

One Night Stand With The Uninvited Wolf President

Chapter 171 Do Your Obligations as a Wife

Ceres came here with good faith.

Johnny was a man who only valued his work and the profit that came from it. This divorce file was definitely in favor of his interests.

Back in the day, Jack gave Ceres 5% of the company shares to help Johnny. But it was just a saying. In reality, it was Johnny who took control of the 5% shares.

And it was well written in the paper that the 5% of shares would belong to Johnny until Ceres became unable to support herself.

It was hard to define the degree of her being unable, so in this respect, it was equivalent to the idea that Johnny kept taking control of her 5% shares forever.

Ceres was not the same Ceres before. Who could have thought that! She was not only the director of the technology department of the Cosmos Group but also one of the major shareholders of Exquisite Restaurant. She could go out there easily and hire a lawyer to get back the 5% shares.

But the 5% shares mattered to Johnny! It was way more important to him.

Therefore, the divorce paper Ceres put on the table could be understood as a compromise or a threat.

If he didn't agree to the divorce, she would get her shares back. And then, his status at the Winsor Group would be on the line.

The future was hard to predict, but he might end up throwing himself into another chaos.

However, she did not aware of the fact that Johnny had left the Winsor Group. He was all against the group now.

Johnny looked at Ceres. He was lost with his words.

The woman he missed so much was sitting right in front of him, but he didn't know where to start, how to begin.

He kept looking at her. It seemed that she was on edge, and this made him hazy.

Bob handed out the information about her to him. It said that she was the technology director at the Cosmos Group, her annual income reached up to one million dollars, which came from her annual bonus, price money from successful sales, and dividends from the company.

Apart from that, she made a tremendous profit from the Exquisite Restaurant, which opened its first store in City M two years ago, became a sensation overnight, and had expanded significantly since then. The Exquisite Restaurant and its retail chains added up brought huge money for Ceres within a year alone. Ceres was a woman who was worth $100 million now.

"That was my woman! Just three years, her self-worth reached hundreds of millions!" Johnny thought.

"Johnny, are you listening to me?"

Ceres knew what he was thinking about. But she wondered why he keep looking at her since her arrival.

Johnny picked up the divorce paper, tore it apart, and tossed it right to the trash can.

"Johnny! What are you doing! Don't be ridiculous!"

Johnny smiled coldly, "You cheated on me, you came with this stuff as an honest offer? Nonsense! It is my piece of share."

"What did you say? Cheating on you?" she broke into sarcastic laughter, "Is it me or you? Don't act like you deserve better! Cheater! The one who betrayed our marriage is you!"

Ceres looked away. He caught her with someone the other day. "People can change but you, aren't they? You allow yourself but forbid others to do it the same way, don't you?" She murmured.

Johnny didn't know what to say. Ceres might misunderstand him the other day.

Just as he was about to explain, Ceres immediately cut in, "I have proven myself. If you don't sign the paper, that is fine! Let's meet in court. I will do everything I can to get my shares back. I think you know the results!"

Johnny sensed the coldness in her eyes, and swallowed what he was about to say, "Are you serious about this divorce?" he asked.

"Yes!"

Ceres said it out loud without any hesitation.

"You..." Johnny hit the table and stood up. His giant figure engulfed her like a tall tree.

Ceres raised too, "Why can't you just let go?"

He was going to get together with Annie anyway. Ending it now or later would make not much difference.

"So you want to marry him?"

Ceres was shocked to hear that. At first, she did not know who Johnny was talking about. And then it came to her that it might be Kirs that he was referring to.

"Yes!" Ceres shouted cruelly, "I just want to marry Kirs! Don't stand in the way, okay?"

As long as he signed the paper, it was worth all the lying.

Johnny was furious. Ceres was frightened to see him like that.

He walked over from behind the table and gradually made his way towards Ceres.

It was true, Ceres was afraid of him. Three years had passed but the voice in her head kept telling her to be submissive.

She still remembered the time when she called out him as an ancient emperor, even bowing to him.

She felt that way back then, she obeyed him wholeheartedly.

In her eyes, Johnny was her God, she could neither say no nor resist.

"Johnny, what do you want?"

Johnny pressed Ceres against the office desk, "You tell me!"

"You..."

"Since you understand the rules so well, why don't you be a good wife and let me be your husband for a while!"

As he spoke Johnny lowered his body and kissed her.

Ceres was startled at first. She began to protest. She bit his lips out of resistance.

Johnny was shocked by her move. But he began to kiss her harder and harder, oblivious to the pain.

Ceres's lips tasted like blood. But he couldn't stop.

Ceres stopped biting instead.

Once she stopped biting, Johnny came down on her even harder.

And kissed her out of his breath.

Ceres felt a suffocating pain in her chest. She became a new person now, but she couldn't say no to him, she even couldn't take herself away from the kiss!

She wouldn't allow that to happen!

She couldn't endure the pain anymore!

Lots of women might have filled her vacancy in the past three years. Ceres wanted to throw up.

Finally, she stopped resisting. Johnny had never touched any women in the past three years. But one kiss with her, he was on fire. It was difficult for him to stop.

"Stop acting like that, okay? You have no idea how much I've missed you," he said as he stroked her face.

Ceres gazed at him. Johnny put on his gentle self, but she could look through it.

She had seen it so many times.

And again.

He gave a slap in one instant and cajoled her in another second.

Old tricks.

She wouldn't allow herself to be treated like that again! No more trust, no more traps!

Ceres bit her lips and said, "I slept with Kirs."