Chapter 351 You Think I Care About Your Cousin?

Elisa looked up slowly and saw a woman in a white evening dress. She looked dignified and had curly brown hair flowing down her back. The woman was looking down at Elisa.

She seemed polite and extended her hand, indicating that Elisa should continue with her call. The woman was willing to wait for Elisa to end her call before chatting with her.

Elisa did not hesitate and continued to talk to Rachel, "Darling, I'm now at a banquet. I'll talk to you again once I'm back."

Rachel was surprised but did not ask any questions. "Sure. Let's chat again once you're done."

Elisa hung up and looked at the dignified woman. "Are you Ms. Tabor?"

Nicole Tabor was the favorite daughter of the chairman of Southdale's largest company.

Nicole was not surprised that Elisa knew her. She smiled and sat opposite Elisa before saying calmly, "I didn't expect to bump into you at this banquet, Ms. Benett."

"I apologize for being direct, but I was more surprised to find out that you divorced because of your cousin."

Elisa pursed her lips.

It was likely difficult for bystanders to understand how important Linda was to Gareth.

Elisa would not let herself be bothered by what Nicole said. After all, she did not care about Gareth. Thus, Nicole's words could not hurt her.

Then, Elisa smiled and did not say anything.

Nicole looked at Elisa with a hint of surprise. Elisa was completely different from what she imagined.

After pausing briefly, Nicole said with a smile, "I hope you're not my rival."

Elisa nodded nonchalantly. "Don't worry. I've had enough of hitting against the wall. Thus, I have no desire to humiliate myself again. If you think a little more, you'll understand why he brought me to this banquet and appeared before everyone."

Will stopped what he was doing and looked at Cole coldly.

Cole stiffened slightly, but he continued his report, “That day, Ms. Benett was not at home or the law firm. Through the surveillance record, I saw her coming out of her unit door in disguise. Later, it was Carle who sent her back.”

Will remained silent, so Cole forced himself to continue presenting his report. “After Carle left, Ms. Benett returned to her unit. Then, I saw Mr. Wickam... He entered through the unit door. When they were in the same elevator, Mr. Wickam kept trying to subdue Ms. Benett until they stepped out of the elevator on Ms. Benett’s floor. Less than thirty minutes later, Mr. Wickam re-entered the elevator in a bad mood.”

Will gripped his phone tightly.

“It really was her.”

But Julia looked at her son and frowned. "Can't you smile more obviously?"

Jerry was rendered speechless.

He frowned helplessly. "Mom, you have seen what happened. We can't force something like this to go our way."

In the end, he did not wish to lie to his mother.

"Your grandson has his own way of life. Sometimes, it is pointless to worry about him. You know what Gareth is like. No one can control him."

Still, Julia could not help but worry for Gareth. "By the time he knows how good Elisa is to him, I fear it will be too late to get her back."

Gareth was unaware that he had been scolded by two women at almost the same time.

One scolded him for his blindness to his surroundings, while the other scolded his hard of hearing.

It seemed strange if one were to think about it. How could such an obtuse man be so successful in the business circles, such that people secretly wondered if he made a deal with the devil?

Gareth narrowed his eyes and seemed more intimidating than before.

But Elisa parted her skirt slightly. Although the shoes Gareth had chosen for her were beautiful, they were extremely uncomfortable.

She seriously wondered if Gareth deliberately bought her such terrible shoes.

The instant Elisa parted her skirt, Gareth could clearly see that her feet were red.

His frown deepened.

Elisa chuckled. "See, my feet have become like this. Are you sure you still want to bring me around?"

Gareth pursed his lips and did not reply. He turned and left straight away.

Nicole saw him pull out his phone to give someone a call.

Linda and Norman immediately turned to Rose.

Linda urged eagerly, "What is your plan? Please tell me!"

Her urgency prompted Rose to frown. "Linda, no matter what happens, and no matter the time, you must keep calm! Even if there is no one else around, you mustn't behave this way!"

Norman's expression darkened. "Now is not the time to lecture her about this. Tell us the plan now!"

Rose knew Linda and Norman were anxious, so she sighed and said, "We aren't the only ones who hate Elisa. Others hate Elisa being with Gareth even more than us. Don't you think Monica watched this live broadcast?"

Norman's eyes brightened. "Yes, not just Monica. Even Old Mr. Wickam dislikes Elisa."

Elisa was startled.

She did not react even as ice-cold water seeped through her clothes.

Who pushed me? Was it Nicole?

Although I heard Nicole can be ruthless, she is still a dignified person and does not seem like someone who would resort to this.

Since the banquet is a live broadcast, could Linda and her family be behind this?

They don't know that I can swim very well.

Elisa narrowed her eyes. Should I pretend that I can't swim and wait for the rescue?

She splashed about in the waters and made it seem like she could not swim.

Suddenly, a person screamed, "Someone fell into the waters! Please come and save her!"

It was hard to determine if the person who shouted was a staff or a guest at the banquet.

In no time, Gareth carried Elisa into the car carefully while the latter didn't think anything was wrong. After all, many eyes were watching them, so Gareth wouldn't possibly drag her into the car violently.

Moreover, Julia could be watching the live stream too. If she knew Elisa fell into the water and Gareth just sat aside and did nothing, he would've wasted this chance.

In fact, she could have swum back on her own just now. However, she decided to continue hiding the fact that she could swim because the opponent might harm her in the same way again. It was a way of protecting herself.

After closing the car door, Gareth shot a cold glance at her. "Don't act stupidly in front of me next time."

Elisa's eyes fluttered. She opened her handbag and realized that her phone was spoiled as a result of having been soaked in water.

She squeezed a smile at Gareth. "May I borrow your phone?"

Gareth wore a sarcastic smile and replied, "Remember to compensate me with a phone."

Then, he took out his phone from his pants pocket – water was still dripping down the phone.

After restoring the message, Thomas passed the phone to Gareth.

'Charli, someone pushed me into the water today. The major suspect is Linda. Do investigate her but don't miss out on anyone else suspicious too. Don't reply to this message. I'll find a chance to call you.'

When Thomas read the message, his expression changed. "Ms. Bennett..."

One couldn't tell whether he was referring to Elisa or Linda.

On the other hand, Gareth wore a ghastly expression and remained silent.

Standing aside, Thomas racked his brain trying to understand the situation. Mr. Wickam knew my phone was able to restore deleted messages. Otherwise, he wouldn't have come to ask me about it. Elisa deleted the message, yet Mr. Wickam restored it. And... what's going on between Elisa and Linda. Is there really something wrong with Linda?

Thomas was confused, but he didn't dare to tell Gareth his thoughts.
