After the call ended, the news of “Absalom had an affair with Luna, but he was not the father of her child” spread like wildfire. Media outlets and social media influencers were going crazy with reposts and shares. The Internet exploded with gossip!

Several videos showed Absalom accompanying Luna to maternity check-ups, while Luna acted cute and sweet to him. They appeared to be quite intimate.

Previously, Luna gained fame online for a viral short video where she wore a traditional English gown while passing through the Emyrean Tower.

After that, the revelation of her being the daughter of the Woods family, coupled with her identity as the most beautiful girl of the Nilus University’s architecture faculty, garnered her even more fans.

strongly siding with Harmonia.

People understood the reasons behind the divorce. There was an outpouring of criticism directed at the cheating man and his mistress. It was a moment of satisfaction for her.

Harmonia cruised down the street in her Ferrari and blasted high-energy punk music on her way to the Nilus City International Trade Center.

The center consisted of six towering skyscrapers that were iconic structures in Nilus City. They were all privately owned by the Marsh family.

Upon arriving at the consortium building, she pulled aside at the grand and imposing entrance.

Mr. Smith, seeing the Ferrari pull up, approached with a cheerful smile.

Harmonia handed him the divorce certificate.

The next moment, Mr. Smith burst into genuine laughter. He quickly took out his phone and snapped pictures of the certificate from the front, the inside, and the back, as if it were some priceless treasure.

“Mr. Smith, is my brother back?”

“He just set foot on Nilus City soil just under an hour ago.”

“Is he in his office? I’ll go find him.”

Harmonia knew how much her brother, Hector Marsh, hoped she would come to her senses and give up that scoundrel, Absalom. She could not wait to show him her divorce certificate.

“Miss Harmonia!” Mr. Smith stopped Harmonia. “Mr. Hector is in the conference room. Today is the monthly shareholders’ meeting.”

At that moment, two employees were chatting in a low voice.

“Who knows what those old shareholders are going to demand at today’s shareholders’ meeting.”

“Last month, they wanted us to prepare sashimi and hand-brewed coffee for them.”

“They come here every month and always give Mr. Hector a hard time. What can he do? Everyone knows he’s an illegitimate child, and that makes him inferior in status.”

Mr. Smith was taken aback and quickly rebuked them. “What nonsense are you all talking about? Get back to work!”

The two employees lowered their heads and hurried away. As Mr. Smith turned around to speak to Harmonia, he found she had already taken off her oversized coat and tossed it on the table.

With a black tank top and tight-fitting pants and her long hair swaying with each step, she exuded an intimidating aura.

The aura left Mr. Smith momentarily stunned in place. He was so relieved that tears welled up in his eyes. He thought to himself. "The once awesome and formidable Miss Harmonia is back!"

Harmonia took the elevator straight to the meeting room.

She could hear the shareholders making mocking remarks from outside.

"Hector, being the illegitimate child of the Marsh family, the fact that you've managed to secure the position of CEO and get to where you are today is a favor bestowed upon you by me. So, you'd better not choose the wrong side!"

Thud!
