

Chapter 292 He Lost His Wolf 1

Rose went back to her home without having breakfast in the pack house. She told the driver that she didn't want any help from Alpha Arvan.

She took a cab and went back home.

She locked herself in her room and cried a lot. 'Why did I believe in him again? Why???? Every time I believed in him, he broke my trust. But still, I dared to believe in him. How foolish I am!'

She threw everything she saw in front of her. Tears kept streaming out from her eyes.

'This is my fault, Alpha Arvan, that I have trusted you, I have left my heart just for you. You broke my heart a lot of times but you were the closest to me. I thought you were my only destiny now. I thought I would forgive you, but it is my fault that I have relied on you.

How much I love you, I have always loved you more than I wished. I thought you broke up with your girlfriend for me. But you just used my body last night. Because, if you had any feelings for me, you would not leave me alone today.

Last night I thought there was no pain left in my heart, nor any space. I felt my every desire was fulfilled that I had got you back into mine.

But what did you do today, Arvan Black?? You have broken my last hope and killed my every expectation. You shattered my heart once again.'

Rose cried the whole day alone without sharing her pain with anyone.

---

Arvan was in the forest.

He woke up early in the morning. He kissed Rose's forehead and lips. Then he told the maids and driver to prepare breakfast for her and drop her home.

When he went to the forest for a run. When he got there, he felt strange. He shut his wolf last night so he could not mark Rose. She was not in her right mind and she might have felt regret when she woke up.

He called his wolf.

"RV."

RV didn't reply to him. He called him again. "RV. I am sorry that I had to shut you inside. I could have marked her but she would only hate us for that."

RV still didn't reply to him. Arvan thought his wolf had been angry with him. So he told him, "Don't be angry with me. We love her, right? It was only for her. She suffered a lot of pain for me. I didn't want to give her any more pain."

When Arvan saw that RV didn't reply to him about anything. He started to run and wanted to shift. But when he tried to shift, he felt fierce pain in his heart.

"AAHHH"

He groaned loudly. He bent down on the ground and clenched his chest. He was feeling unbearable pain in his heart. He never felt this pain in his whole life. Last year he fought in the war and got injured in the battle. He had to take a rest for one year. That time he was in pain, but that was nothing in front of how he was feeling right now.

"RV"

He shouted for his wolf but no one answered him. Tears rolled down from his eyes. If anyone saw him like that they could not believe in their eyes. Alpha Arvan and tears fitted in totally opposite sentences.

Arvan tried to stand up but again fell to the ground. From time to time, the pain increased in his heart.

He understood what was happening to him. He shook his head. "No No No. Fuck! You can't leave me, RV. You are my everything. The real Alpha is you. The true blood. I am just a human. You can't leave me like that. What about our pack?"

He was talking with his wolf as if he was hearing him.

"You said right. It was my fault that I didn't accept my mate. Please RV. I have understood my mistake. Please come back to me, don't leave me."

He tried to stand up and this time he could. With the pain, he went to a house that was forbidden for others to go there.

He knocked on the door. The door opened and before he could say something he fainted in pain.

When he woke up, he was in a bed in a dark room. He sat up and felt empty inside him. He looked around the dark.

"Alpha, finally you woke up."

"Caroline,"

Caroline came to him and helped him to stand up. "You take a shower and freshen up yourself. I will cook something for you."

Caroline was much older than him but she was a high ranked witch, so she looked much younger than her age.

After taking a shower, Arvan came out and went to the living room. He sat on a chair in front of a small wooden table.

Caroline came with the soup. "Drink the soup. It is good for your health." She said and served him the soup. She didn't sit but stood there.

"Sit down," Arvan ordered.

Caroline nodded and sat in the opposite chair.

After drinking the soup, Arvan looked outside from the window. It was dark outside. He was unconscious for a whole day.

He turned to Caroline. She was silent from the start as if she was scared.

"What happened to me?" Arvan asked her.

Caroline looked at him. "Al-Alpha."

"Stop stuttering and speak clearly. What happened to RV?"

"Alp-Alpha di-did you get any chance to mark Rose?"

Arvan raised an eyebrow and nodded.

"I told you Alpha you don't have much time but you didn't listen to me. Why didn't you mark her immediately? After marking, she would accept you, by hook or by crook."

"And?" Arvan asked. He just asked a simple question but this older woman twisted every word and gave him a speech.

"Alpha-"

"I lost him. Right?" Arvan asked suddenly.

Caroline widened her eyes but looked down immediately.

"I am sorry, Alpha." She said.

Arvan stood up and said, "It's not your fault, why are you sorry? It was my fault that I didn't even think about her before her rejection. She lost her wolf and felt this pain for me. Now it's my consequence time. I have to bear it for my whole life. It's my punishment. I understand."

He was indifferent so Caroline could not say what was happening inside him or what he was thinking.
