

No Chance 67

Chapter 67 There's No Other Woman Better Than Her

Linda panicked and quickly grabbed hold of Shirley's arm as she looked at Elisa. "Liz, Shirley is actually a nice girl, please don't have the wrong impression of her. Similarly, Shirley, Liz is a great person. Please don't misunderstand her too..."

Gareth immediately snorted out laughing and looked at Elisa coldly. "If you have any dissatisfaction, just direct them at me."

Shirley was ecstatic to hear that.

Elisa merely turned around and smiled at his sharp gaze. "I publicly announced that I want a divorce during the dinner party the other day. You couldn't even change my mind about it, so why should I be jealous of both of you?"

Gareth's face immediately darkened when he heard that.

I will never forget the humiliation during that party!

"Very well, Elisa. You've become more capable." He spoke through gritted teeth.

Don't blame me for not reminding you – if we meet again, I just hope that we don't have fell on Gareth, clearly warning him that he ought to take good care of Linda and watch over because they were insignificant

she immediately became more ruthless. She could brush off comments made by anyone else but him.
years of marriage – she should had made her

"Liz, you should... hold your normal occurrence to her at this point. It was just out of her expectation to meet her ex-husband and his lover just by going out

so she waved to the waitress, who had been watching the drama

"Hello."

had serve them as soon as they arrived, respectfully, "Ms. Benett, do you have any reservations, or would you like to find an once again. Elisa pointed at the man who just entered and around and saw Will walking through the door with a smile on

when he saw Gareth. "What