

Read Novel No Longer Your Luna By A. Vitiosis Chapter 9

Chapter 9 R.E.D

Amethyst Phoenix R.E.D An organisation created by the Phoenix bloodline, specifically designed to create lethal weapons. Kaden provided a brief backstory on how it was established, supposedly my great, great, great grandfather Max built the organisation in order to protect our bloodline and the pack from extinction. The four founding families attempted to assassinate his son and daughter who were between the ages of five and seven during the full moon. That when he realized that having a simple treaty wouldn't absolute the threats they carry, being number one came at a price. R.E.D exists only in the Blood Moon pack, it evolved into a business where we hunt vampires, faes, witches, etc. It has earned a reputation and the rest of the families are afraid to attempt another assassination because we could easily wipe their entire pack off the face of the earth. The training is intense and brutal according to Sage and Callen. I anticipated that since this is the deadliest pack we are talking about. Kaden went in-depth about how it is essential to train our human body. The skills that I will be taught in R.E.D can only be accomplished with the use of our human side more than our werewolf side. Some of us tend to rely solely on our werewolf and that's also leaves us vulnerable in our human state. We could be injected with Wolfsbane and be rendered completely useless because we don't know how to defend ourselves in our human form. There is training for our werewolf side but that's only after we have trained enough to be able to defend and attack in our human skin. D Kaden took us out of the busy town. Yes, this pack built an entire town with malls and some of the pack members even have jobs in local stores. It took us over half an hour to reach our destination, deep within the forest and concealed by the thick, tall trees. It is a three-story building, black double doors immediately opening as Kaden reached the top of the stairs. The interior was simple, dozens of people situated in square compartments with a computer in front of them. Papers scattered all over there desks with colourful graphs. "The pack has multiple businesses that are taken care off in here, we have various locations all over the world and investments in stock markets" Kaden recites. "What's stock markets?" I quiz. "I'll explain it when we get home" Bypassing the pristine suited people, it seemed to be ages before we hit an actual white wall. Shifting my attention to Sage and Callen, clearing in need of answers. "Shouldn't we turn back?"

Callen laughs, the silver dripping into his pupils as he smiles. "I love these reactions" Kaden places his hand flat against the left corner and swipes his hand across the smooth surface, all the way to the right corner. Honestly, anyone would think he was an idiot by that simple action. That's not the case in this pack, the wall suddenly splits in half and pulls away to showcase another lengthy hallway coloured dark grey. The awe is written all over my face because Kaden actually laughs at me, those sapphires twinkle with amusement and a smile graces his lips for the first time since I met him. The simple action brought an intense pounding in my chest, my heart knocking on my ribs as if his smile was the most precious thing in the world. I'm simply a delusional teenager. Yeah, that's it. It will pass. A whooshing sound escapes Callen lips as he takes lead. "It's like the matrix" "Matrix?" All three of their heads swivel to focus on me, surprise and sympathy flashing in their eyes. Kaden's features quickly turn to ice. "You don't know about the Matrix movies?" Shaking my head. "It's a cult classic, don't you watch movies?" Sage asks. "Not really. We had a box television set and hardly anyone cared to watch it since the connection was bad and only documentaries would be played" That really goads the opposite of what I wanted, its pity in their eyes. Kaden remains cold but Sage and Callen are practically a fountain. Coming to the Blood Moon pack only opened my eyes to how horribly we were treated in the Stone Heart pack. This pack cared about their people, provided for them, and protected them. My old pack didn't care about their members, only about the money they could harvest for themselves.

The Blood Moon pack is unmatched, their first priority is their people and that's what makes them all happy to stay here. "I am declaring that every Friday will be movie night. It will be mandatory that you all attend, and we will start with the classics" Sage declares, swaying her hips as she leads. Suddenly turning back, pointing her finger at Callen and then Kaden. "You cannot back out; we will have movie night no matter what you are doing!" I was surprised by her tone and yet Kaden and Callen weren't even the least bit phased, walking ahead of her. "I'm down as long as there's food" Callen shrugs. "I'll make time" Kaden declares. This time, I wasn't moved because of Kaden. I was close to tears because movie night would make me happy, having experiences with friends. Reaching the end of the hallway, another shiny reflective wall in front of us. Callen placed his hand against a screen, a green flash ran across his palm and a beep filled the silence. The thick wall in front of us began to drop into the ground. A slight tremor vibrates through my body from the impact. I am met with a huge space; I'm talking like the size of the forest huge. Multiple people were rapidly typing upon their keyboards, the sound bouncing off the walls. Opposite us, the wall above these many people is a large screen. The outline of a map with green and red dots placed all around the world. "Is it your job to always leave me speechless?" I ask Kaden, indicating to the scene in front of us. "It can get overwhelming at first" Kaden answers and that's the last of the conversation before we start walking again.

All I seem to be doing today is cardio. Halting at a glass door, Kaden motions for us to step in and the room is empty. It's a training area, the black padding on the floor is stiff but not super soft. Wall – to – wall mirrors at all four corners. The scent of detergent, strong and giving me a headache. "This is our combat training room" Sage answers as I take in the area. "There are different rooms designed for different styles of training. This room is designed for hand-to-hand combat, hence the flooring and lack of weapons" Kaden motions.

There are bright lights above us, spotlighting the entire floor. It could blind anyone if they stared directly into it and that's probably done on purpose. "I will give you a demonstration. Callen, Sage" Kaden instructs. Kaden positions himself in the middle of the room and Callen grins, a dark cast clouding his features. He tosses the leather jacket onto the ground, giving me a perfect view of his muscles. He's not bulky like

Kaden, his muscles are defined and sculptured into fine art. Sage cracks her neck and I realize that she is also participating. "Isn't this a little unfair, two against one?" "Firstly, a fight will never be fair. You should always anticipate the worst" Kaden teaches. Sage laughs. "Trust me Amethyst, the two of us combined aren't enough to hurt him" Kaden doesn't move an inch as the twins circle him. Its thrilling, the adrenaline racing through my veins as I watch the fight unravel before me. The twins attack from both sides, Kaden uses his supernatural speed to move out of the way. Sage and Callen aren't deterred, with their own speed, punches are thrown. You wouldn't be able to see it with the human eye, but we are supernatural creatures after all. It comes at every angle; I'm surprised that Kaden can keep up and easily block every attack. I should be afraid; I should be scared that my new friends are fighting but I'm completely enthralled. Its captivating, each way their bodies move to attack or defend. Its magnificent, like an out of body experience. All that kept playing through my mind is that 'I want to be able to do this'. Jade is giddy with excitement. 'It looks like so much fun' 'Yes, it does' I smile. Sage drops to the ground, attempting to slide her leg underneath Kaden. He grabs her ankle and front flips, making Sage land on her face. Callen comes at him with his fist, Kaden grabs his forearm and twists Callen's own arm around his neck, choking him. "Fuck. Out" he taps against Kaden. The twins groan, clearly infuriated by there lose. I don't see it as defeat, they inspired me in a way. Craving to be able to fight like that, with precision and calculation. D Sage and Callen are strong and fierce warriors. I want to be one of them. "You will begin training in hand-to-hand combat for the first few months. When you have mastered the fighting styles, we move onto weapons" I nod eagerly, completely entrapped by this newfound fighting style. "I'm so ready" The twins chuckle. "You aren't"

"But you will be" Kaden finishes.