Chapter 140 A Married Woman

Milton's clothes had been drenched in the rain so he decided to change into another suit. After tidying himself up, he walked into the meeting room with confidence.

Milton's clothes had been drenched in the rain so he decided to change into another suit. After tidying himself up, he walked into the meeting room with confidence.

The meeting of the board of directors was ongoing. There was a huge and long table with prominent directors and notable shareholders sitting on either side of it. The CEO's seat at the very front was, naturally, reserved for Milton.

As he took his seat, he quickly asked, "So what's the reason for this meeting on such short notice?"
