Chapter 991

Elisa bit her lips unknowingly as grief swallowed her whole.

Each time, the thought of her father would stir up waves of emotions. She always felt she owed everything to him.

Dad and I wouldn't be in this situation if I weren't obsessed with that useless romance! If I had kept an eye on Norman and his family, we wouldn't reach this point!

The look on Elisa's face cheered Linda up. Finally, it's time for her to be upset! She usually seems so unperturbed and serene, as though nothing could upset her. I can't even find her weakness! It's finally time to enjoy watching her suffer.

Linda took in a tiny breath, focusing on Elisa, so she didn't miss a thing.

Rachel wanted to throw up from watching the scene before her. A scoff escaped her lips.

"Be good. I'm going to go now. I love you."

Those were Elisa's father's last words.

Elisa felt a crushing sensation in her heart but did not want to express her vulnerability.

Rose waited for Elisa to say something, but all she was met with was silence. She decided to comfort her again, "Elisa, I know it's hard, but he's gone now. You..."

Elisa suddenly raised her head and met her gaze with cold eyes. Rose felt a chill run down her spine, and she forgot what she was about to say. Rose could feel the murderous intent in Elisa's piercing gaze. She feared she would be dead the next second.

Linda got up and followed Elisa with distress in her eyes. She stopped and grabbed hold of Elisa's arm when she saw her hand on the doorknob. "Elisa, where are you going? The toilet? You don't need this many people to go with you. I'll go with you!"

Elisa flung her hand away and pulled the door open without a second thought.

"Elisa!! You can't leave! We're not done yet! We've given you the recording and kept our promise; you should repay us!" Elisa begged with wide and jittery eyes. Though in her mind, she was cursing Elisa out.

"What should we do?" Even Rose was fretting. She would never have made such a comment but thought about the next course of action. But now, she did not know what to do. This was their last resort. Not only did Elisa reject it, but she became angrier upon hearing the recording!

What do we do now?!

"We shouldn't have played the recording!" Linda said while chewing on her lip.

Norman started the car and said through gritted teeth, "It doesn't matter if we played it for her or not. Things have come to this!"

"No! I want to call that secretive person!" Linda shouted.

Norman furrowed his brows but said nothing.

Rose did not support Linda's idea but did not know what else she could do. She exhaled deeply. "Try calling her. You must hold a high value to her if she's willing to use you. She wouldn't want to watch your downfall. It might be a loss for her if our family falls."

"What do I do? She wants me to tell the truth! She won't deal with us if I don't!!"

Rose's expression was indescribable as she stayed silent. She did not know what to do.

Norman felt fury bubble in his chest as he drove. He felt the urge to run over some people to extinguish the rage within him.

"We should tell her if we don't have a Plan B. She can't do anything to us at the moment." Linda said after some contemplation.

The woman moaned with her eyes closed, pleased with his movements. The man did not stop.

However, the woman started talking, "Linda's family is not subservient to me. They still think about themselves first when I give them orders. They're not immersed in revenge. They will end up hating Elisa even more without my help."

"Will you... help them in the end?" The man was surprised by her thoughts.

"I've seen the evidence Elisa submitted. It would only implicate one person, and I'm guessing it will be Rose Meek."

"Why?" The man paused in his actions but quickly resumed his path to her lips.

The woman lay down and hugged the man's neck. She had a bitter smile on her lips. "One person is enough. They can chase down the related persons after. Rose has done so much for the family; she wouldn't watch her husband and daughter go to jail."

Rachel and Charli's eyes glazed as they stared at the ever-changing lines of numbers on the screen.

"Oh my goodness! My head's spinning from looking at all those numbers! She's crazy!"

Rachel whispered to Charli as she did not want to interrupt Elisa. Charli nodded in admiration.

Although she and Elisa had always been in contact, they kept their topics strictly within their jobs as lawyers. She did not know Elisa was an infamous hacker that went by the name Black-Eyed Susan. She was flabbergasted when she first learned about Elisa's alter-ego; this was her first time seeing her in action.

The dark cloud overshadowing Vincent's face dispersed as he drove. He was mesmerized by the laptop on Elisa's lap. He finally pulled over at the side of the road and said, "The car moving will interrupt the signal. Finish up first."

Elisa nodded without saying anything. She was wholly focused on the screen in front of her.

Everyone agreed to his suggestion quietly. The car began moving again.

Elisa was the same as usual. She wasn't upset even though she couldn't get any leads. She was sure she could get something from Linda.

Linda wouldn't rest well until she was dead. She was trying so hard to eliminate Elisa because her existence impacted the mastermind hiding in the shadows.

The car moved in silence, and Vincent dropped them at their respective houses and offices.

Rachel was the last to get off.

Seeing Vincent's troubled expression, Rachel offered, "You don't have to send me back; I'll take a taxi."

She couldn't stand being in his presence any longer. He was always finding ways to bully her.

Vincent's anger suddenly dissipated. He enjoyed controlling her.

"You...!"

Rachel inhaled and calmed herself.

Vincent scoffed, "I never wanted you to be indebted to me. Do you even have that sentiment?"

Suddenly, his anger inflamed again.

"I don't have that sentiment toward dogs!!" Rachel retorted.
