

One Night Stand With The Uninvited Wolf President

Chapter 191 You Still Love Him

The two cars collided!

It was right in front of them!

Ceres felt a burst of fear. If there was any mishap, it would be their car colliding.

Markus patted his chest and said, "The car in front is retrograde, and the car behind overtakes us, otherwise, it will be us. Miss Ceres, we are lucky!"

Ceres frowned slightly as she recalled what Johnny had said on the phone.

He said let the driver change lanes!

"Johnny, are you still there?" Ceres hurriedly picked up his phone and found that it was still answering the call.

There was no sound at the end of the phone.

The next second, Ceres heard the police sirens on the phone. She saw a police car coming in front of her. The road was completely paralyzed and many people stopped to watch the scene.

At that moment, Ceres was suddenly a little panicked.

She said, "Markus, help me look after the children!"

Ceres got off directly. She almost stumbled to the front and pushed through the crowd.

The two cars were smashed beyond recognition and still smoking.

Ceres looked inside and saw Johnny, whose face was covered in blood!

She shouted, "Johnny! Wake up!"

Johnny did not move. When he heard Ceres, he slowly raised his eyelids. Unfortunately, he had not completely lifted them before they drooped down again.

The ambulance arrived.

Johnny was directly sent to the emergency room.

Ceres stood outside the emergency room with her arms around Swedum, her mind filled with what Johnny had said at the last minute of the call.

She thought, "Did his car always follow behind us? He told me to tell the driver to change lanes because he knew that there would be a car accident? But I did not understand what Johnny said, so Johnny directly chose to overtake us and collide the truck?"

If it was true, then Johnny was using his life to protect Ceres and Swedum.

Ceres did not dare to imagine it.

Swedum said, "Mommy, will daddy be all right?"

"No, daddy will be fine," Ceres said in a low voice, and she was not sure herself.

At this time, she remembered the car accident that had happened to Johnny, the bullet that Johnny had blocked for her, and the dagger that she had stabbed into Johnny's chest before she left.

Was he still able to withstand such torment?

Bob quickly walked in. When he saw Ceres, he hurriedly asked, "How is Johnny?"

Ceres replied, "I don't know yet."

Bob loosened his tie and punched the wall, "I was too slow. If I had been a little faster, it wouldn't have been like this."

Ceres said, "What's going on?"

Bob said, "Johnny knew that he was dealing with the Morris Group. Mike might be bad for you. He has always sent someone to keep an eye on Mike. Today, someone reported that Mike came out of the Winsors' house. Suddenly, there was something wrong with the route. Johnny was nearby. He saw Mike driving and following you."

"Johnny followed Mike all the time. Late, Mike changed his way. Johnny asked me to contact the transportation department to stop Mike immediately, but I was still a little late. Mike was so crazy."

Ceres confirmed her conjecture by Bob's words.

Mike wanted to take revenge on Ceres and Swedum. He wanted them to die. Johnny collided with the car to protect them.

"Mommy, daddy is trying to save us," Swedum looked at Ceres sadly.

Ceres stroked his little head, "It'll be fine. It'll be fine."

She seems to comfort Swedum with these words, but also seems to comfort herself.

The rescue was still going on.

Ceres called Nick and asked him to take Swedum away. Bob also specially asked people to send them back. At first, Swedum did not want to leave. He wanted to wait for his daddy to wake up. Ceres promised him that she would inform him immediately when he woke up. Only then did he reluctantly leave.

It was so long and desperate to wait outside the rescue room.

Bob sat next to Ceres, who was praying.

Bob looked at Ceres, who was muttering, and said, "In fact, you still love him, don't you?"

"No, I don't love him anymore." Ceres opened her eyes and shook his head stiffly.

Bob said, "You are lying. You can lie to others, but you can't lie to yourself. If you don't love him, why are you so afraid that he will die?"

Ceres said, "That's because he saved our lives. It's human nature for me to pray for him. Even if it's someone else, so am I."

Ceres's tone was still a little stiff.

She didn't want to have any contact with all people and things related to Johnny.

"He is the enemy who killed my father," she said, looking at the ground.

Bob said, "Johnny hasn't told you yet. I asked him to tell you the truth long ago, but he refused."

Ceres said, "What truth?"

"Alright," Bob took a deep breath, "I'll tell you everything today. If Johnny doesn't wake up today, it can be regarded as an explanation to him."

Ceres looked at Bob in disbelief. Was Johnny hiding something from her?

Bob said, "I investigated George's matter. I always believed that the things I investigated would not have any problems. George was a killer and came from an international organization named 9. He used to be very famous and had never failed in his career as a killer."

Johnny had mentioned this to Ceres.

Bob said, "I think Johnny should have told you about this. Whether you believe that your father is such a person or not, this is the truth. There are still many people looking for him internationally. The reason why he went to jail is to avoid those people."

"Maybe he wants to live for you," Bob looked at Ceres.

This was like Ceres's guess.

Bob said, "A killer has already put life and death aside, and George didn't hesitate to sit in prison for decades to live. That can only mean one thing. He has concerns, and that concerns you."

"The reason why he committed suicide was also for you."

Ceres said, "Shut up! Since you said that my father could endure decades of imprisonment for me, then why did he commit suicide? Isn't this self-contradictory?"

Ceres interrupted Bob rudely.

Bob said, "Because he wants you to be with Johnny. He must die!"

Bob shouted in a high-pitched voice, startling Ceres.

Ceres said, "I don't understand."

Bob said, "You should know about Johnny's mother's death when he was very young, right?"

Ceres couldn't figure out what this had to be with Johnny's mother.

"Johnny's mother had been assassinated."
