meeting now but I will pass the message to him and call you back after that."

"Okay. Thank you."

The two of them hung up after that.

The assistant put down the phone and went straight to Mr. Whitford's office.

At the time, Mr. Whitford was at his office desk. The big-bellied man's breathing was slightly ragged, and it was clear that it was because he was overweight.

He looked around forty years old and had a pair of white-framed glasses. His middle-parted hair made him look even more greasy, which made many women unable to look him in the eye.
