

One Night Stand With The Uninvited Wolf President

Chapter 144 A Blind Date

Ceres did not fall asleep and stared at Johnny's face all night.

Looking at the man, she remembered the first time she had seen him after arriving in Evian Town.

She realized he was awake when she sponged his body, massaged him, and even crawled into his bed on rainy nights!

She thought about all the past with the "bodyguard" as if it happened yesterday.

As her medicine was taken away by the bodyguard, she always felt sorry for him, but she didn't expect that everything was designed by him!

Her heart was violently paining.

She trusts him completely. She regarded him as a belief so that she would believe everything he said, but in the end, she found that everything about him was not real.

Being tricked, she felt so stupid.

She was fooled by a man!

It was said that women in love were stupid, but Ceres always thought she was a smart person, but when did she become so stupid?

She probably became that way when she fell in love with him.

Johnny got up and looked at her, while she continued to pretend to sleep.

He brushed her tousled fringe and kissed her forehead, thinking the matter would soon be settled.

Then he got up quietly and even went to another bathroom to wash up for fear of waking her up.

When he left, she just sat up. She wanted to question him, but she was afraid of getting an answer she couldn't accept.

Johnny went to the company to find Ceres's real father. According to Sally, that man should be a powerful person or a rich person.

But the clues Sally provided are too broad and vague because there are too many rich people.

Sitting opposite Johnny, Bob shook his head and said, "Johnny, this is too difficult. We only know that there is a car, but not its model and number plate. And we just know it's a very luxurious hotel but not its name. As there are so many people in the center of City M, where should we look for him? If he was just a passer-by, we'd have to search the whole country, wouldn't we?"

For the first time, Bob found the investigation so difficult.

"Take your time. Let's investigate City M first. I'll ask Sally to recall more details." said Johnny.

Bob saw Johnny was energetic, so he had to cheer himself up too. He said, "Johnny, I don't think it's necessary to find that person. Why bother like this? We just need to know that George is not Ceres's real father. Besides, her real father probably doesn't want to know about her. Maybe he already has a family and doesn't want to have an illegitimate child. You know what I mean."

If the man was very rich, as Sally said, he must come from a wealthy family.

While there was much strife in a wealthy family, and an illegitimate child would upset its balance.

Bob thought Johnny did not expect Ceres to compete for her real father's property, so they did not need to find that person.

"No, we must find him! And he must know about Ceres too!"

Johnny said with unwavering eyes, determined that he must help Ceres find her real father.

He knew that the closest person to Ceres over the years was George, but if she was told the truth that George was not her real father, she might not be able to accept it. However, if her real father was found out, the situation would be different.

"Well, I'll try again," Bob caved in.

"Ok, hurry up," replied Johnny.

Bob nodded and went out.

As soon as Bob left, Johnny received a phone call from Jack. In fact, he had ignored several calls from Jack's secretary asking him to go back to the Winsors' mansion.

Because he was in a "cold war" with Jack. If he compromised, he would lose, so he deliberately didn't go back until Jack was really anxious.

"You won't come back until I call you myself, will you?" said Jack with anger.

He couldn't believe he had to call Johnny in person if he wanted Johnny back!

"What do you want?" Johnny asked in a flat tone.

He knew that Jack probably wanted to talk again.

Since Jack called first, he had the upper hand.

"Be right back!" Jack commanded and hung up the phone.

Johnny thought for a moment and decided to go back to the mansion. As Jack called in person, he had to go back.

Johnny arrived at the Winsors' mansion in a short while.

As soon as he entered the mansion, Colin came forward and said, "Mr. Johnny, Mr. Jack is waiting for you in the drawing-room."

Johnny immediately went to the drawing-room.

Annie was sipping coffee on the sofa there.

She was a little angry for she had not seen Johnny at all for several days. Even if the Winsors was No. 1 in their country, she was obviously neglected by him.

She has descended from the British royal family anyway. Had she been born earlier, she would have been a princess.

A servant came in, put some desserts on the table, and said, "Miss Annie, please enjoy them."

While the servant was leaving, Annie called her and said, "Wait."

The servant stopped and asked, "Miss Annie, what else can I do for you?"

"I was asked to wait here for Johnny. Why hasn't he come yet? If he does not come, I shall go back to England," said Annie.

"Mr. Johnny has come back because his car is outside," the servant replied.

"Really? He's here?" Annie was overjoyed.

She was attracted to the man after seeing him in the photo.

The servant looked at the incense on the table and found that it was almost burnt out, so she hurried to it and said, "The incense will be burnt out soon. Let me replace it with a new one."

Then the servant stole a glance at Annie and found Annie was fixing make-up after knowing that Johnny was coming, not paying any attention to her words.

Taking the new incense from her pocket and lighting it, the servant immediately left.

After fixing her make-up and adjusting her clothes to make sure there was nothing wrong, Anne sat up straight with expectation.

Johnny knew he had been cheated the moment he went in. He found that his father did not want to talk but to find him a fiancée!

Seeing Johnny, Annie stood up and nodded to him slightly.

Johnny walked in and didn't want to offend her because the person chosen by his father definitely had no simple family background.

The servant hurried to Mary's room and said, "Mrs. Winsor, I have done what you told me to do."
