looked at Gareth in confusion and said nothing. Then, she walked toward the plants and checked them carefully – they were indeed the plants she feel exhausted too?” Gareth wore a faint smile on his handsome face. His deep-set eyes were filled with incomprehensible emotions. Elisa couldn’t tell if he was smirking or smiling out of vexation. “I don’t have to remind you about the benefits of getting back together with me.” Elisa snorted, “I don’t need those benefits, and I don’t want to hurt myself anymore.” Gareth was not irritated by Elisa’s words. Instead, he spat coolly, “Continue walking around.” Elisa remained silent and finally stepped forward. There was no harm in looking around since she was already there. Truth be told, she missed this place, not the moments she had with Gareth. After all, she was staying alone in the villa. What she missed were the efforts and sacrifices she made. She became sulkier the more she walked around the house. Finally, she sat on the couch and refused to move. She looked at Gareth solemnly and uttered coldly, “I’m telling you this again – I’ll not get back together with you. Please don’t think about using me. There’s no need for us to collaborate through marriage.” “Hey, Liz.” Just then, a familiar voice that she had been dreaming of hearing again came forth. Her body shuddered at once as her eyes were filled with shock and disbelief. She turned to the source of the sound to realize it was a recording played from Gareth’s phone. Tears welled up in her eyes. She gasped involuntarily, “This recording...” Gareth did not comment while the recording continued playing. “Hey, Liz. When you heard this recording, Dad might not be on this earth anymore.” Two rows of tears streamed down her face and fell onto her shirt, forming two dark spots on it. Besides sorrow, her eyes were filled with bewilderment all the more. Why does Gareth have this recording? How did Dad know that he was about to pass away? How?! “You’re my precious little princess and the one I care about the most. Unfortunately, my health is deteriorating, and I can’t accompany you forever and witness your happiness. I just hope that you won’t be too depressed after my passing.” Tears gushed down Elisa’s cheeks as

control her emotions when being reminded of her

“Cry it out as you wish.” His words tipped Elisa over the edge, but the latter still controlled herself not to let out a sound and only teared up in silence. “Liz, there is always a time to say goodbye. That’s all that I want to say to you for now. I’ll watch over you forever to see you carry on with life strongly. Goodbye, my princess. Dad loves you forever.” Feeling a piercing pain in her chest, Elisa instinctively covered her chest with her hand. Gareth was a bundle of nerves when he saw that, and he immediately said, “I’ll ask Jeremy to come over.” “It’s okay. I’m fine.” Elisa mumbled arduously. She knew it wasn’t a health issue but broken heart syndrome due to extreme agony. Moreover, she was well-versed in medical practices. Gareth furrowed his brows. Nonetheless, he could tell that Elisa was still trying to control her emotions and was getting more stable. Pressing his lips tight, he said nothing and fixed his gaze on Elisa, who was slowly wiping away her tears. Within a few minutes, she regained her composure and took a deep breath. “How did you get this recording?” Why did I never find it? Nelson mentioned in the recording that he intended to let her discover this recording by chance. Elisa reckoned Nelson must have reckoned that Norman and his family wouldn’t lay a finger on her yet after his passing for the sake of their reputation. Indeed, Nelson had thoroughly thought about the situation. Besides, he knew Elisa would be heartbroken like him upon knowing the truth. He didn't want to see her anguish, yet he was worried that she wouldn't guard against Norman. He was in a quandary, so he left a recording for Elisa to discover by chance. However, Elisa couldn't understand why the recording that she couldn't find all this while was with Gareth. "Your father passed it to me before he died." Gareth answered calmly. Elisa was stunned. "So, you have been aware of the truth since long ago?" Gareth's eyes pressed her lips and remained silent. In the past, Gareth didn't believe what Nelson said, so he disregarded the recording. But after all the happenings, he would naturally suspect something about and mumbled, "Provided that I get back together with you. Am I right?" Gareth did not respond as he felt it was inappropriate. Nonetheless, he couldn't bring himself to retort to Elisa. Elisa sneered. "It's okay. I want to handle the Benett family's affair on my own." Will had offered to help her but was rejected as well. She wanted to gradually destroy her enemies by herself so that they received the retribution they deserved. Frowning his brows, Gareth didn't know Elisa's intention and thought she was still resisting him. Nevertheless, he pressed his lips, turned away, and said nothing when he saw Elisa still trying to control her emotions forcefully with tears streaming down her face. Then, he stood up and hummed, "Please stay here and rest tonight." Elisa lifted her head to stare at him with her eyes filled with perplexity. I've already made myself very clear. Why is he still asking me to stay? He's always an arrogant man, but why did he repeatedly talk to me in a caring manner today? How many benefits can he garner by marrying me again that he's willing to behave in such a servile manner? In fact, his behavior might still be considered arrogant for one who was gentle. However, given Gareth's temperament, he was already putting aside his dignity. In fact, he wouldn't have done all this, given his arrogance. Elisa wiped away her tears calmly and remained quiet. She reckoned Gareth would leave soon, even if he asked her to stay. So, she didn't intend a smile. "Liz is a kind girl. I know you have many misunderstandings toward her, but I hope you can try to get his father-in-law because he thought Nelson didn't deserve to be his father-in-law, and neither did Elisa deserve to be his wife. The marriage only happened because he was forced by his family for the sake of their interest. However, Gareth's sympathy was aroused. For some reason, he hummed insouciantly, "This is the first and only time I'll help you." Nelson heaved a sigh of relief and stared at Gareth with his eyes filled with gratitude. "Thank you. Thank you." One's kindness would be rewarded. Nelson knew Gareth was a kind-hearted man because he was willing to help him.... Those were the details Gareth recalled and told Elisa. With her head lowered, Elisa said nothing while Gareth mumbled gently, "I only listened to this recording recently. Given the situation now, I think it's about time to let you listen to it." Elisa turned her face away, not wanting to look at Gareth. At this point, she had no desire to resent Gareth anymore. Given how haughty he normally was, he was already being merciful by keeping his promise to Nelson and playing the recording to Elisa today. In fact, Elisa thought she should thank him. After pausing for a moment, she hummed, "Thank you." Gareth's eyes darkened. That was the last thing he wished to hear from Elisa. Elisa sat motionless on the couch while Gareth looked at her calmly. "It's getting late. Do rest up." Elisa did not answer. She was waiting for him to leave so that she could leave thereafter. However, Gareth stood still at the spot for the next half an hour while Elisa sat silently on the couch. Elisa lifted her eyes to look at Gareth. "Are you going to stay here?" Gareth's deep-set eyes looked cool and tranquil as he stared at her and remained quiet. Elisa pressed her lips. Oh well, this residence belongs to him. He has the freedom to come and go. Nonetheless, she still his hand and walked to the door. She was just about to open the door when she recalled that she needed a passcode, so she turned around irritably. "Let me out." Gareth laughed in rage. He walked to the door without a word and opened the door. "Get lost. Don't let me see you again in the future." Elisa didn't care at all, and she didn't bother to retort. She walked straight out. And her so-called friend was only a cab that she had hailed. Seeing the cab stop not far away, Elisa quickly got into the car and left. Gareth stood at the door and ground his teeth as he stared at her figure. Elisa. Elisa Benett. Good. This woman is great!... The next day, Elisa could go to work as usual. She had been promoted and was now the assistant manager of the department. There were now two assistant managers in the department. When Elisa arrived at the office, everyone congratulated her as they saw her. Elisa spoke to everyone in a good-natured manner. Kira even joked and said, "I'm going to ride on your coattails in the future. You're amazing, Liz! You're the best. You have so much room to grow in the future. You have to work hard!" Elisa smiled and nodded. "I will." "The assistant manager has to deal with a lot more pressure. Liz, although I am only a team leader, I've been working in this company for quite some time after all. If you face any problems, tell me any time. I'll help you if I can." Elisa smiled. "Alright." They talked for a while before Elisa went to her office. It wasn't very condition?" "It's no problem. I can attend to your case at any time. Just call me." Jean answered with ease. Anita sighed. "That side is still looking for opportunities to drag it out. They even stopped me from submitting evidence, but the court has set a date for seven days from now." Elisa nodded. "No problem." "I can only count on you, Liz. My son's custody can't be taken away again." "Mm, I understand. Don't worry." The two talked for a while more before they hung up, and Elisa resumed her work. The company started to go ahead with various aspects because she was at work. Linda was still at the mental hospital and couldn't be discharged. It was her temporary refuge but also a prison. Elisa started to work. The morning passed quickly. Ten minutes before her lunch break, Elisa's cell phone suddenly rang. —Kyle: 'Are both of you free in the afternoon? Do you want to eat lunch together?' This was her hacker group chat. They would talk to each other from time to time. As for jobs, the other two worked on them and made allowances for her. Sometimes she would feel bad and take a few of them. —Elisa: 'Where?' —Scott: 'Sure.' —Kyle: 'The restaurant beneath Liz's office. I'm already here, so I'll order food first.' —Elisa: 'Alright.' —Scott: 'Okay.' During her lunch break, Elisa went to the private room of the restaurant. Kyle was the only one there. He sat on a chair, and he wore simple, gray sportswear, looking exceptionally cold. But... After interacting with him, she knew that he was only like that on the surface. Kyle would only be earnest with people close to him and people he cared about. He was always cold and cheerless to outsiders. He had no intention of maintaining a good impression on them. However... those he cared about, both family and friends, would have the blessing of three at the same time. A server stood at the door. She smiled and gestured to the man behind to the man behind her. "Please go in, sir." Scott nodded and strode in with his long legs. The man was in a black couture suit with a royal blue tie. His short hair was styled cleanly, and there were cold, hard lines on his handsome face. He curved his thin, sensual lips under the bridge of his tall, straight nose. "I haven't seen you in a while." Elisa smiled. "Yes. It's been a while." It was, of course, directed at Elisa. After all, Kyle and Scott lived close to each other, and they played games together frequently. They would hang out once in a while, but for Elisa, it would often be inconvenient for her. Furthermore, she didn't want to go into the industry, so they didn't hang out as much. After Scott sat down, Kyle looked at the server. "You may serve the food when it's ready." "Alright. Please wait a moment." She went out and shut the door after her. Scott sized up Elisa and furrowed his brows slightly. "Why have you lost so much weight since the last time I saw you?" Elisa immediately felt indignant. "I have not. I've been like this for the past couple of years." Scott didn't believe her at all. He said in exasperation, "It would be great if you could ensure that you don't lose any more weight. Girls can't be too skinny. It's not very proper." Elisa was dumbfounded. It wasn't as if she was skin and bones. But she didn't pursue the topic any longer. She smiled and asked, "How have the both of you been lately?" "Same old. But I might be getting married soon." Scott shrugged indifferently. Elisa immediately looked at him in bewilderment. "Getting married?" Her eyes were filled with confusion, while Kyle was calm. There wasn't much emotion on his face, and it was evident he knew about it. Scott was composed and didn't show too much emotion. "Mm. I'm at that age, and my family is pressuring me, so I'm going to get married." "Who is the girl?" Scott was Mr. Carter's only son. He had to take over the family business in the future. Being a hacker was only their hobby. Whether they would or could continue was yet to be seen. "The daughter of the Martin family." Elisa was a little surprised. "How have I her brows. There was nothing she could

you. Why don't you take it?" Elisa took out her cell phone, slightly perplexed. "Something to do with me?" She asked as she opened the back end. They had started a hacking group that was internationally known. Everyone wanted to win their favor. If they wanted the group to accept the job, they had to include detailed personal information. This was a hard and fast rule that the group had set in place. Of course... if the customers didn't want to include personal information, with The Three Musketeers' great skills, finding out their identity was a piece of cake. Therefore, no one would dare play tricks if they wanted help. Elisa suddenly laughed when she saw the client. "What is Uncle Norman in trouble for lately?" Logically speaking, with Norman's identity, he didn't have to do anything personally. But by exposing his identity, it was enough to prove that he couldn't trust other people to do whatever it was. At that moment, Elisa was slightly curious about what Norman wanted to do. Kyle's lips slowly curved. "It's up to you to accept it." Elisa said with a half-smile, "I must surely accept it since it's Uncle Norman. I have to do it since we're family." Kyle was dumbstruck. Scott sneered. "Your Uncle Norman would cry." Elisa smiled and didn't say anything. Scott looked at Elisa. "When are you planning on taking back Benett Corporation? Do you need help?" Elisa smiled and shook her head. "Not for the time being. I need to do it legitimately." And not seize it by force. If she wanted to seize it, she could ask for her shares back right now. After all, the contract back then wasn't stringent enough. She could find many loopholes. But... She didn't want to do so. It would go against the will of the people. Kyle nodded. "Mm. If you need anything, let us know at any time. We'll always be behind you." Scott nodded as well. Seeing Elisa's exceptionally serene gaze, he said, "That's right. We're a family. Don't always feel embarrassed. If there's anything you need, just let us know any time." Elisa's heart felt warm. "With the both of you, I have nothing to worry about." Kyle laughed want to take this job?" Kyle looked at Elisa. "Mm. I do." There was a trace of a smile in the corner of Elisa's mouth. Her expression was exceptionally they're doing it for money." As soon as Norman said it, his expression suddenly changed. "D*mn it! How can they be so nasty?" "Huh?" Rose was confused and walked over quickly to look at Norman's cell phone. After reading the text, her brows furrowed tightly. "Are they playing around with you? How much is this going to cost?" Norman's expression was unbelievably nasty. "If they breach it, we won't have to walk on thin ice anymore, and the Wickam family won't have the opportunity to continue like this with us." Rose shook her head in disbelief. "I think you're mad." "Mad? Heh... Look at the current situation. Is there any other way? If I don't do this, is there any room left for us? I might still be the chairman of Benett Corporation, but I don't have much status left." "But you still have the shares. Norman, I've told you previously not to make such a big deal out of this. We can't afford to offend the Wickam family now!" Rose looked at Norman in disbelief. He was really out of his mind. So much so that it was frightening. Previously, Rose was the one who had wanted to go up against Wickam Group, and Norman was the one thinking of ways to stop her, but now... their roles were reversed. At that moment, Rose was terrified that Norman would act blindly without thinking. Wickam Group was as tough and was afraid that Norman wouldn't read it carefully, so she read it in the open, unlike you. Stay out of my business, and don't interfere anymore! Go and keep Linda company." Rose shook her head in disbelief and frustration. She slowly said, "You're mad! You've gone insane! Don't you know what's waiting for you if Wickam Group finds out about this? And how do you have so many liquid funds to transfer to them right now?" "I said, keep your nose out of my business! Leave now!" Norman got up in a rage and pushed Rose out. "Norman Benett! You're crazy! You can't go on like this! You can't!" "I can afford two billion, and I'll own up to it. Get lost right now!" Norman closed the door after that while Rose knocked furiously. "Open the door!" "Scram! Beat it if you don't want to be disgraced!" Rose knocked on the door several times but to no avail, and she couldn't say anything while she was outside. She could only leave disappointedly. The worry in her heart grew. Since she found out about it, her eyelids had been twitching non-stop. As for Elisa, she sat behind her computer desk in a good mood after receiving Norman's funds. Scott and Kyle could naturally see her reply from the back end. —Kyle: 'Yeah, doing that would be great.' —Scott: 'Be careful. Don't let him find out, Liz.' —Elisa: 'Mm. I will be discreet. Don't worry.' She sent a meme after that. —Kyle: 'Haha. I knew that you didn't have good intentions when you accepted this job. I never thought that you would go such a route.' —Elisa: 'Of course. Norman
