

Chapter 46 Dad

The man held back his emotions. In front of his daughter and son, he could not cry.

"Scarlet, what are their names?"

Scarlet took the children forward. Daisy looked at the man with some fear, turned her head, and jumped into the woman's arms, "Mom, is he really my dad?"

"Yes, it's Daddy. Daisy, be good."

Scarlet choked. The little girl then re-approached the man and called out in a low, timid voice, "Daddy."

Marcus's tears rolled down.

Leo stared at the man, and suddenly laughed.

Marcus leaned down and held the child in his arms, "Scarlet, thank you for making my life complete."

"How can it be complete when their father is still in prison?"

Scarlet raised her hand to wipe away the tears at the corner of her eyes and stared at the man, "Marcus, just come out. As long as you come out of prison, the former grudge we have is gone."

After all this, there is nothing more important than living in the moment and cherishing every second of life.

Marcus slightly leaned over, thin lips kissed the woman's forehead, "Scarlet, I will definitely come out. But you must promise me, no capriciousness, and even more so, no obtrusion."

"Especially not to find a stepfather for my baby boy and my beloved daughter."

"You must wait for me; five years will soon pass. And I will really redeem myself."

Scarlet's eyes slightly narrowed and suddenly smiled, "Five years, do you know what it means for a woman?"

"And do you know that by insisting on staying in here, you will be missing out on the most precious childhood of your children?"

"The children were born without a father, and now that they have one, you still want them to grow up without a father around?"

Marcus's eyes dimmed a little, "But that's what I owe you."

"Owe me..."

At that, Scarlet muttered, and the mockery in her eyes grew deep, "Fine! You owe me!"

Does this man, really think that if he stays inside the jail, he can pay back what he owes her in this life?

"Daisy, stand here. Leo, you too."

When Scarlet suddenly spoke, the children stood in front of Marcus and meekly bowed three times.

"Scarlet, what are you doing?" Marcus's eyes widened in confusion.

"I see that their father doesn't want to be with them, and it might be more appropriate to say goodbye this way."

Scarlet's eyes flashed with determination, she stared at the man, word by word with slow certainty, "Marcus, goodbye."

The man listened, somehow, there was some strange feeling in his heart.

In some time, she will surely come to visit him again with her children, so why make the atmosphere so sad?

Until Scarlet left with the children, Marcus was still immersed in that strange feeling.

When the prison guard led him back to his ward, he couldn't resist saying a few more words, "Mr. Newman, a man must have a family. No matter what you do, or where you are, as long as you know your wife is waiting for you at home with your kids, you will definitely find your way home. If the mother is gone, the family is also scattered..."

The guard's words were like a bang on the head, he finally understood the meaning of her goodbye!