Chapter 981 I'm Embarrassed Too!

Elisa stilled and turned to him slowly.

Realizing that he had a chance, Norman breathed a sigh of relief. "Let's go have a meal together. It's just a simple meal. I'm not going to hurt you."

Rachel glanced at Elisa worriedly. Sensing that Elisa was tempted, she smiled, "What a coincidence! I'm hungry too. Can I tag along too?"

Charli smiled widely. "Me too! I'm starving. Can I come too?"

Norman's expression soured. He wanted to have a private conversation with Elisa.

He was about to turn them down when someone interrupted him.

"You're all right. I haven't had anything to eat all day. Mr. Benett, you wouldn't mind another person coming, would you?" The man's voice was low and gravelly. His teasing tone caught Norman off guard.

He had no problem rejecting Charli and Rachel.

Though there were grudges between them, everyone knew how it all began.

Knowing that Vincent wouldn't hurt Rachel, Elisa walked ahead with Charli.

As they walked further, Rachel burst out anxiously, "Hey, can't you tell me later? I'm going to eat with Elisa. Didn't you say you were hungry?"

Vincent let out a cold snort. "Stop panicking – they are right ahead of us. It's Norman who wants to meet Elisa, who calls the shots now. There's nothing to worry about."

Rachel also laughed frostily. "She's my best friend. Of course, I care about her! And..." She snorted coldly. "Aren't you best friends with Gareth? It's because of him that you agreed to meet Norman today. Now that Elisa has left, why are you still defending her? I'll wait to see how Gareth deals with you later!"

Vincent's already sour mood was exacerbated by her words, making him speechless in anger. He couldn't help but let out a bitter laugh in response to the situation.

Charli said amusedly, "It won't come up so quickly."

Rachel replied through gritted teeth, "Norman and his family are simply too much! How could they harm innocents for their own financial gains? I can't wait to expose them to the world so they can be humiliated by everyone. I hope the law will punish them. I don't understand how they can stay alive for so long – it pisses me off!"

Rachel's eyes were filled with rage as she hoped for the family of three to drop dead.

Charli nodded in agreement. "Don't worry. I'm sure they will never escape from the law. God will punish them eventually."

Sitting in the front seat, Elisa smiled when she saw how furious and worried Rachel was for her.

"Don't think about it anymore. I won't let them off the hook. At this point, they can't do anything to me either."

As Vincent drove away, Rachel rolled her eyes in his direction. "He's gone nuts," she complained irritably.

Elisa tried to hold a smile back without intending to burst the bubble. If she said too much, it would make Rachel uncomfortable. It was better for them to fight between themselves.

"Let's go." With that, Elisa pulled Rachel and Charli with her.

When they entered the restaurant, Norman and his family were already there.

A morose air hung among them. It was clear that they didn't have a good time discussing things before this.

The moment Norman saw Elisa and her friends, he frowned. "Didn't Mr. Shane come with you?" he asked.

Elisa smiled at Linda mockingly.

"Do you think I heard it?"

Linda glowered at her with widened eyes that were not from shock but anger.

Is she deaf? How could she not hear that? I was just trying to bring her to her senses. How dare she say something like that? How is this b*tch so thick face?

Just when Linda was about to reply, Rose quickly laughed as a warning to Linda, who let out a cold snort in annoyance.

Chapter 986 How Ludicrous

Though Norman was filled with rage, he decided to rein his feelings in. When the waiter entered, he took the order and left right after.

The rest of the people remained in the room.

Norman knew he had to bring back the topic that was interrupted moments ago. Otherwise, it would defeat the purpose of being here.

Even though many people were in the room, they were all Elisa's allies.

Rose didn't want this situation to continue any further. After all, they would have to talk about this topic sooner or later.

If they didn't clear the air regarding this topic, they couldn't proceed further – Rose knew this well.

There was an implicit sequence to talk about matters. Even if the subject wasn't brought up, Elisa would point it out anyway.

Hence, Rose nudged Linda's leg under the table to remind her to stay calm.

If everything had been as smooth as before, Linda would have been able to play her part well. However, now that she had experienced so much, there was a massive change in her personality.

Norman's expression immediately changed as he interjected, "Ms. Markee, that's not the case at all."
Rachel let out a loud huff. She wanted to mock them back, but upon second thought, she remained silent.

On the other hand, Charli ignored Norman and looked at Elisa gently. "Let the dead rest in peace.
Sometimes, it's even more melancholy if we know too much. Why don't we give the matter a rest?"

Norman was thunderstruck when he heard that.

The fact that Elisa is willing to meet us shows how badly she wants to know the information – I'm not

After the waiter left the room, they were left on their own again.

Elisa's patience was utterly depleted at this point.

Looking at how Rose and her family wanted to continue the topic, she ignored them and started eating.

Vincent looked at her briefly before following suit. How does she have the appetite to eat? Sure, I'll eat something too.

Rachel and Charli did the same. Let's dig in. We're here for the food, after all!

Norman's face darkened. He had never indicated to them that it was okay to start eating, yet they acted on their own accord without minding their manners.

Norman shook his head with a sigh as he started getting emotional. "This is really–"

He thought he could bond with Elisa over this, but she cut him off before he could finish his sentence.

"I don't have time for your emotional nonsense. Please get straight to the point."

Annoyed and surprised, Norman tried to suppress his anger.

Knowing he was not in the mood to continue, Rose quickly interjected, "Oh, Elisa. Don't be mad at us."

This time around, she didn't dare to beat around the bush. "Before your father died, he entrusted this to us, asking us to pass it to you."

Elisa's gaze flickered. Before Dad passed, he also told Gareth the same thing. Did he tell them something more?
