Chapter 93

Allison avoided looking at Ryan by averting her gaze. She gave a slight nod of her head.

"Yeah. But not because of you, okay?"

He chuckled when he heard her. He moved back and shook his head.

"When did I ever say to you that you did it because of me?"

"You don't have you, baby." He replied and smiled.

"I just clarified the fact."

She opened the door and got out of the car. She gasped when she saw where they were.

They were on a bridge that was across a river. She turned her gaze toward the sky. The moon was shining brightly, and the entire span of the bridge was illuminated by the light from the moon.

"Wow." She mumbled.

After exiting the car, he walked around to the front of the car and leaned against it.

"Come here."

She walked to him and leaned beside him.

She replied honestly as she stared at the river.

"Have you ever come here with anyone?" He asked.

"Maybe it's because I am an Omega. I can't even shift and run alone. My father forbade me to do that."

"No, in fact, I haven't gone anywhere much. My parents always told me not to go somewhere far."

Ryan stared at Allison. His eyes lightened when she was talking to him. He was observing her every motion.

"Why?"

The way she talked, the way she smiled when looking at the river, the way she was amazed by the moon, everything was captured by his eyes.

"How about you?" Allison asked.

He put one hand behind his head and lay on the car. His eyes were in the sky.

When she did not get any reply, she turned her head toward him.

He was looking at her intensely. She looked into his eyes. She tried to read his eyes but failed. He leaned forward and kissed her cheek.

She froze because of his actions and words. He moved and leaned his back against the car glass.

"What do you want to hear about me?"

"You are cute."

She glanced at him.

wolf?"

She came back to her senses and touched her cheek. She felt a tingling feeling that was still there.

"You will fall for me if you keep staring at me." He let out.

She looked away and sighed. 'It's good that he does not know about my feelings for him.' She

The more she looked at him, the more she fell for him. He was glowing under the moonlight.

When she fell, she landed on his chest. She raised her brows and stared at him with a stunned expression as she raised her head.

He took a firm grip on her hand and drew her closer to him.

"Lay down here. You can feel the wind and the beautiful nature together." She did not argue with him. She lay next to him. He looked impressed.

While he was speaking to her, he tucked some of her hair behind her ear and said,

"Excuse me?"

She rolled her eyes. "I am not listening to anyone. I wanted to see the moon, so I did that. By the

"I have never seen you talk to anyone with mind links."

"Because I don't want to contact anyone here."

"This is not my pack. This is not my world."

"What happened to your wolf?"

"What can happen to my wolf? Totally fine."

"Why?"

He shook his head, his eyes were still closed. If anyone passed them, they would say that he was

"Why?"

"I don't want to talk about them."

"What do you mean? This is your father's pack. So this is yours too."

"Somewhere very far." "Where did you use to live?"

She waited for his answer. But he kept quiet. She patted his chest. She thought he had fallen

She patted him once again, but he grabbed her wrist and opened his eyes.

She lowered her head. She was indeed very curious about him.

His other hand brushed her waist. It made her look at him.

"What are you saying?" She asked and looked into his eyes.

He moved his face toward her hair with a smile.

"You are very shy. I like it."

He lifted his head and came close to her face. She gulped and looked everywhere except into his eyes.

He removed his hand from her waist. She hit his arm, and he laughed even more.

"Stop teasing me. Tell me, where did you take me? What is this place?"

"You really thought I would do something to you?"

He leaned back and laughed while shaking his head and resting his head.

He sat up and replied,

"This is the place between two packs."

"I have never visited other packs." She mumbled.

"Oh." She let out and glanced at the two sides.

She felt his hand stroking her hair. She heard him,

Would you like to come with me?"

"Really? Then I will take you to visit one of the best packs.
