

No Chance 831

Chapter 831

Elisa frowned lightly, then snickered.

Gareth is quite excellent at acting now. I could barely find anything suspicious about him.

Elisa did not voice out her thoughts. But Rachel seemed to have guessed them. She continued, "It was just Vincent and me that time. He need not put on an act, then. He could have continued working and pretended that nothing had happened. He wouldn't have made an effort to see you."

Elisa pursed her lips. She was reluctant to discuss this further. She merely spoke calmly. "It's all right. He can do whatever he wants. I do not want to partake in any of his business anymore. He shouldn't meddle with mine, either. He can do anything he wants as long as it isn't against our agreement."

There was nothing she feared at this moment. He could not blackmail here anymore. Moreover, she knew that Gareth would not do something like that. Although he was stubborn, he still kept to his principles.

She did not want to pay attention to this man. So she spoke calmly, "This matter has nothing to do with me. He will leave me soon anyway. Why don't you get some rest? I reckon that you hadn't gotten much rest either."

Gareth frowned harder. Misery was written all over his face. He glared at Vincent coldly to let him know that he did not want to listen to all these.

But Vincent did not care how Gareth thought. He spoke gently, "Perhaps you've loved her since a long time ago. But you thought she and her father forced you into marriage, so you hated them. But you didn't know that..."

Vincent deliberately stopped here. Gareth glared at him coldly.

"Enough?"

There was a surveillance camera here. Gareth did not want Vincent to speak further. But Vincent wanted to do so. He wanted Elisa to know what was going on.

Vincent continued, "Sometimes, the truth is not everything you see. Perhaps you have misunderstood."

At that moment, Gareth recalled the recording he had shown Elisa before this. It was a conversation between Gareth and Elisa's father.

He dared not say a single word anymore. He no longer had the appetite for the Elisa chuckled. She continued to speak softly.

"Well, if you are hungry, prepare some food downstairs. Or you could always order food delivery."

"Alright, got it. But what if the two never leave? What should we do?"

Elisa smiled confidently.

"Gareth's pride would never let him do something like that. Don't worry. They will leave soon."

Elisa knew Gareth well. After all, she had spent three years observing this man's likes and dislikes. She had wanted to give him the best she could.

It was an unrequited love, to be exact. She had been the only one putting effort into this relationship, and she was now exhausted.

There is really nothing we can do." Since Elisa had spoken to this extent, Rachel relented and got up. "I'm going downstairs

Rachel's face darkened. Annoyance crept into her eyes as she looked at him. "Get out of here! This is Elisa's place, but I'm also considered half a host here. You're not welcomed here!"

Vincent chuckled out of anger. He put down his crossed legs and spoke through gritted teeth, "Elisa didn't even chase me out just now. Who are you to do that?"

Rachel was so furious that she didn't want to speak another word to him. She turned around and stormed into the kitchen. Anger doesn't do you well. There's no need to be upset over such an idiot. I will just ignore him – that's the perfect solution!

She washed her hands and took out some ingredients from the fridge.

If one knows how to cook, one never has to starve. Vincent probably doesn't know how to cook. Even if he does, I will never ask him to do so. I can't afford to owe him a favor — he'll use that to threaten me in the future!

Silence resumed in the living room. With a dark expression, Vincent stopped looking at his phone and occasionally shot sullen glances at Rachel while gritting his teeth.

Before entering her room, Rachel overheard Vincent's outburst and felt a strong urge to tear him apart.

She managed to stop herself and walked into her room. I can't take things seriously with an idiot.

Otherwise, I'm also an idiot! Vincent really helps with losing weight. I'm not hungry now, and I have no appetite at all!

Meanwhile, Vincent was feeling irate downstairs.

That damned woman! It's been so long since she ate something. She must be hungry!

He suddenly stood up and gritted his teeth.

Gareth looked at him coldly and sneered, "Who told you to eat her food?"

Vincent couldn't stand his best friend's sarcasm anymore and snorted coldly.

Rachel would usually follow Elisa's lead, but not the other way around.

Vincent was delighted to see Gareth become silent upon hearing that.

"So, are you going?"

Gareth's face darkened as he called Elisa's phone number.

It was still off.

He looked grim, but he didn't make a move.

Vincent crossed his leg nonchalantly. "See? You have to go to her personally."

Gareth looked at him coldly. "I can make Rachel come down, and Elisa will follow her."

All of a sudden, Rachel's appetite returned. I'm going to eat three servings of everything!

Elisa merely remained silent beside her.

Though she didn't want to see Gareth, she didn't want her to worry her friend.

Hence, she accepted Rachel's invitation and walked down with her.

She knew that she had to eat something for a quicker recovery.

I'll ignore the men downstairs.

After washing their hands, she sat at the dining table, along with Gareth and Rachel, who was speechless when she saw Vincent taking the cutlery.

"Are you a pig? You've eaten so many meals in a day. Even pigs eat less than you!"

He pretended not to have seen Gareth's gaze and quickly looked away.

On the other hand, Elisa could have gotten someone else to change the bandage for her if they didn't arrive at her place. Since they were already there, she didn't bother contacting someone else, so they didn't have to meet each other.

After waiting for a while, the doctor arrived.

To Elisa's surprise, it was the same doctor from the day before.

Which means Gareth asked her here.

She looked at him subconsciously.

"It's better for the same person to handle your injury," he said calmly.

To him, she was more headstrong and stubborn than independent.

But... she has never asked me for any help. I have to think of the obstacles she might face.

His frown deepened.

Rachel couldn't help exclaiming, "It must hurt a lot! Even though I've never experienced this – I've only been through less severe injuries – I couldn't take it already. Yelling out loud might alleviate the pain."

The doctor was silent, allowing them to talk freely to distract Elisa from the pain. She was also trying to be gentle with cleaning her wounds to minimize the pain as much as possible.

Elisa smiled and replied gently, "Don't worry. I'm fine."

From her expression, it seemed like she wasn't feeling any pain at all.

Vincent's face darkened. "What are you staying for?" Trying to suppress his anger, he mouthed silently, "Are you happy with being a third-wheeler here? Do you want their relationship to be tenser?"

He slowed down his speed as he mouthed the words. Though Rachel didn't fully understand, she froze after getting the gist.

Looking conflicted, she thought, Should I stay or should I go? It doesn't seem appropriate for me to stay. But if I go, Elisa will be here with Gareth alone. What if he does something to her? On top of that, she is still wounded. Gareth is obviously an expert. No one can stop him if he sets his mind on something.

Her faltered expression brought hope to Vincent. However, before he could continue, Rachel replied, "No, I'll stay here tonight – Elisa is injured. It's inconvenient for you guys to take care of her, so I'll do that instead!"

Vincent's face darkened. He thought Rachel was brighter than that, but she was still quite dumb.

Gritting his teeth, he retorted, "Why do you have to worry when Garreth is here?"

"Garreth is the reason why I am staying, I don't trust him!" Rachel blurted out straightforwardly.
