

No Chance 68

Chapter 68 It Was Never a Joke

Though he spoke nonchalantly, he was obviously serious, giving a deadly warning to them.

Shirley, who had been giving Elisa the most trouble, immediately lost her cool. Blood drained from her face as she looked at Elisa, but the latter did not even spare her a glance.

Meanwhile, Gareth looked at Will coldly. "How impressive, Mr. Darcey."

Will arched his eyebrows. "It's most natural to protect the woman you love. I'm sure you'll understand the feeling, since you have Liz's cousin now."

Linda's eyes flashed at Gareth subconsciously, but she noticed that he remained silent.

Elisa no longer wanted to see them, so she asked the waitress politely, "Can you bring us to our seats?"

She returned to her senses and quickly replied, "Oh, sure..."

Smiling at them, Will said, "Excuse us."

went to the private room he

the way

without uttering a word. Shirley and the rest of them did not dare to Linda and said, "You guys go ahead

he left

Usually, even if he had any important matters, he would reject them or discuss with her about their next date. At the very least, he would wait for her feelings, making Linda grit her teeth, but she could not make a single complaint. His leave was like a huge slap to

...

served their meals, she immediately started eating casually, not giving an ounce of care if Will was a popular figure or not, and not

It was true that he had interacted with many women before, but he was not as frivolous as the rumors made him to be. Until putting on

Elisa did not care about that, and she did not mind

she finally looked at him, arching her eyebrows as she did so, for he had not eaten anything. "We've had meals together is not your cooking.

family hired were master chefs. Even though he went to prestigious restaurants, it