Chapter 166

Allison was observing the two brothers talking with each other. She felt relieved that at least they were having a conversation. However, as she watched Ryan walk away from Ethan, she focused her attention on Ethan. She saw him ordering another drink as though he were becoming agitated.

"What did they talk about that made him angry?"

As she looked around, she noticed that people were beginning to dance in the empty space in the center of the room. Music was played to let them enjoy the dance and the party.

After a short while, Ethan walked away from the bar area and approached Allison.

"Let's dance."

All of a sudden, he said and extended his hand toward her.

"But you love him more."

"What are you saying, Ethan? I think we should stop danci-"

Allison stopped her legs from moving. "Other people? Our hearts? What are you saying?" She asked him with a shocked tone.

It was quite evident that he was referring to both her and himself when he made the statement.

"No, I want to know. I need to know how other people were able to enter our lives and grab our

Who grabbed his heart in such a short time?

Suddenly, the music changed, and all of the couples drew closer to one another in a circle.

It was the time when people could change their dancing partners by swirling them around.

"Etha-"

After she had turned, another person caught hold of her wrist. Her upper body collapsed onto the hard chest, but her legs continued to move slowly in time with the music.

Before Allison could ask Ethan, he twirled her around and let go of her wrist.

"It's okay. Sometimes, people make mistakes like this. But they should remember the consequences. Don't you think so, Allison Clark?"

She moved away from him and walked to Ethan. She seized his hand, and they came to a halt in their dancing.

Allison stepped back. Her eyes could not get wider.

Ethan acted like he was lost somewhere and had just come to his senses.

"I am sorry, I forgot to swirl her." He muttered to her.

During that time, Elora turned her gaze away from Ethan and glanced at Ryan, who was staring at
